Benjamin Chase Co., Derry Village, N. H.

Tulsa, Okla.—H. L. Royalty, proprietor of the East Side Greenhouse, is now recovering from a two weeks' siege of illness, brought about by ptomaine poisoning.

This Handy Hand Book contains 450 different things that every grower wants some time or other. Have one hanging handy where you can always put your hand on it. If you want another, one to have in your desk at the house, just say so and we will gladly send it.

Of Special Interest To Those Who Want to Buy Only a Few Dollars' Worth

Yesterday one of our salesmen got a whale of a jolt.

He called upon three growers who were building small sash bar houses of materials that were not ours.

None of the three had requested us to call or written for figures.

When asked why it was, each of the three said about the same thing.

They had the idea that "just because we happen to be a large concern and build so many large iron frame houses, we wouldn't want to bother with their little orders. Also that we were such a high class concern, thought they couldn't afford to pay our prices."

As you well know, all three are absolutely wrong.

We have more customers that spend from 10 to 100 dollars with us every year, than we have those who spend more than 500 dollars.

About 350 spend more than 500 dollars. But there are between three and four thousand who spend less.

These thousands buy anything from a single box of glazing nails or a keg of putty, to column fittings, heating fittings and little jags of cypress materials.

They buy them straight from our Handy Hand

Book, which, all told, contains 450 different things used for and in a greenhouse.

Everything from the smallest to the largest things a grower needs, is fully described in it, and in most cases illustrated.

The order department at our three factories has strict instructions to give immediate attention to the Handy Hand Book orders, no matter how small they are.

So far as possible, we try to ship the day the orders are received.

So important to us are these so-called small orders, that we couldn't stay in business without them.

So when any of you get a notion that we don't care to bother with your little orders, you are dead wrong.

If you use the Handy Hand Book like thousands of others do, you will not only get from us prompt and courteous attention, but year in and year out, you will save a lot of money. Next week we will have something to say about the prices of our houses.

It will be of interest to you all; but particularly so to growers having but little money and starting in a small way.

Who Is to Blame?

Last fall several owners of ranges had to suddenly change their growing plans, because of delays in finishing the overhauling of their heating.

Who was to blame?

A number of others—one a notably big range—came near losing their entire crop because of last-minute boiler trouble that the owners knew was likely to happen almost any time, and still had put off doing anything about.

Who was to blame?

You remember early last spring how we commenced urging florists to start in overhauling their heating systems the very day firing stopped?

You remember how a lot didn't do it, thinking that pipe and other things would be lower?

But they were not!

So they had to pay the price for pipe, besides the extra cost of a last minute rush job—which is always mighty expensive.

Instead of saving money, they actually gave a lot of money away, for which they got no real benefit.

So this season, the same as last, we urge growers to have their heating overhauled at once.

Send for us to come and look it over, make recommendations and submit an estimate.

After which, don't put off giving us the go-ahead order until the last minute and then expect us to do the impossible.

To Fair-Minded Florists—

You are the man that we want to drive home this message. This message of sincere, straight-forward facts on why AGMCO customers are always satisfied.

Service—AGMCO maintains a service department for the sole benefit of the grower, not just to give you an estimate and hope that we get the order. If there are any problems confronting you, write or come in to our nearest office and discuss it with us. We are only too glad to be of practical assistance to you. And then if we should get an order, our whole organization is in back of that job until it is completed to your satisfaction, and in the time specified.

Material—We figure on using the best quality iron and steel. All woodwork is of the finest clear cypress. Don't save in the beginning by using a poor grade of material. It will cost you more in the end.

Price—You will find our price lower than other greenhouse manufacturers when you consider the quality of material that our houses are made of. We wouldn't erect a cheap house if you asked us to, because our reputation is at stake. Our modern equipment enables us to produce materials at a minimum cost, and that is why we know the price is right.

If you are going to build, give us an opportunity to prove what we say. If you are in trouble, our service department wants to help you.

IT TAKES

Experience as well as a lot of knowledge to design a greenhouse properly and AFTER THAT it takes a well equipped factory to turn out the material to build the greenhouse. There are a thousand and one little schemes and wrinkles which are used in manufacturing a greenhouse. The average greenhouse man does not know about these and is apt to be misled.

When you buy from us you get the result of years of experience added to some real brains.

A. B. C. Winter Flowering Sweet Peas produced under high cultivation and thorough roguing by a California specialist.

POPULARITY

Winter Flowering Sweet Peas grown under glass have come into much prominence in the last few years, particularly, and good prices on the whole have been paid for them. To a large extent they have been displacing the Violet and to a lesser degree, but still appreciably, the beautiful Lily of the Valley. We predict a much greater demand for this popular flower in the future.

From the time of the beginning of the popularity of Winter Flowering Sweet Peas, we have spared no effort or expense to secure varieties which were best suited for the purpose mentioned and the colors and shades most taking with the general public. Many varieties of this type have been introduced within the past year or two, numerous of which have little or no merit.

Our Mr. Guy French, for thirty years connected with the Poehlmann Bros. Co. in their production departments, has for the past two years made a thorough canvass of the country on our behalf with the object of ascertaining "The Best" in "Early Flowering Peas." Also our Mr. John Degnan, for the past thirty-three years associated with the seed trade, has also made a special study of Sweet Peas for Florists, going at various times direct to the producing centers in California to inspect New and Promising Sorts.

We know that you desire to grow "The Best in Peas" and our "Supreme" quality is "Just That," seed that has been thoroughly rogued to insure True Type and carefully hand picked.

If you are not in possession of our "up to the minute" list of popular Early Flowering Sweet Peas, likewise valuable information pertaining to other seasonable seed and bulb items, a postal card will fetch it — WRITE TODAY.

BURPEE'S ORANGE

Burpee's New Winter Flowering Sweet Pea

For many years we had this color in view in our hybridizing work; for long it eluded us but at last we were successful, Burpee's Orange even exceeding in beauty our most sanguine ambition.

Burpee's Orange is in every way distinct from other so called orange varieties. There is no trace of pink or orange-pink in either standard or wings. It is a true glowing orange self, practically the shade of a bright ripe orange.

The rich glistening color compels attention in any light, but at night, under artificial light, it is indeed outstanding. Burpee's Orange has been proclaimed by experts and the press alike as being the greatest advance of many years in this type of Sweet Pea. In the opinion of many the vase of Burpee's Orange included in our Gold Medal Exhibit at The National Flower Show at Indianapolis, March, 1922, was the finest and most outstanding vase of Sweet Peas in the exhibition.

Burpee's Orange is a free grower, with flowers of largest size produced in threes and fours on stems of great length. The standard and wings are charmingly waved or crinkled. It is indeed a pleasure and also a privilege to be in a position to offer our friends and customers a variety of such merit—a variety of which we can all feel proud. Burpee's Orange was awarded Certificate of Merit at The International Flower Show, New York, March, 1921.

Burpee's Orange was greatly admired when exhibited this spring at The International Flower Show in New York. Some of the largest Sweet Pea growers who have seen Burpee's Orange on exhibition share our belief and assure us that the demand for Burpee's Orange will be tremendous.

Meritorious Novelties for the Season 1923

No Carnation grower, whether with an extensive range supplying the wholesale market, or with a little greenhouse growing for his own retail trade, should overlook the following four varieties. They will pay, and pay well.

MOTHER'S CARNATION

Pure White—By reason of the objection of the Mothers' Day Ass'n to the use of the name Mothers' Day, we have changed the name of this carnation to Mother's Carnation.

A decided novelty of superior merit. Perfectly hardy, a compact grower, stems requiring no staking. A most prolific bloomer. Fragrance unsurpassed. Field grown blooms averaging 2 to 2½-in. diameter. Truly a Carnation pot plant that will fill a long felt want. Just the plant for Mothers' Day and Decoration day. If you have the ground, it will pay you to plant a quantity in the Fall. Will withstand the severest Winter. Stock ready in October 1922 (this fall). Field grown plants, $20.00 per 100, $180.00 per 1000.

Rooted Cuttings, January and later deliveries, $12.00 per 100, $110.00 per 1000.

"BETTY JANE"—A. Jablonsky

Awarded S. A. F. and O. H. Silver medal, American Carnation Society, Hartford, Conn., January, 1922.

Also Silver Medal for the best 100 blooms of any undisseeded variety at the National Flower Show at Indianapolis, Indiana, March 28, 1922.

Grower's Description: "Betty Jane" is a seedling of White Wonder and Ward. Color: An ideal shade of Ward pink. The flowers are as round as a dial, 3¼-in. to 3½-in. diameter. Stem: Sturdy and wiry, holding the flower upright at all times.

A good, vigorous grower in the field and under glass; not subject to rot, and produces very few split calyxes.

An early bloomer, starting right after housing; free flowering and keeps on continuously throughout the season; produces a good proportion of cuttings on the flowering stem, which root easily.

It is a most excellent keeper, which also makes it a good shipper. Price, $12.50 per 100, $110.00 per 1000.

NATALIE—Joy Floral Company

Color, true rose (not rose pink); habit, vigorous; stem, medium to tall; size, medium to large, 3-in. blooms in November; calyx, long, does not burst; petals, broad; substance, firm; keeping qualities, good; blooming qualities, free and early.

Patten & Company, the well known Carnation specialists of Tewksbury, Massachusetts, who have a few thousand Natalie on their place, write us as follows:

"Natalie" has produced (32) thirty-two blooms per square foot to date (April 26th), averaging 3 in. in size with a good stem. This variety, which we have handled in a commercial way, has averaged just under eight cents per bloom from September 15th to date. The greater part of our production is sold through commission men, the above average being our net returns. Natalie is not an exhibition variety, but strictly commercial. Price, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

SURPRISE—

F. Dörner & Sons Co.

In color a trifle darker and the nearest approach to Laddie of any Carnation we know. A well grown flower of Surprise is nearly equal to Laddie and the combined size and color, in addition to its productiveness, will make it a close rival to that favorite.

Its popularity will be in—

1st. The easy propagation, strong growth, and shapely, upright plants.

2nd. The color, which is a more even shade of pink, and just a little darker than Laddie.

3rd. The very early and profuse flowering habit, equal to the best of the standard varieties.

4th. The large size, good form and commercial quality.

5th. The opening of the flower, which is quick and never bursts the calyx.

6th. The transplanting of the field-grown plants, which become quickly established and throwing very early flowering shoots in quantity and of surprising length.

7th. The quick growth in the field, with its early flowering habit, produces long, stiff stemmed flowers of a beautiful shade of pink, nearly equal to indoor grown. "Surprise" will be a paying proposition for flowering in the field. (Plants intended for benching should be kept topped and not let flower in the field.)

Price, $12.50 per 100, $110.00 per 1000.

And here is something really "worth while" for the Rose grower.

HILL'S AMERICA

THE E. G. HILL CO.

(Rose Premier x Hoosier Beauty)

Bud long and pointed; flower immense; strong in texture. A good keeper.

Foliage large, dark green; stems almost thornless and strong.

Resembles Columbia in its extraordinary, strong, quick growth and does not crimp the outer petals under any growing conditions; scores very high on form and size.

The color is a gorgeous rose-pink. Quite distinct; a fine addition to the "Big Rose" Class.

WHAT GROWERS WHO KNOW THINK OF IT.

"We think very well of this fertilizer, getting extra good results wherever used. We have been feeding the Rose beds in the greenhouse and like it better than any fertilizer we have ever used."

Yours respectfully,
W. J. PALMER & SON,
By B. S. Myers, Manager.

"For flowers it has no equal."
L. W. DAVISON,
Western Springs, Ill.

"It is a fine product, free from weed seeds, makeweights and chaff, and ideal in its fertilizing quality, stimulating, bacterial action and absolutely without fault."

W. H. MORSE, Hartford, Conn.

"During the past year, we have been using your Poultry Manure on Carnations, Mums and other stock with splendid success. As a top dressing for the Carnations we are carrying over into the second season, we have found it most excellent. We find that any crop which may be lagging somewhat in growth, can be quickly brought up to its normal stage by the use of your manure. We shall always keep a supply on hand."

Don't Be Caught Short

Without our patented cardboard Wreath Forms

Experience has shown us that most of our trade has paid too much for their Wreath Forms because they held back their orders until shipment had to be made by express. This increased the cost of the merchandise from 25 to 35 per cent. Besides, our customers lost business because they did not have the goods on hand—their customers would not wait when delivery could not be made at once. The profit on such specialties comes through having the goods on hand when wanted. It does not pay to approach the Christmas holidays with little goods on hand.

Therefore we suggest to you that you place your orders now for fall requirements in Christmas Wreath Forms.

Send for our line of samples of cardboard Wreath Forms as illustrated in this advertisement. Do it now. Prices and samples will be sent gratis on request. We make the following sizes:

Wreath Forms—4, 6, 8, 10, 12 and 16-inch.

Star Forms—4, 6, 7, 9 and 12-inch.

Heart Forms—5, 6 and 7-inch.

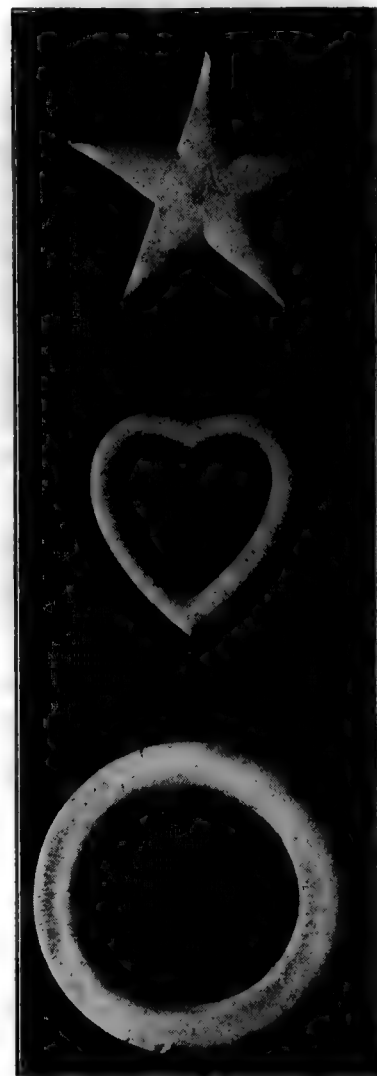

Cross Forms—14x21-inch and 18x30-inch.

Yes-you want automatic refrigeration-BUT "How much does it cost?"

All Lipman refrigerating machines are full-automatic. They require no attention other than occasional oiling and operate on a few dollars' worth of electricity per month. The Lipman creates dry, crisp cold and maintains any desired temperature. Positively prevents the spoilage of perishables. Ends ice expense forever. Pays for itself and earns a profit over the use of ice or other machines. Full information on request—no obligation.

A display Refrigerator like this is a good advertisement for you and for us.

At the National Flower Show at Indianapolis we exhibited a 10-ft. box of this type. It was purchased by Harold T. Coffman of Huntington, W. Va. Mr. Coffman came to Chicago last week and gave us an order for a 12-ft. box just like it for his new store to be opened at Portsmouth, Ohio. He also ordered a complete outfit of other fixtures.

At Indianapolis, in the Trade's Display the Judges were:

C. E. RUSSELL, of the Jones-Russell Co., who have the newest and finest flower store in Cleveland.

GEORGE V. WIENHOEBER, the widely celebrated and very successful Chicago Retailer.

W. ATLEE BURPEE, the famous Philadelphia seedsman.

These men know good work when they see it

They voted us the S. A. F. Certificate of Merit on the design and general construction of our Refrigerator.

Gentlemen:-

I want to let you know how thoroughly I am pleased with the fixtures you installed in my new store. You promised me one of the most attractive lay-outs in Chicago and I am pleased to say I got it.

The big display refrigerator has been in use long enough to prove to me it keeps flowers in good condition longer than any other refrigerator I ever had. I also have noted a decrease in the ice consumption.

I want to thank you for the prompt service given and to assure you that you are at liberty to refer any prospective customers to me. I never shall be too busy to say a good word for your work.

Very truly yours,
Fred Ronsley

WATCHING CREDITS AND COLLECTIONS

If you do not know Charles F. Boyle, you will want to read this article he has written for The Review when you learn he is president of Thomas F. Galvin, Inc., president of the New England Retail Florists' Association and chairman of the board of directors of the New England Florists' Alliance.

By CHARLES F. BOYLE.

UNUSUAL conditions during and since the war have brought the retail florist face to face with the cold facts concerning money, its necessity, its use and abuse, and the penalty for disregarding any of these.

It is only within recent years that the florist, no matter in which branch of the trade engaged, has had the regard for the fundamentals of business that he should, and has come to see what has been accomplished by other successful business firms and to visualize their methods. It had been the custom to neglect the idea of collecting money for value received, so long as the other party was a good fellow. The feeling was strong that some day he would pay, and rather than suggest payment, the habit was such that statements were seldom rendered.

The possibility of demanding payment was never heard of, and rare indeed were the occasions when drastic action was countenanced. Among retailers it was nothing unusual to find that fifty per cent of the customers allowed their accounts to run from one to two years, thirty-five per cent from two to five years, and fully fifteen per cent from five to ten years. To offset this, the growers were compelled to wait for their money, not the same length of time, but always several months. The first few months of each year were devoted to paying accounts due from the previous year.

Handicap.

Such methods were unsound and doomed to failure those who followed them. They were the underlying cause of the reduced prosperity of florists and formed the major reason for their non-progressiveness and their lack of success. The average business man devoted a small portion of his time to his business, compared with the average florist, and was eminently more successful. No other business would permit privileges of credit such as were allowed the retail florist's customer. It has always been the feeling that to approach a customer for money would end his patronage then and there. Nowadays, this situation is reversed; if a customer doesn't pay, he is refused credit.

The necessity and acknowledgment of proper business methods have begun to overcome this feeling. Growers quite generally demand their money and get it. The retailers, however, always being the buffer between the producer and the consumer, have many other angles to consider. Stabilized credit is the most necessary factor to one's business today. This cannot be obtained without proper regulations and a strict adherence to them. The credit organizations have developed wonderfully and have created a new spirit among retail stores, including many florists'. The percentage of bad bills has been greatly reduced within the last five years and varies according to the volume of business. It has been the custom with many wealthy people who in past years were the florists' best customers to pay their bills whenever the spirit moved them, not, however, oftener than once a year. A good deal of this practice was due to the feeling that the florists were making such vast profits that they could well afford to wait. To a certain extent this was just the reason that florists did charge the top prices to these particular customers, so that the arrangement was mutual.

Today, however, the approach of standardization in the retail florists' trade is already sighted and will include within a few short years the credit system. We believe in being reasonable under every circumstance. Extensions of credit we do not object to if we understand the necessity and have a knowledge of the circumstances suggesting extensions. However, we believe that all promises made in the course of such extensions should be accurately lived up to, and obligations as agreed fully canceled.

When a customer does not put his account in balance at least twice a year, signs are bad, and when a customer makes partial payments for a period of two or three years, never balancing his account, signs are worse, and sooner or later we find ourselves with a bad debt on our hands. For this reason our annual audit is carefully supervised and every effort is made to begin a new year with a clean sheet. That is, no account is left standing over sixty days.

Collection Methods.

Various methods are employed to keep the accounts collected to date. The best method is to see that your customer receives his monthly statement on a certain day, and he will rarely pass it over without good reason. The first month a com-

Collection Methods.

Various methods are employed to keep the accounts collected to date. The best method is to see that your customer receives his monthly statement on a certain day, and he will rarely pass it over without good reason. The first month a completely itemized statement is mailed him. The next month the sum of the previous bill is rendered and the items of the current month. Customers of standing are required to pay within ninety days. If this is not done, we either telephone or send a letter, calling attention to the account's being overdue and requesting payment.

If a response is not forthcoming within thirty days, we send the first of a series of three letters, such as are furnished by many collection agency companies. The Creditors' Association is our particular method. The first letter is a mild request for payment, the second is somewhat stronger and the third threatens the posting of the account. These letters appear on the following page. This series has been successful in about eighty per cent of our cases and the cost for such service is small, being $75 for a series of 100 letters. Great discretion is necessary at all times to see that this service is not abused, but directed to the right people, particularly to those of questionable standing.

Train Customers.

It is acknowledged that a customer who appreciates the fact that we are regular in billing him and that we expect payment regularly will soon get into the habit of keeping his account in order. However, after sending these letters at intervals of thirty days and meeting with no response, we immediately turn this account over to a lawyer, the fee being on a sliding scale, averaging about fifteen per cent. Under these methods it is rarely necessary to go to court, and as court procedure is costly, we do not attempt this unless the account is at least $100. When a man forces court collection, the chances are all in his favor, and the judgment is hardly worth while collecting.

It is often found that several firms are interested in the same customer, each of whom holds him in arrears. In such cases our interests are pooled, and the cost of collection is reduced and our chances for a fair return are better. A customer taking offense at collection of an account in due process is not worth carrying. He will usually turn to some other concern in the same line and begin the same methods. A few such customers will make little difference in a firm's income and are better off the books than on.

References.

We require references by three business houses from a customer who asks for credit before accepting the account.

It is often the case that one account is kept with a reliable house in good standing for reference purposes only. On this one good account other houses are induced to extend credit for which there is no possibility of collection. For this reason the number demanded is three and if in any case a questionable reference is offered, we refuse the customer.

We maintain a card system, which tells a customer's standing instantly. In this way we have handy information that cannot be disputed. We believe in keeping all accounts as close to the mark as possible. In this way we are able to meet our own obligations at the proper time, and furthermore, to discount all bills possible, in this way deriving considerable income to meet office expenses.

The position of the retailer and that of the grower are not at all comparable and the amount of money carried by the retailer on his books is out of all proportion to the return on his investment. The desire for better methods is growing and within a few years we hope to find an organization among the retail florists working in conjunction with the growers and all to the better interests of both.

STRIKE NOT TO HALT TRAFFIC.

Although 400,000 shop workers went on strike July 1, railroad officials assert that train schedules will not be interfered with, a matter of much moment to many in the trade. The decision of the maintenance of way workers to remain on the job lends support to the railroad executives' statements. So long as repairs are not needed beyond the capacity of the temporary crews, schedules can be maintained.

Neither the maintenance of way employees, who also have taken a strike vote, but who have decided not to walk out, nor the shop crafts mechanics, who threw down their tools July 1, have anything to do with the actual operation of the trains. That work is carried out by the "Big Four" brotherhoods, whose international presidents issued orders June 29 that their members should continue to carry out their usual duties, irrespective of any strike action on the part of the other unions.

The shop crafts workers make repairs on rolling stock. Railway managers say that their present equipment will be adequate for several months and that emergency repairs might be made in outside shops. They estimate that it will be at least three months before a walkout of shop crafts employees will seriously impair the efficiency of either passenger or freight transportation.

The traveling public and the shippers will not know there is a strike except by reading about it in the newspapers, declared one executive.

Ionia, Mich.—The greenhouses of D. L. Vincent, B. L. Smith and Henry Forback were badly damaged recently by a wind and hail storm. A great deal of glass was broken and the telephone service was crippled.

Hanover, Pa.—Cremer the Florist handled the decorations for tables, etc., during the recent encampment of the United States Marines at Gettysburg, where Pickett's famous charge was reenacted. At the encampment were President Harding, General Pershing, the Secretary of War, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, the governors of Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia, and many others. The arrangements by Cremer the Florist received commendation from the presidential party and from Mrs. Lindley Darlington Butler, wife of General Smedley D. Butler, commander of the United States Marine corps. General and Mrs. Butler acted as host and hostess at the camp.

SCHLING HOLDS SCHOOL

SCHLING REPEATS SUCCESS.

School Draws 169 Students.

The opening of Max Schling's "school of floristry" Monday noon, June 26, at the Hotel Netherland, next door to his store on Fifth avenue, New York, was a most enthusiastic gathering of florists. Irrespective of the warm weather, every seat was taken and not even standing room was left; 169 people were present, of whom fifteen, from near by suburbs, who were not registered, were satisfied to stand throughout the session.

The first session was devoted entirely to bridal work. Demonstrations of bouquets, not only consisting of rare flowers but also of common garden flowers, were given. Mr. Schling explained that, just as the artist can paint the most beautiful picture in water colors to last only a short time and also produce more lasting ones in oil, we also should be able to produce creations of the most modest flowers as well as the most rare. He pointed out that beauty is not for sale, but what we do for our customers in the way of improving flowers by arrangement is an inducement for them to come to us. We ought to be able to serve the one who cannot afford to pay high prices with the more moderate garden flowers as well as we serve those who can afford to buy greenhouse-grown flowers of higher denominations.

Tuesday covered bridesmaids' bouquets and corsages in various combinations.

Teaches Value of Taste.

Wednesday was devoted to table decorations, gift baskets and various other kinds of design work. In all this work the same thought was demonstrated—that it is not what we use, but how we use it—that every flower grown can be used for some purpose, and no matter what we use we must employ the most discriminating taste for our customers.

Thursday there was a short session. Mr. Schling explained the utility of flowers for flower girls and pages, the influence of flowers on the mind of the child, as well as the adaptability of certain methods in connection with occasions where children use flowers.

After the session a photograph was taken of all present in front of the Pulitzer fountain, in the Plaza. When he saw all the faces of those who came to attend his classes in a group, every face radiating happiness and joy, Mr. Schling was able to find words with which to introduce Robert Grier Cooke, president of the Fifth Avenue Association, who made a short address of welcome to the most beautiful city in the most wonderful country.

Outing on Thursday.

Thursday afternoon, in consequence of an invitation from the park department of the city of New York, the whole class visited the city parks. Three large sight-seeing busses, each seating from fifty-five to sixty people, were filled to capacity, besides one small car. A trip through the Central park greenhouses and a visit to the Shakespeare garden were made. The afternoon also included a visit to the Bronx botanical gardens, where Professor Morrell received the visitors and showed them not only through all the greenhouses, but also through other interesting parts of Bronx park. The visiting florists were surprised to find such wonderful collections of palms in Central park and the mass of variation in the Shakespeare garden.

Friday, flowers for funerals furnished the theme. Different types of wreaths, from the smallest and cheapest to the higher-priced, elaborate designs, were shown. Casket covers and casket sprays were also covered.

Dinner Friday Evening.

Friday night a dinner was held; 141 people attended. All the students were not present, because some had to leave that evening. Charles H. Grakelow, of Philadelphia, and Edward Sceery, of Paterson, were the guests representing the F. T. D. W. A. Manda, Charles H. Brown, district representative of the F. T. D., and George D. Nicholas assisted in receiving the guests and represented New York floriculture. Others among the guests were Professor Thurston, Mr. Crisman and other representatives of colleges.

Mr. Sceery spoke on the meaning of the school, saying that it did not only mean advancement in floriculture, but was an effort to coöperate, instigated by the wonderful spirit of the students present. He said that they were not merely florists or students, but one big family, each striving to outdo the other in big-heartedness and harmony.

Charles H. Brown, in a wonderful address, referred to those who can lift themselves above the petty details of everyday life and acquire the far-sightedness to see the big possibilities of the profession and the benefits resulting from coöperative harmony.

Spirit Acclaimed.

Mr. Nicholas spoke about the love and appreciation of coworkers for one another, about the wonderful spirit developed in the few days the students were together.

Mr. Manda spoke about the high spirit, the wonderful example the school sets to other members of the craft.

Alfred M. Scheider, Mr. Schling's partner, described tersely the value of the work and the self-giving spirit, the necessity of carrying on the work.

After that came Charles Grakelow. He described floristry and its members as one would describe humanity. He cited the faults and the virtues, and his words were medicine for the faults and praise for the virtues, his soft, winning voice carrying everyone along. He stressed the importance of action as well as ideals, and brought out the necessity of getting to know others and to appreciate their work and aims. It would take much more to describe what this much admired man said.

Silver Service to Schlings.

After Professor Thurston had explained the educational value of the school to florists and the joy that those of the profession give to others, Mr. Grakelow, in the name of the students, presented Mr. and Mrs. Schling with a wonderful silver service.

After this Mr. Schling took the floor and, carried away by emotion, was hardly able to express his thanks. He added that, more than the actual gift, he appreciated the thought that lay back of it. He asked all present to endeavor to keep up the spirit of coöperation and harmony and spread it among others in their respective towns.

The whole affair had the appearance of a family reunion rather than anything else, everyone being friendly.

Saturday morning the school was filled to capacity, the same as every other day. Decorations for weddings, packing and sending out of cut flowers, filling of orders, estimates for contracts, etc., were taken up. With this session the school closed, everyone feeling sorry that it could not last longer.

F. H. B. UPHELD

QUARANTINE IS UPHELD.

Committee Whitewashes F. H. B.

No changes will be made either in quarantine 37 or the regulations thereunder promulgated by the federal horticultural board, if the recommendations of the special advisory committee recently appointed by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to study the quarantine situation are adhered to. A report has just been presented to Secretary Wallace, signed by Prof. J. C. Whitten, horticulturist of the University of California; Dr. A. F. Woods, president of the University of Maryland, and M. R. Cashman, president of the American Association of Nurserymen.

Need for safeguarding the United States against the entry of foreign plant pests and diseases is emphasized in the report, and the belief is expressed that no material changes are necessary either in quarantine 37 or in the regulations of the federal horticultural board for its enforcement. The report commends the idea of committees representing the various interests affected by the quarantine regulations, and frequent conferences between the committees and the federal horticultural board, the committee says, would bring about a clearer understanding on the part of all and secure the beneficial results sought by the plant quarantine act.

The committee pointed out the losses now suffered by American agriculture from pests accidentally imported before quarantine 37 went into effect. In view of the danger of other destructive pests being brought here, the committee declared that much greater care than formerly must be exercised to keep them out.

Text of Report.

The text of the report is as follows:

"In response to your request of May 12, 1922, we attended, May 15 and 16, the plant quarantine conference called by you to consider particularly the classes of plants which should be permitted unlimited entry under regulation 3 of quarantine 37 and other questions connected with the administration of this quarantine.

"The conference was well attended by representatives of the various interests involved and each and every one was given a full and impartial hearing. The subject was discussed from every angle both by representatives of groups, such as the nurserymen, florists and ornamental horticulturists, orchid growers, rose growers, etc., and by individuals. Everyone was encouraged to make constructive criticism and suggestions. After everyone who desired to be heard had spoken, often several times, including the representatives of foreign countries, each group was asked to form a committee to submit further recommendations and hold further conferences. We are impressed all through with the effort made by the Secretary of Agriculture and the horticultural board to give a full, fair and unprejudiced hearing to everyone.

"In our opinion the board is properly constituted as to membership and exercises unusual care to get expert opinion and advice. There is every evidence that the board intends to render every possible assistance to the trade and to individuals in making introductions.

"To those familiar with the losses now being suffered by the United States from pests accidentally imported before quarantine 37 was effective and knowing the dangers of further introductions, it must be clear to any unprejudiced mind that much greater care than formerly must be exercised to prevent introduction of organisms that may become pests. We believe that the measures adopted by the board are wisely directed to this end. It is clearly apparent to us that the difficulties complained of in the administration of the act (quarantine 37) are due to the necessity inherent in the work of dealing frequently with unknown factors. As the difficulties and dangers become clearer adjustments will be made to more perfectly meet the situations.

"It is evident that the board wishes to do everything in its power consistent with safety to assist in securing desired importations.

"We commend the idea of committees representing the various interests involved. Frequent conferences between such committees and the board will bring about a clear understanding on the part of all and secure the beneficial results that the act was intended to give.

"With reference to the act (quarantine 37) itself and the regulations under it, we believe no material changes are necessary."

FOR SEATTLE WEDDING.

One of the largest and most elaborate of recent church wedding decorations at Seattle was that made by the Hollywood Gardens at St. Mark's Episcopal church for the wedding of Miss Anna Hoge, daughter of James D. and Mrs. Hoge. The illustrations on this and the opposite pages show two views of the decoration.

On and over the altar 300 Butterfly roses were used. Against the wall and at the sides of the altar the firm used latticework covered with huckleberry branches, together with kentia palms, which rested on the floor, and two large vases of white gladioli. On each side of the altar, also, and in the choir pews there were standards, sixteen in all, bearing candles. This completed the decorating of the area around the altar.

In the church proper, to the right and to the left of the choir pews, huckleberry branches and palms were used, together with four immense baskets of pink and white gladioli set up on pedestals. In the main aisle of the church were placed twelve standards, each of which bore five candles and fifty lilies. The side aisles were likewise decorated with standards of candles and lilies, but in these aisles there were only six of the standards placed instead of twelve, as in the main aisle. The standards in the side aisles were also one foot shorter than those in the middle. Quantities of festooning were used for the overhead decorating in the church, and for this the firm used a kind of lycopodium which grows wild in that section of the country and is easy to procure.

THE COAL MARKET.

The inability of the government officials at Washington to bring together on a practicable compromise basis the officers of the miners' unions and the mine operators, the threatened railroad tie-up and the acknowledged low supply of coal have provided the elements of a panicky fuel market. Operating against such elements, however, are the determination of the federal administration to end the strike, the belief that the railroad strike will not attain dangerous proportions and the assurance that the non-union mines can produce still greater supplies of coal if cars and labor are available. In other words, it is too early to predict which way the cat will jump and greenhouse owners are still waiting for a more opportune moment than the present to fill the empty spaces in their bins.

July 1 brought a sudden demand on the coal market in the form of those who had waited until that date in order to take advantage of the reduction in freight rates. As a leading coal trade paper said in its review of the Chicago market, "it was not long before the prospective buyers began to discover that but little coal is being offered, the reason being that practically all of the companies doing business here are sold up for weeks to come. Such few cars of spot coal as could be obtained went at prices above those of the day before, the rush to protect themselves naturally making the market much stronger."

"Practically every coal user in this territory is in the market for fuel."

continues the report. "This is especially true as regards the railroads, public utilities and the bigger industrial plants. Then, too, retail dealers are coming into the market more and more each day."

"Conditions in western Kentucky, which is Chicago's chief source of supply at this time, are pretty bad. Not only is there a car shortage, but there is considerable congestion, the railroads seeming to have great difficulty in moving cars after they are loaded at the mines."

"As was to be expected, prices on western Kentucky coal have become stronger by reason of the increased demand. Screenings are now up to $4.40 a ton and are not by any means plentiful. Other sizes of the western Kentucky product are not bringing as much as screenings, the producers quoting $4.25 for mine-run and in some cases as high as $4.30 for prepared sizes."

"Coal from eastern Kentucky continues to find its way to the Chicago market, although conditions in that territory are just about as bad as they are in the western part of that state."

"The movement of the West Virginia coal to this market has been quite heavy during the last week and now there is a quite large tonnage on hand in the railroad yards. This is practically distress coal, but no great effort is being made to dispose of it, because it is believed that by holding it much better prices can be obtained."

QUARANTINE IS UPHELD.

Committee Whitewashes F. H. B.

No changes will be made either in quarantine 37 or the regulations thereunder promulgated by the federal horticultural board, if the recommendations of the special advisory committee recently appointed by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to study the quarantine situation are adhered to. A report has just been presented to Secretary Wallace, signed by Prof. J. C. Whitten, horticulturist of the University of California; Dr. A. F. Woods, president of the University of Maryland, and M. R. Cashman, president of the American Association of Nurserymen.

Need for safeguarding the United States against the entry of foreign plant pests and diseases is emphasized in the report, and the belief is expressed that no material changes are necessary either in quarantine 37 or in the regulations of the federal horticultural board for its enforcement. The report commends the idea of committees representing the various interests affected by the quarantine regulations, and frequent conferences between the committees and the federal horticultural board, the committee says, would bring about a clearer understanding on the part of all and secure the beneficial results sought by the plant quarantine act.

The committee pointed out the losses now suffered by American agriculture from pests accidentally imported before quarantine 37 went into effect. In view of the danger of other destructive pests being brought here, the committee declared that much greater care than formerly must be exercised to keep them out.

TARIFF RATES

SENATE PASSES TARIFF RATES.

The Senate, with little or no debate, July 1, passed a large number of rates in the McCumber-Fordney tariff bill. It had before it the agricultural schedule, in which is contained the various provisions of interest to the florists' trade. When these paragraphs were reached all that took place was the reading of the paragraphs as rewritten by the Senate finance committee and the announcement of the presiding officer of the Senate, "All in favor will say aye. The ayes have it and it is so ordered."

There was no explanation of any of the provisions affecting the florists' trade. The Democrats, who have been attacking most of the rates in the bill, said nothing, except Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, who inquired why the rates on field seeds had been increased in some cases fifty per cent, in others 100 per cent. He suggested that this would be something of a burden on the farmers.

Chairman McCumber, of the finance committee, explained that the farmers largely grow their own seed. When they do not do so, he added, it is because it is cheaper for them to buy it. The finance committee felt that the higher rates were desirable because then the farmers would grow their own seed, for it would be worth while for them to do so.

The Senate rates on bulbs are materially lower than those previously adopted by the House of Representatives. The situation is explained in a statement by William F. Gude, Washington representative of the S. A. F., who has watched the movement of the rates:

"The Senate, without debate, Saturday, July 1, adopted the rates of duty on horticultural products that had previously been recommended by the Senate finance committee. These rates are considerably lower than those that had been previously adopted by the House of Representatives. The paragraphs in question are as follows:

Par. 751. Tulp, lily, and narcissus bulbs, and lily of the valley pips, $2 per thousand; hyacinth bulbs, $4 per thousand; crocus bulbs, $1 per thousand; all other bulbs and roots, root stocks, clumps, corms, tubers, and herbaceous perennials, imported for horticultural purposes, 30 per centum ad valorem; cut flowers, fresh or preserved, 40 per centum ad valorem.

Par. 752. Seedlings and cuttings of Manetti, multiflora, briar, rugosa and other rose stock, all the foregoing not more than 3 years old, $2 per thousand; rose plants, budded, grafted, or grown on their own roots, 4 cents; cuttings, seedlings, and grafted or budded plants of other deciduous or evergreen ornamental trees, shrubs or vines, and all nursery or greenhouse stock, not specially provided for, 30 per centum ad valorem."

Par. 753. Seedlings, layers, and cuttings of apple, cherry, pear, plum, quince, and other fruit stocks, $2 per thousand; grafted or budded fruit trees, cuttings and seedlings of grapes, currants, gooseberries, or other fruit vines, plants or bushes, 30 per centum ad valorem.

Par. 761. Grass seeds: Alfalfa, 4 cents per pound; alsike clover, 4 cents per pound; crimson clover, 1 cent per pound; red clover, 4 cents per pound; white clover, 3 cents per pound; clover, not specially provided for, 2 cents per pound; millet, 1 cent per pound; timothy, 2 cents per pound; hairy vetch, 2 cents per pound; spring vetch, 1 cent per pound; all other grass seeds, not specially provided for, 2 cents per pound; provided, that no allowance shall be made for dirt or other impurities in seed provided for in this paragraph.

"The seed rates are materially higher than the rates adopted by the House of Representatives. Whether or not these rates will prevail when the bill is sent to conference, as it is called at the Capitol when representatives of the Senate and of the House meet to iron out the differences that have arisen as a result of the changes made by the Senate in the rates previously adopted by the House, cannot be foretold.

"I have learned that the prospects for the passage of the tariff bill by August 15 are good. It will take several weeks to bring about an agreement between the two branches of Congress, but the bill should reach the President for his signature sometime in September. This statement is based on statements made to me by prominent senators.

"On Saturday it was decided to postpone action on paragraph 762 of the tariff bill, covering other garden and field seeds."

TO PROSECUTE GLASS MAKERS.

By overruling a demurrer interposed by the United States Window Glass Co. and fifty-two other corporations and fifty-three individuals, Judge Ervin, in the United States District court June 30, made certain the prosecution of the alleged window glass combine early in the fall for violations of the Sherman law.

The federal grand jury, March 17, returned indictments charging that the alleged combine had violated the Sherman law by establishing a conspiracy to control the distribution and price of the output of the window glass industry.

It was contended by the defendants, who challenged the jurisdiction of the New York federal court, that the indictments were improper in view of its having been specified that the alleged conspiracy had been established elsewhere.

The government charges that the alleged combine's agreement with the indicted labor leaders reduced the output of the window glass industry fifty per cent, which netted the defendants enormous profits.

MUMS BUDDING PREMATURELY.

Why do my chrysanthemums persistently produce premature buds? Can I do anything to prevent them from doing so? I bought the rooted cuttings in April.

E. V. S.—Ia.

Probably the plants were allowed to remain too long in the cutting bench or in small pots, and thus became hard. It would be well to cut them back quite hard and endeavor to induce new growths from below. Some varieties, like Golden Glow, persist in throwing these premature buds, but outside of some of the earlies, there should be no trouble of this kind, unless the plants are allowed to become potbound and too hard.

YOU'LL WANT THIS

OFFICIAL CATALOGUE.

Florists, seedsmen and nurserymen alike await the appearance of the Official Catalogue of Standardized Plant Names, now in preparation, and they all will be interested in the statement given at the convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, at Detroit, last week by Harlan P. Kelsey, secretary of the American Joint Committee on Horticultural Nomenclature, as the latest information regarding the catalogue. He said:

"The actual work of producing the material for this catalogue has been done by a subcommittee of three, Frederick Law Olmsted, chairman; Frederick V. Coville and Harlan P. Kelsey, ably assisted by officers of national organizations in all leading horticultural lines. In the mechanical and business end, the subcommittee is working closely with J. Horace McFarland, chairman of the American Joint Committee, who is also doing the printing.

"All the original preparation of manuscript is finished, and Dr. Coville is handling the preparation of final copy for the printer.

"Over one-fourth of the work is now in type and a set of galley proofsheets up to No. 65 has been submitted to nurserymen, together with the fruit name list, printed separately. It is by far the most authentic, accurate and up-to-date list of fruit names ever published. This list, however, is being further revised as belated proofsheets come in.

"No one realized the size of the job we were undertaking; yet, while everyone regrets the delay, I am sure that the finished product will be such as fully to warrant the extra time used in careful proofreading and revision. This proofreading mostly is done by the subcommittee, for those nurserymen who received proofsheets threw up their hands when they saw what they were up against.

"So far 1,095 copies have been subscribed for at the advance price of $3.50 per copy, entirely in response to circulars sent out by the secretary, showing that with wide publicity the work will be a success in every way. The comments on the proofsheets by experts are highly commendatory.

"The price is now $5 per copy, and every effort should be made to run the sales up to several thousand copies.

"Dr. Coville is devoting much time and labor to the final preparation of printers' copy, a work that can only be done by a single person of exceptional ability in that particular line. The government's hearty coöperation has saved thousands of dollars' expense to the American Joint Committee, and horticulturists everywhere should know and appreciate this. The path trodden has been new and thorny and the obstacles unbelievably difficult, but we see daylight ahead, and I believe that publication may certainly be looked for in a few months."

DENVER OUTING.

The entertainment and outing given by the florists of Denver for their florist friends of the state of Colorado, at Elitch's Gardens, Tuesday, June 27, proved to be one of the greatest successes and one of the most enjoyable affairs of the kind that have ever taken place in that part of the country. The surroundings were so ideal that it is hard to imagine where any better place could have been selected. The weather man was also kind, the day being ideal for an outing. There were about 500 present.

Practically all the stores and greenhouses closed at noon, giving everybody a chance to attend by 2:30 in the afternoon, when the festivities began. Everything was free for everybody coming from out of the city—entrance to the grounds, rides on the merry-go-round, ice cream and soft drinks, various other concessions for the children and also for the grown folks, a 4-course dinner served in the open on long tables decorated with flowers, every lady also receiving flowers of some kind, and free dancing, to the celebrated Elitch dance orchestra, in the wonderfully decorated pavilion. A reserved section in the theater provided seats for all who wanted to attend. The play was "The Three Wise Fools," which was well acted by the Elitch Gardens Stock Co. At the end of the second act the three ladies of the company were presented with large baskets of flowers, with the compliments of Denver's florists. An announcement was made of the coming flower show, to be held in the municipal auditorium November 12.

There were representatives from Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Rocky Ford, Fort Morgan, Boulder, Fort Collins, Longmont, Loveland, Greeley and Brighton. J. Edward Johnson, manager of the Pikes Peak Floral Co., Colorado Springs, headed a large delegation from there, and Pueblo was also well represented. The total number of visitors was 105.

The picnic started with a ball game at 2:30 between the Colorado Springs and Denver florists. The game was remarkably well played, and at the finish the score was 4 to 3 in favor of Denver.

During the game the rooters in the grand stand were kept well supplied with popcorn and soda pop. The children must have had a glorious time, and we wonder how they felt the next day.

After the ball game the races took place, and were won by the following:

Married men's race—Scott J. Thomas, of the N. A. Benson greenhouses.
Single men's race—R. M. Frazier, of Colorado Springs.

Boys' race—Stephen Burry, Denver.
Married ladies' race—Mrs. Charles Willmore.
Single ladies' race—Ellenor Greer, Denver.
Girls' race—Helen Burry, Denver.
Race for boys under 10 years—Francis Sargent, Denver.
Bald-headed men's race—Herbert A. Clausen, Denver.

Other prizes and their winners were an electric percolator, won by Miss L. Baumell, Denver; a plate glass mirror, won by S. R. Lundy, of the Boldt-Lundy Flower Store; $5 in cash, won by Mr. Holman, of the Boldt-Lundy Flower Store; fifty feet of hose, won by Clyde Beugley, of the C. F. Maler greenhouses, and an electric percolator, won by J. Zack, Denver.

The accompanying illustration will give an idea of the number that sat down to enjoy the meal. Forty-five waiters were required to serve the many tables.

The committee of arrangements and the florists of Colorado would like to give credit to the Elitch Gardens Co. for the interest the members of the company took in this affair and for their splendid coöperation.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

The season has now closed and everyone is taking a breathing spell and preparing for the fall opening. The season has lasted the latest in several years and business has been strong to the end. Prices have held well and there has been a good cleaning up daily. Carnations are in small supply and roses are also lighter; most of the growers are now drying off, having completed their replanting. But some of the growers are already taking the first cuts from early plants.

Various Notes.

George F. Williams and family have opened their summer home at Prudence island, which they will occupy for the season.

Robert Lamont has been drawn by the town council of Coventry for petit jury duty.

Peter S. Byrnes, of the Homogansett Greenhouses, Wickford, was one of the judges at the hand-engine muster at Bristol last week.

Johan E. Brynerson has been granted a marriage permit, the bride-to-be being Miss Hilma K. Peterson.

Miss Harriet F. Kinder, daughter of Samuel Kinder, of Bristol, is filling a musical engagement at the Greenock Inn, at Lee, Mass.

Page F. Potter and Archie Aiken, of the Colonial Flower Shoppe, entertained at an informal dinner at the former's home in Georgiaville the other evening. Among the guests was former Governor R. Livingston Beeckman.

John Johnston, of Johnston Bros., was in Boston and vicinity last week.

The Maplehurst Greenhouses, at Longmeadow, are being dismantled, business there having been discontinued.

Cohen Bros. are making a general overhauling of the Lowell avenue greenhouses this season.

Extensive repairs and alterations are being made at the Westminster Greenhouses.

Howard Lothrop, who has been superintendent of parks of Fall River since April, 1904, has resigned.

Joseph E. Koppelman was a business visitor in New York and Philadelphia last week.

N. Lemay has commenced the building of an addition to his greenhouses on Rangeley avenue.

Carmichael Bros., of Shannock, are cutting large shipments of beautiful white Japanese iris for the New York market. They had an immense rush on peonies this year.

John Marshall, of the Fruit Hill Greenhouses, is making some large shipments of Lilium regale, which is rapidly gaining in popularity.

The premium list and schedule for the first annual flower show, to be held under the auspices of the Narragansett Gardeners' and Florists' Association, at Narragansett Pier, August 16, are ready for distribution. Chestman O. Childs, of Peace Dale, is president of the association, and James Mackie, of Narragansett Pier, is secretary. John T. Allan and William Grey, of the Newport Horticultural Society, have been invited to officiate as judges. W. H. M.

DANGEROUS PEST

MITE ON CYCLAMENS.

How to Recognize It.

Plant growers throughout the country have been troubled with cyclamen mite, and a great deal of damage has been done to the crops of even the most experienced growers of cyclamens. This mite is an exceedingly small creature, and it is for this reason that the pest is so hard to control or exterminate, once it has gained a foothold on the crop. The pest does not confine itself to cyclamen plants, but is also found on geraniums.

The foliage of the plants which are infested with the pest becomes streaky and deformed and, it is needless to say, the plants are worthless from a commercial standpoint.

The male mite is less than one-hundredth of an inch long and is even smaller than the female. It has no waist-line and the mature insect has eight legs, but no eyes. The young larva has but six legs and appears under microscopic observation in a pale, glistening, transparent form, turning to a brownish color as it matures. The eggs take the shape of a compressed sphere; that is, ellipsoidal, and they are semi-transparent and pearl-like.

The eggs are generally laid during the night and the period of incubation is from three to seven days at a temperature of 68 to 77 degrees. They are laid in groups or singly near the veins of the leaves or near the juncture of two veins on the under side of the leaves. The period in the egg, as mentioned above, is from three to seven days, followed by the larva stage, which is divided into the larva-active and the larva-quiesscent periods. The larva-active stage lasts from one and one-half to three days and the larva-quiesscent from one to four days. The larva stage is followed by the molting period, after which the insect emerges as an adult.

The Adult Mite.

The period of life of the female mite is longer than that of the male, the female living for approximately twenty days, while the male averages about six days. The female begins laying her eggs a short time after emerging from the larva stage, and lays an average of one egg per day over a period of twelve or fourteen days.

The pest only comes out of its hiding place behind the calyxes of the flowers on sunny days, and migrates by crawling from leaf to leaf. Where the leaves of two or more plants are in contact, it goes from plant to plant. It has been discovered that the insect does not go from plant to plant on the ground. Migration is slow, indeed, and it has been found that if the plants are separated so that their leaves do not come into contact with one another, no migration takes place. The pest also dislikes a great deal of ventilation, but enjoys a humidity of about eighty or ninety per cent in a temperature of about 68 to 75 degrees.

From the habits of the pest, it would seem that the most effective means of combating it would be to deny it those conditions under which it thrives most; in other words, keep the humidity of the house as low as possible, giving the plants plenty of ventilation and separating them as much as possible. To what extent this can be done depends on the individual grower.

Fighting the Pest.

Constant watchfulness as to the cleanliness of greenhouse and plants, is needed to ward off an infestation of mite. Fumigating with nicotine once a week is practiced by many growers. If a sign of mite is seen, start to spray with a nicotine and soap mixture, or dip the plants in a nicotine solution containing a little soap.

Fumigating with cyanide is another means of exterminating mite. A coating of chopped tobacco stems between the pots on the bench is used as a preventive.

A nationally known grower of cyclamens recommends Thrip Juice No. 2. This, he says, should be used until about October 1, and after this date a nicotine extract should be used once a week until November 1 or until the plants begin to bloom. When the blooms begin to show, discontinue the use of the nicotine extract sprayings, as these will discolor the flowers and foliage of the plant, but substitute a spraying with clear water twice a day, if the weather permits.

GROWING VALLEY OUTDOORS.

Lilies of the valley are especially adapted for planting outdoors around shrubs and porches or in shady places, and here they will come up each year. They require little or no care. In planting them outdoors, for cut flowers, only the best pips obtainable should be used by the florist. Good valley pips have a strong, healthy appearance and have plenty of fine, fibrous roots.

For outdoor culture the soil upon which some other crop has been growing for three or four years will prove best, and this is deeply plowed and heavily manured. The pips are planted in furrows about one foot apart and are covered with about two inches of soil. Where the soil is heavy in texture, a top-dressing of clean river sand should be applied. Later in the season the soil should receive a top-dressing of well-rotted horse or cow manure, which is repeated every winter. Do not use any chemical fertilizers. If horse or cow manure is not available, use sheep manure. Many growers are of the opinion that the beds should be renewed every two or three years; others leave them unchanged twice as long.

The beds must be kept well cultivated and free from weeds during the summer months, and during the dry season the plants must be kept well watered.

BLUE BLOOMS

BLUE FLOWERS FOR CUTTING.

We have a constant call for blue flowers for table use. What can you suggest that we might grow?

What is the correct name for blue daisy and where can stock be secured?
H. D. P.—N. Y.

In the way of blue flowers, bachelor's buttons are among the best. Probably you grow them. The double form is especially good. For midwinter blooms, benches are better than solid beds. Later in the season plants in beds give the better results. Plants grown outdoors singly in nursery rows and lifted are the best for an early crop. A later batch can be started indoors, either in pots and later planted out, or sown thinly in rows a foot apart.

The blue daisy you refer to is Agathaea cœlestis, also botanically called the felicia. You will find this advertised from time to time in the Classified pages of The Review. It makes a nice little pot plant, is well adapted for cutting and has also a certain value as a bedding plant. It propagates easily. The flowers are much smaller than those of the yellow and white marguerites, but bring good prices in the market. One or two growers for some time got $4 per hundred for the flowers in the New York market last winter. This plant flowers well in pots in midwinter; later in the season it produces better flowers and in greater quantity when planted out.

Another excellent blue flower you should grow, one which is splendid for cutting and unexcelled for table decorations, is the annual larkspur, obtainable in light and dark shades of blue. For an early crop, sow late in September, pot off singly and later plant out in a bench. In midwinter water carefully and avoid spraying, which would cause damping off and mildew. Later sowings, made from January to March, will prolong the season until the outdoor blue flowers come in. Under glass, these annual larkspurs show surprising vigor and grow far more robustly than outdoors. They attain at times a height of from three to five feet.

You cannot afford to overlook the hardy larkspurs, or delphiniums, for forcing purposes. While I prefer D. Belladonna, all the formosum varieties are excellent. There have been one or two articles on the indoor culture of these in The Review recently. To refer briefly to the culture, plants from seed sown the previous winter or spring are, on the whole, more satisfactory than larger and older clumps, as they are less liable to damp off. Plants must in all cases have a good freezing before being forced. They succeed well in boxes containing five to six inches of soil, if only a few are wanted. They will grow in either raised benches or solid beds and have done the best when not started before January 15. A few flowers may be had in March, but in April and May they are at their best. A cool, airy, light house suits them, and as plants a year old or less will throw stalks five to six feet high, give them ample head room.

Other blue flowers of value for cutting are forget-me-nots, Nemesia strumosa, a charming annual which can be flowered beautifully in February and March from seed sown the previous September and grown cool; Nigella Miss Jekyll, with cornflower-blue flowers, commonly known as "love in a mist"; Salvia farinacea, lavender blue in color, a far better keeper than the omnipresent scarlet variety, splendens, also a good bedding plant, though not sufficiently appreciated. Then there is salpiglossis, a charming annual; the violet blue color might please you. Blue sweet peas you undoubtedly have. Didiscus cærulea has come into some favor of late; it is lavender blue in color and cultural directions will be found elsewhere in this issue. Last, but not least, a few pans of giant blue verbenas should be grown. Treat them well and you will get stems eighteen to twenty-four inches long in spring, far ahead of any grown outdoors. Four or five small plants in an 8-inch pan or three in a 6-inch pan will provide you with fine cutting material. Some of the foregoing blue flowers, all of which the writer has grown or is now growing, may interest you. C. W.

DIDISCUS CÆRULEA.

Can you give me full cultural directions for Didiscus cærulea? H. J.—Pa.

This interesting and pretty plant has been commonly called Queen Anne's lace flower, the blue lace flower, the wild carrot and several other names. Grown for the New York market, it became quite popular at some of the more exclusive stores and its fame has spread to many other cities. From my experience with it, I doubt if the average country florist will make much, if any, money out of it, but it is an interesting as well as pretty subject, and adds variety and a pleasing color to the flowers in spring and early summer. It can be flowered indoors in late fall and winter, but does not respond as it does in spring. Few annuals are successful winter bloomers, sweet peas being perhaps the most notable exception. All, however, do well in spring, and outdoors the didiscus does nicely, if sown thinly in rows any time between April 25 and July 1, keeping the soil well cultivated.

Didiscus, or, to be botanically correct, Trachymene cærulea, is an Australian annual and a member of the natural order of umbelliferae. There are some twenty-five species of trachymene; the bulk come from the antipodes, but others are found in Borneo, New Caledonia and the Celebes. T. cærulea is the only species grown in America and the only one of any real value floriculturally or commercially.

All members of the umbelliferae family are rather difficult to transplant. They usually make top roots and few fibers and for that reason you should either sow them in beds or benches where they are to flower, doing any necessary thinning when the plants are of sufficient size, or else sow them in small pots and transfer from the pots to the bench or outdoors. You will never have much success in pricking off this plant as you would asters or zinnias. The

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE AND WHY

WILLIAM J. BAKER.

HERE'S something worth while, something that you could not get for love or money—William J. Baker sowing the seed of patriotism. Observe the characteristic wave of the thumb and the Grand Army uniform. There is no photographer in America who could catch the colonel in a more natural pose and garb. But you say, "What has all this to do with flowers?" Much, I assure you, for William J. Baker is the pioneer wholesale florist of Philadelphia. He flourished in the days when it took courage and fine stock to advance carnations from 50 cents to 75 cents a hundred. He has retired now. His business is in the hands of the junior partner, but the kiddies will tell you that the colonel, as he is affectionately termed, is every inch a man. Phil.

thing cannot be done, but if they are planted in pots they do well.

A winter temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night and careful watering are necessary. A well drained and rather open soil must be provided. If attempted as a winter-flowering subject, great care is necessary to prevent damping off, and the best success is to be had from seeds started from January to March. It succeeds well in from four to five inches of soil, enjoys plenty of fresh air and full sunshine, and should never be sprayed over.

For bouquet work Didiscus cærulea is charming, and a separate vase of it is also most pleasing. This color appeals to many critical buyers. Ladies, especially, are fond of it, and in a moderate way I should say this interesting plant might be grown by many florists, but not as a shipping subject, except for nearby markets. C. W.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Horticultural Society's Show.

The annual June show of the Newport Horticultural Society was held in the dining hall of the First Presbyterian church a week ahead of schedule. Although somewhat smaller than shows of former years, it presented select specimens of a wide variety of blooms. Among the prize-winners were William Gray, gardener for Princess Anastasia, of Greece; J. Robertson, gardener for Mrs. T. O. Richardson; Andrew Dorward, gardener to T. J. Emery; A. W. Potter, gardener to Mrs. H. D. Auchincloss; J. T. Allan, gardener to Mrs. John R. Drexel, and James Hooper, gardener to Mrs. T. K. Gibbs.

The exhibition was under the direction of the executive committee, consisting of J. T. Allan, B. Butterson, Frederick Carter, Andrew Dorward, Richard Gardner, William Gray, James Hooper, William MacKay, Alexander McClellan, Andrew S. Meikle, James Robertson, W. S. Smith, J. B. Urquhart, V. A. Vanicek and W. G. Taylor.

The judges were John T. Allan, Alexander McClellan and J. B. Urquhart, all past-presidents of the society.

Various Notes.

Alfred T. Bunyard, the New York florist who had a Newport branch for a number of summers, is convalescing at his home in New York from a recent operation for appendicitis.

John T. Allan and William Gray have been appointed judges for the flower show of the Narragansett Gardeners' and Florists' Association, at Narragansett Pier, next month.

Carl E. Lindh, for the last twenty-seven years foreman of the Island cemetery, died June 22, at the Newport hospital, after an illness of two weeks. He came to Newport from Sweden, where he was born thirty years ago. He is survived by his wife and one son.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Up to and including June 29, business in the cut flower markets last week was fairly good, everything, especially carnations, taking on strong prices. This was due mainly to the special demand for flowers for graduations and commencements. Friday, however, with functions all concluded, conditions settled down to the dormancy usually expected of July.

It is doubtful whether the market would have been so buoyant from mid-June, had it not been for weather conditions, which have been abnormal in their adversity. Not in a half century has such a rainy June been experienced, and toward the latter end severe thunder storms added to the destruction of outside-grown flowers, so that the market was in great respect saved from an influx which would necessarily have militated against remunerative prices. July opened with a continuation of weather conditions indeed all to the worse, for the rainfall was such as to register officially over an inch in twenty minutes. Next day tropical heat got in its effect, and at this writing the heat wave continues.

Gladioli from local growers are arriving in great quantity, first shipments coming early last week and bringing about $10 per hundred for the best.

This price later was brought down to $7.50; then to $5 per hundred. The gladiolus survives pretty bad weather. It was hard to believe, with June conditions here, that crops around Chicago had been injured by heat and drought.

The advance guard of the dahlias is on time for the season, several shipments arriving last week. It only remains now for asters to arrive, and this arrival is not far distant, local plantings now showing buds in color in some localities. Many aster growers report plantings sadly affected by rust. One prominent grower predicts that the aster is doomed, due to the prevalence of this disease, which, he believes, cannot be checked.

Roses are fairly plentiful in grades up to extras, little long-stemmed stock coming in. American Beauty is in moderate supply at $15 to $50 per hundred for specials, but sales are hardly up to the summer average. Hybrid teas are moving within a range of $1.50 to $6 per hundred, with much open stock moving at unquotable figures.

The supply of carnations is not so heavy as it was during last week, when the demand for functions sent the price range up to $6 per hundred and even higher. The quality of arrivals is poor and stock is hard to move at $1 to $3 per hundred, the latter figure for selected flowers. Many of the growers have ceased to cut and are cleaning out their benches for replanting.

Cattleyas met a good demand last week and were fairly plentiful, bringing $50 to $125 per hundred. There is more than a sufficiency for the present demand, and the price range for ordinary stock is down to $35 to $75 per hundred.

White lilies are fairly plentiful and are bringing $10 to $15 per hundred. Rubrums are bringing $6 to $10 per hundred. Valley is on the slump now, and moves slowly at 50 cents to $5 per hundred sprays.

Sweet peas from under glass are about finished, and outside stock has been cut out by storms. Miscellaneous flowers are temporarily only in fair supply, but not at all active in movement. The list of items is large and includes stocks, phlox, gladioli, candytuft, cornflowers, mignonette, myosotis, poppies, calendulas, snapdragons, delphiniums, zinnias, gaillardias, pyrethrums, coreopsis, Japanese iris, hydrangeas and gypsophilas.

Various Notes.

June weddings are not, at least in and around New York, so popular as they used to be, according to the statistics furnished for Manhattan and Brooklyn, the former showing a decrease of 531 and the latter 128. The fact that last year's figures showed a considerable decrease over those for the former June rather confirms the belief. But then, just look at the increase in the crop for other months.

The annual rose show of the Nassau County Horticultural Society, held at the Nassau Country Club, Glen Cove, June 13, showed increased interest in rose culture, and was an exhibition of the highest merit. Special awards were offered for table decorations of roses.

School garden exhibitions have been frequent. Seventy-eight schools in Greater New York had gardens this season, an increase of seven over last year. The Bronx led with twenty-two, Brooklyn and Queens coming next with twenty-one each—good material for Benjamin Hammond's report as chairman of the school gardens committee of the S. A. F.

In one of its editions last week the Brooklyn Eagle had a leading article on the quoted word "floristry," which that journal proclaims to be a new word, aptly coined. Although the article did not say so, it undoubtedly had reference to Max Schling's school of floristry recently in session. It even went so far as to say that students from Kansas, Indiana, Texas, California and South Africa, in all 169, were in attendance at this school "over in Manhattan," and it gave this as a suggestion which might be adopted by the school: "Of course it is inseparably associated with the trade. If it can improve the mortuary pieces that have made mourners suffer and friends of the deceased grieve more deeply, it is welcome."

Recent visitors in New York were A. E. Gude, Washington, D. C., and Harry A. Demeranville, of the Minge Floral Co., Mobile, Ala. J. H. P.

PHILADELPHIANS GO FISHING.

It so chanced that Saturday, June 1, J. G. Whilldin invited his friends Henry I. Faust, T. G. Whilldin, William K. Harris and John N. Prince to accompany him to Maple Lawn, away up in the Poconos. They went in his car, guided by a trusty hand, who put on five tires and drove the car backwards uphill when necessary. The 4-hour trip was finally completed in just twelve hours. They found Mark P. Mills and there they caught a fine string of trout. In the illustration on this page you can see them well, except Mr. Whilldin, who is behind the camera. They had a lovely time and forgot all about plants and pots and soils. They even forgot their own names for one whole happy week.

Under the laws of Monroe county a misdemeanor was punishable by fine. When that fine was paid the culprit was immune. This law was strictly observed. Phil.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

A PAGE OF TIMELY AID AND ADVICE TO GROWERS

SOWING LATE ANNUALS.

You can still make sowings of a number of useful annuals outdoors, which will prove good for cutting. Among these are sweet alyssum, hunnemannia, or Mexican poppy; Shirley poppy, clarkia, annual larkspur, lupines, bachelor's buttons, Gypsophila elegans, candytuft and scabiosa. Give them an open, sunny location and keep the soil well stirred about them, in order to encourage a quick growth. You will find a batch of these late annuals serviceable for filling retail orders. Greenhouse flowers are now reaching a low ebb and will not cut much of a figure again until early October.

CINERARIAS.

Sow a packet of the large-flowered cineraria now, if you want nice plants in flower for Christmas. Cover the seeds lightly and be careful not to allow the seed pans to dry out. The seedlings will germinate within a fortnight. When they have made their seed leaves, prick them off into flats, using a light leaf-mold compost, and later pot them singly. Grow the plants as cool as possible all summer and do not expose them to the strong sunlight. Cinerarias, calceolarias and primulas all grow apace, once the cool fall nights arrive. Their headway is slow during the hot summer period. They do best in a cool and rather moist house. They need spraying or fumigating, as green aphids is especially fond of them. They sell better in midwinter than in the spring.

Instead of allowing your left-over geranium stock to stand here and there in the greenhouses, get it together to economize on watering and, unless you anticipate some late sales, plant it out at once. Geraniums have been in short supply in many sections this season and promise to be good property another year. Get your left-overs out at once, in order that the plants can make sufficient growth to give a nice crop of fall cuttings.

ASPARAGUS SPRENGERI.

No one can afford to be without Asparagus Sprengeri. A box of flowers, a bouquet or a floral design seems incomplete without a little of it. Anyone buying carnations wants a little. In fact, it is hard to think what we would do for greens without it. An accommodating plant, this asparagus. It will grow and luxuriate in positions too shady for flowering plants. It is at its best in either a solid bed or fairly deep bench. It also makes a most excellent basket plant, and wire baskets containing three or four plants each can be hung in the shade of trees for the summer, or anywhere under glass within handy reach of the hose. If you are short of this useful plant, buy some 3-inch stock now. It will make rapid headway in good soil. If you have a surplus of young plants, line some out in the field and they will make heavy stock ere fall.

PANSIES.

It is a little too early to sow pansy seed for the production of plants for spring sales, but if you want to try some in a cool greenhouse, where violets succeed and a temperature of only 40 to 45 degrees is maintained, sow the seed now. Do not buy cheap seed; it will prove the dearest in the long run. Sow in a coldframe; protect from sun and drenching rains, which might cause damping off. It will not take the seeds long to germinate. Then they can be transplanted into light, rich soil and later in the season planted indoors. There is an increased call for fancy flowers made up in large bunches like violets, demand being especially good from February until May.

CANTERBURY BELLS.

Campanula Medium, better known as Canterbury bells, is one of our most welcome biennials. It is excellent as a spring pot plant and is always welcomed in June as one of our most delightful garden plants. Each year many growers err by sowing seeds too late. Lose no time in sowing seeds if you want good flowering plants for next year. Prick them off into frames or flats and later line them out a foot apart in a frame, or outdoors if the climate is not too severe and the proper protection can be afforded. There are double, hose-in-hose and single Canterbury bells; the singles are much the best. There are pure white, mauve, dark blue and pink colors; of these, pink and dark blue are the most popular.

POINSETTIAS.

Always popular for Christmas, poinsettias should not be grown by every florist. If no more than a carnation temperature is at command, let them alone; they will not pay to bother with. If, however, you have a compartment you can keep at 60 degrees on cold nights, there is no reason why you cannot grow some. If your stock has not yet been started up, lose no time in getting it under way.

Short-jointed cuttings, rubbed off with a heel, are the best, being far less liable to damp off in hot weather than those cut below a joint. As you make your cuttings, dip the ends in powdered charcoal to stop the bleeding. Poinsettias will root satisfactorily in coarse sand in a regular propagating bench, but small growers will meet with better success by potting each cutting separately in a 2-inch pot. Fine coal ashes have been found an excellent rooting medium, a mixture of fine charcoal and coarse sand coming next in order.

Be sure to shade the cuttings from all sunshine until they are rooted. As a rule, a little water will be needed each day. When cuttings are placed in a bench, it is necessary to cut back most of the leaves. When they are placed singly in small pots, if most of the foliage is left on, few will fail to root. Cuttings may be put in with success until early in August; the later ones are nice for dwarf pans for the holidays.

BUDDLEIA ASIATICA.

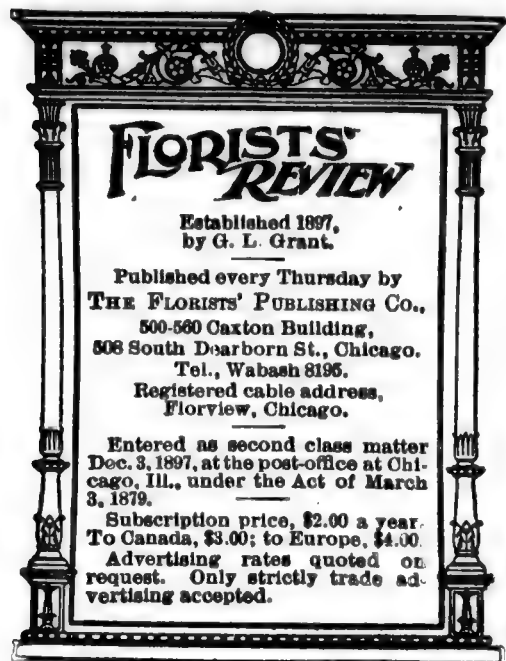

Coming into flower as early as Christmas and lasting until the end of March in a cold greenhouse, the so-called "winter-flowering lilac" is a most useful florists' flower, particularly for home trade. It may not have the same value as many other flowers for shipping purposes, but the free-blooming quality, ease of culture, rapid growth and delicious fragrance of Buddleia asiatica are strong points in its favor. One or two country florists known to the writer have specimens planted out or in tubs where there is ample head room, and these plants produce a wonderful wealth of flowers in the darkest and coldest days of winter. Nothing can be finer in making up sprays or wreaths; in fact, those who have once grown it would be lost without it.

Spring cuttings can be grown into heavy 8-inch pot stock ere fall. A generous soil, much water, full sun and pinching until the end of August, are its needs.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Most stock of chrysanthemums will already be planted in the houses, but this is a reminder that it is by no means too late to plant chrysanthemums. If stock is not on hand, there are many specialists offering good commercial varieties. Where the cut flowers are to be used at home, those of medium size are best, and instead of growing single blooms on each stem, pinch out the tops and allow the plants to have two or three on each stem. As a general rule, early varieties pay well, decidedly better than main-crop ones, and pompons will probably net more per square foot than the disbudded Japanese varieties. They have come tremendously to the front the last few years and are wonderful keepers on the plants. While all colors sell, there is a marked partiality for bronzes. Such varieties as Mrs. Wilcox, Mrs. Frank Beu and Sourcee d'Or are always eagerly bought. Grow a few of the charming singles and anemones. The spray chrysanthemums, also, are much in favor these days.

Look out for the chrysanthemum midge; it is a dangerous pest. Throw away any plants found full of warts, and spray frequently with nicotine sulphate if you find your stock is infested.

SUGGEST to the public the cooling effect of flowers indoors in hot weather, how they relieve the stuffiness of a dwelling, how they add brightness and cheer to office or store, how they soothe frazzled nerves. Flowers really are as desirable in summer as in winter.

FLORISTS in the middle west regard with satisfaction the favorable crop reports. Grain production will be considerably above last year's and close to the 5-year average. Prices to the farmers are ten per cent better than a year ago, though they are still sixty-one per cent lower than two years ago and thirty per cent lower than the average for the last ten years.

BUSINESS failures in May were 1,882, the fewest since last October. There were 2,058 in April and 1,341 in May a year ago. The liabilities of the failed concerns were $46,000,000 as compared with $73,000,000 in April and $58,000,000 in May of last year. Those concerns most in difficulty now are small ones that have gleaned insufficient profits to permit their proprietors to continue.

WHAT can be done in the way of producing Paper White bulbs in this country was demonstrated last week when half a dozen specimens reached the Editor's desk from Tait Bros. Co., Brunswick, Ga. They are fine, firm bulbs, looking as well as any imported. If they force as well as they look, no more need be asked.

PRICES, according to the Bankers' Index, are upward bound again. The average price on all commodities June 1 was $428.61, compared with $422 a month before and $407.64 a year ago. The average price of all prime commodities at wholesale June 1 was forty-one per cent below the high point reached August 1, 1919, and nineteen per cent above the mark of August 1, 1914.

SEVERAL readers of The Review have written to suggest that the subscriber who wanted the address of the Manawald Irrigation Co. evidently had in mind the Manaway System, for outdoor and greenhouse irrigation, made by C. W. Skinner, Newfield, N. J. Here is another instance of the fact that one who wishes to know anything pertaining to this trade has only to ask the willing readers of this paper. Thank you all!

SOUND ADVICE.

The bulletin of a life insurance company quotes an editorial from the New York Evening Mail, of which one paragraph reads:

If boys are wise they will begin insurance as soon as they begin to earn. A young man who thus looks forward, who is thus provident—for providence means looking forward—is the kind of young man that a girl may trust with her future. Say it with insurance is sounder love than merely saying it with flowers and ice cream. To save some of your money for a girl is better than to spend all of your money on a girl, and of the various forms of saving insurance is the best.

Though the use of our slogan has attracted some florists' attention to this editorial, it is not to be supposed they differ with its sentiment. The best customers this trade has are among those people who have invested most wisely and carry ample insurance. We would all prefer that the youth take out an insurance policy or buy a bond rather than purchase a bouquet, because if he does, we know, he will be a steady patron of some florist later on and his widow will be able to have flowers to cheer her.

FREIGHT RATES DOWN.

Freight rates throughout the United States on practically all commodities were reduced July 1 by ten per cent, when the carriers of the country put into effect the decision rendered last month by the interstate commerce commission in the general rate case.

New schedules incorporating reductions have been completed in the weeks since the decision was handed down in every territory, according to the commission's record, though a series of orders abrogating rules and regulations concerning publication of new rates and like details were necessary to prevent delays in some instances.

Agricultural commodities will be the only important traffic which the ten per cent cut will not affect, rates on these commodities having been reduced last January. One or two other classifications of freight have also been given lower rates by commission orders in recent months and these also are excluded from the new cuts.

Railroad statisticians estimate that the general rate decision will cause a decrease of $350,000,000 annually in the nation's freight bill.

OPTIMISM PREVAILS.

At the end of the first half of 1922 an air of encouragement, of coming prosperity was found to be prevailing, according to the commercial reporting agencies. In its report at the close of June, Bradstreet's made the following comment regarding general conditions:

"A very fair degree of activity and a really notable feeling of optimism characterize the trade and industrial situation at the turn of the year. It would be idle to deny that the growing pinch in coal supplies and the prospects of widespread strikes, threatened by auxiliary railway workers, have given rise to some anxiety, but despite this, the general feeling seems decidedly equable. Indeed, sentiment as to the threatened railway trouble—400,000 men threatening to strike—seems to resemble that evinced as the coal strike approached, the dominant thought being that serious results will in some manner be avoided.

"As June closed there was a disposition to believe that the government would find a way out of the coal strike snarl, and there was also the feeling that the railway men either would not be able to or disposed to push the wage cut dispute to a point which might mean industrial disorganization. Perhaps the most notable features in the maintenance of fair activity in trade have been the apparently good pre-vacation demand for seasonable goods at retail and with western jobbers; the better tone of advices as to the cotton crop, which has been helped by higher temperatures; the continuance of good reports from other food crops, except oats, which have deteriorated further; the unprecedented activity in building and building materials; the strength of prices in the steel and allied trades, with advances in finished steel, scrap material, coal and coke, and the increasing number of reports from widely separated points of growing scarcity of labor, both skilled and unskilled."

SALES FOR THOSE WHO SEEK.

No man who can grow good stock need be without sale for it; if his production exceeds the local demand, ready buyers will be found among the readers of the Classified plant ads in The Review. It works like this:

Discontinue our Classified ad at once, as we sold all the mum plants we had with the first insertion in your paper.—Stuhldreher Bros., Mansfield, O., July 1, 1922.

Please stop my Classified ad on ferns, as we are swamped with orders and all sold out.—C. P. Bethards, Springfield, O., July 1, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

OBITUARY

Margaret Wayne Craig.

Suddenly Wednesday, June 28, at Ocean Grove, N. J., Margaret Wayne Craig, nee Patterson, wife of Philadelphia's foremost florist, Robert Craig, passed away. It is terribly sad. Mr. and Mrs. Craig had gone to the seashore only the week before; neither had been well, but it was thought that the invigorating sea air would benefit them both, and then suddenly the end came.

Mrs. Craig was well known and highly esteemed in the florists' world. She attended many of the S. A. F. conventions with her husband and was often present at the florists' social gatherings in Philadelphia. Mr. and Mrs. Craig celebrated their golden wedding last fall. Mrs. Craig is survived by her husband, two daughters and two sons: William Patterson Craig, of the Pierce-Arrow Co., and Robert Alexander Craig, present head of the Robert Craig Co. Funeral services were held at her residence, Fiftieth and Chestnut streets, Saturday afternoon, July 1. Many friends gathered to pay their last tribute of respect to Mrs. Craig. There were quantities of beautiful flowers.

Phil.

Alexander McCormick.

Alexander McCormick, 80 years old, one of the oldest and most prominent men in Baltimore county, died June 23, at his home at Raspeburg, Md. Mr. McCormick, who was looked upon as one of the best authorities in Maryland on horticulture and gardening, had been ill for about eight months with a complication of diseases. Until then he was active in his greenhouses at Raspeburg every day.

Mr. McCormick was born at Raspeburg. For twenty-four years he was president of the Baltimore County Fair Association, being its founder and first president. He was continuously re-elected until several years ago, when he refused further reelection. He also conducted one of the largest gardening businesses in the state.

Four sons survive: Carville McCormick, of Sparrows Point, Md., and Thomas, Howard and Clifton, of Raspeburg. There are also his brother, Charles, and five grandchildren.

Mrs. Nellie L. Thomson.

Mrs. Nellie L. Thomson, the wife of George Thomson, a well known florist of Quincy, Mass., died by taking poison June 26. Mrs. Thomson was loved by all her friends and it is thought that she was momentarily unbalanced through worry. She was a nurse before marriage and was a graduate of the Charlesgate Hospital Training School for Nurses. She had been in unsettled health for a number of months.

ST. PAUL AND MINNEAPOLIS.

This section has been visited lately by frequent rains; consequently, growing conditions have been good. Outside flowers are arriving in large quantities and are of good quality.

Last week hail damaged the Lakewood cemetery greenhouses to the extent of $1,500. Nessling the Florist lost about $700, and the Lyndall Floral Co.

and S. S. Cowgill suffered smaller losses.

The publicity committee of the November flower festival reports the promise of several new exhibits for the show.

A. M. Brand, of Faribault, Minn., was in town last week to attend a meeting of the Peony and Iris Society. He informed the committee that the American Peony Society will hold its show and meeting at St. Paul in 1923.

William McMurray, a St. Paul manufacturer, recently purchased thirty acres of the area known as Battle Creek and presented it to the city as a park. This adds a splendid piece of land to the city's park system.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The end of June found a large number of orders on file in the local stores for good-sized wedding decorations. With the demand running heavy for flowers of all kinds that could be used for wedding business, the wholesalers and growers found themselves hard hit because of a lack of stock with which to supply the retailers. As previously reported, early in the month the growers and wholesalers had far more stock than they could possibly dispose of, and great quantities of first-class roses, carnations and other flowers found their way to the waste heaps.

Valley was in exceptionally good demand, at $8 per hundred. There was a good deal of stephanotis and white bouvardia used in the better-grade wedding bouquets.

Gladioli are coming into the market in larger quantities and are of much better quality than they have been. The shortage of other flowers stimulated both the demand and the price, and good stock brought all the way from $8 to $12 per hundred.

Roses of all kinds have been scarce and as high as $35 per hundred was obtained for some exceptionally fine Russell. Short-stemmed stock of low grade could be had at from $4 per hundred up. Russell is fine, and the wholesalers do not have any trouble in getting the higher prices for the blooms offered. In any event, there are not enough roses to go around. Easter lilies are scarce and the price remains at $20 per hundred, the retailers picking up such stock as is offered as soon as it reaches the wholesalers.

Carnations are now small, but despite that, they are bringing from $2 to $4 per hundred. Some purple buddleia made its appearance last week. It is long-stemmed and is good for basket work.

Various Notes.

An announcement from the wholesale establishment of A. Gude Sons Co. states that it will soon open an up-to-date supplies department on the second floor of the store at 1318 I street, northwest. A. E. Gude has just returned from a trip to New York, where he made large purchases of ribbons, pottery, baskets and other supplies. Carpenters are now at work fencing off the office, which occupies the front of the second floor of the store, and as soon as the firm gets its display cases, counters and so forth in place, the newly equipped department will be thrown open to the trade.

The wholesale houses are now closing at noon Saturdays, because by that time they have each week disposed of all the stock that they have to offer. From now on, the downtown section of Washington will be more or less deserted, due to the all-day closing on Saturday of all of the large department and specialty stores. In fact, the retail florists' stores and restaurants are among the few business establishments wherein some sort of all or part-day closing on Saturdays will not be observed.

The minimum wage board of the District of Columbia has declined to order a reduction in the minimum wage for women and girls and the base pay of $16.50 per week will remain operative.

The Senate has agreed to the bad-check legislation for the District of Columbia, and it is estimated that hereafter large sums of money will be saved the florists, because in the past they have been more or less hard hit by accepting checks which the banks later refused to honor.

A. E. G.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

In spite of a poor start, June turned out to be an excellent month, some of the wholesale houses being able to report increases over the sales for the same month last year. The gains were made in the second half of the month, which was brisk enough to overcome losses in the first two weeks occasioned by hot weather, a glutted market and low prices.

The last week of June was good; indeed, the demand lapped over into July, affording an almost complete clearance on Saturday, the first day of the new month. This week, containing the Fourth of July, usually is considered as the duller of the year, but there seems to be no disposition to complain. The market was active July 3, considering that the next day was the one holiday of the year which means absolutely nothing in the lives of florists, and most of the wholesale houses had enough business on the Fourth itself to keep them open until noon.

Of course the market is down to summer conditions of supply and demand, but the general opinion is that supply is a little less than usual at this date, while demand is, if anything, a little better. For several years there has been a steady growth in the summer business. Various factors have impelled increasing numbers of retailers to keep up their sales effort in summer, with the result that the hot weather market for flowers, in Chicago at least, is proportionately much broader than it was in the old days of the wholesale commission business. With the steadily, even rapidly, increasing number of retail stores, each trying to do enough business to avoid a loss in July and August, it seems as if the tendency toward more summer business should continue. At any rate, the wholesalers are counting on better summer business than last year.

At present the supply of good flowers is close to low-water mark. The principal item is roses. The growers have finished replanting and are resting the plants that are to be carried over. The cut from the earliest planted young stock has begun, so that the supply will not go much lower and soon will begin to increase. There are plenty of good roses; good, that is, for the time of year; they are nice, clean flowers, though small, and the average stems are not long. White is the only scarce variety.

Carnations are about gone. Quantities still come in, but most of them are too poor to ship, or even to sell over the counter, and the growers soon will throw them out for replanting. Indoor sweet peas also are near the end of their season; few of them are good enough to sell and the growers are busy planting mums in place of the peas. The supply of giganteum lilies has gone down and the price has gone up.

Peonies are running low; only three lots remain in storage and two of these are small quantities. Peonies have been selling well since the supply was got under control and good prices are being realized.

Outdoor flowers are more abundant, but aside from gladioli they are not much of a market factor. The local cut of gladioli has begun and the supply will increase rapidly. These promise to be the standby of the market for the next few weeks, available in any quantity necessary to meet the demands of the retailers.

The greens situation is quiet. There is a full line, but occasionally asparagus bunches run short, as the Florida growers ship intermittently.

Sam Pearce Retires.

For some time Sam Pearce has been telling his friends that many years of hard and continuous work were beginning to wear on his health, and that he would like to sell out and retire.

Now comes the announcement that he has made an arrangement with the E. C. Amling Co. to take over the greenhouse property, and that Mr. Pearce and his two sons will sail from New York July 8 for a holiday in Europe.

Sam Pearce has attained world wide fame as a forcer of bulbs. With about 40,000 feet of glass intensively operated, he has specialized on bulb forcing and has attained a skill and volume perhaps unequalled in the United States. His name is known in Japan, Holland, France, England and the Guernsey Island as well as here. Mr. Pearce has been a hard and tireless worker for many years and has earned the ability to retire.

C. J. Michelsen states that the Pearce greenhouses will be operated by the same crew of employees without change of policy. Henry Wehrman, one of the

In its issue of June 8 The Review announced that Poehlmann Bros. Co. had made a 15-year lease on the building across the alley, south, from Ameling's. News of the deal is now reaching the daily papers. The Tribune gave this version of it one day last week:

Florist row, at the north end of Wabash avenue, is to have a new tenant. The Chicago Title & Trust Co. has taken title for an undisclosed purchaser to the 40x96 at 163-165 North Wabash, at the southeast corner of Benton place, improved with a five-story building. The price paid was $220,000.

Negotiations are now under way with one of Chicago's largest florists to occupy the building. The estate of Anna W. Phelps sold the property to Martin J. Ahern, who transferred it to the Title & Trust Co. Alfred C. Cahn, of Warren Cahn's office, was broker. In the one block of Poehlmann Bros. Co. expects to use only two floors and basement at first. Possession will be had within a month, but remodeling and installation of equipment will take some time.

ROSES and GLADIOLI

Various Notes.

Competition in this market never has been keener than now.

The many Chicago friends of George H. Pieser, long active in the trade in this city, will be interested in the note in the St. Louis news-letter in this issue, announcing that Mr. Pieser is about to open a wholesale commission house in that city.

June was a hard month for the growers with stock in the field, also for working under glass. The mean temperature was 2 degrees above normal, there was eighty-two per cent of the possible sunshine (371 hours out of a possible 455) and the rainfall was only a trace, twelve one-hundredths of an inch, the least ever recorded here in June.

Max L. Cohen leaves July 7, with the Elks, for their trip to Atlantic City.

Jegen will open a second store, on Belmont avenue, just off Broadway, as soon as the alterations necessary to fit the space for use as a flower store have been made.

William F. Hummel will open a flower store August 1 at the corner of Dakin street and Broadway. On the corner, which is midway between Irving Park boulevard and Sheridan road, a small brick store is just being completed. Though the Briggs Floral Co. is but a block away, at Sheridan and Broadway, and Youngquist's Flower Shop almost as near, a few doors west of Broadway on Irving Park boulevard, the neighborhood is one that should reward the enterprise of another florist.

In view of the consideration now being given by the Wholesale Cut Flower Association to establishing here a credit and collection system to be operated somewhat along the lines of the one in New York, it is of interest to note that Kennicott Bros. Co. has for some time been handling such matters through the Lyon Adjustment Co., 1080 South Wabash avenue, and that both Mr. Kennicott and Mr. Ellis state it is the most efficient agency they ever have employed on such work. It is understood the Lyon people operate in the furniture trade a credit and collection service quite similar to the one the wholesalers' association has in mind.

Peter Duris says the month just ended was the best June the Central Floral Co. has had. Most of the wedding orders were small, but they received more of them than ever before. Mr. Duris says sales for the first six months of 1922 have been practically the same as for the first half of 1921, and that the cost of flowers has been a little less than last year, affording a slightly better profit. He is now engaged in collecting charge accounts, as he finds it poor practice to let bills run through the summer; by autumn they are so old people hate to pay them and many go elsewhere instead.

R. Scheffler cut the first gladioli July 1, on his big field at Wheaton.

H. B. Kennicott says his company's sales for June exceeded those of June, 1921, a most satisfactory showing, all things considered.

S. Y. Bloom, 822 East Sixty-third street, says the flower business on the south side Rialto has been excellent this spring, but he notes a tendency in the fruit stores and fancy groceries to break into the game. Mr. Bloom says he believes legitimate competition between florists usually gives life to the trade, but he deprecates outside competition, because such stores usually follow the department store method of selling plants and cut flowers at less than florists' prices for the purpose of attracting buyers for their regular lines.

P. L. McKee, of the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., drove to Pana, Ill., the other day to attend the annual picnic of the factory employees of the company. The picnic was held in Kitchell park and about 300 employees and their families attended. Mr. McKee addressed the employees, as did the mayor, Mr. Vidler, and H. A. McKee, factory superintendent.

George Mohn, who has been on the road for the E. C. Amling Co. almost constantly since October 1, denies that he will take a ride for his vacation. "You will find me on the back porch at 424 Center street if you want me in the next two weeks," said he.

A few days ago the Schiff bank celebrated its thirtieth anniversary and ordered 8,000 carnations of George Fisher & Bro., to be given as boutonnières to the bank's visitors. So unexpectedly large was the bank's patronage that day that before night Fisher & Bro. had supplied 20,000 flowers.

John M. Weiland, Jr., well known as the son of John Weiland, of 1614 Sherman street, Evanston, and 1161 Wilmette avenue, Wilmette, has bought the establishment of H. C. Wullbrandt, at 5315-17 West Madison street, known as the Globe Greenhouses. The store will be remodeled and a new front put in. A large show house will be built along the seventy-five feet of Madison street frontage and the place will be made modern and up-to-date throughout. Mr. Weiland will drop the old title and do business under his own name.

Peony Show.

A fine peony show was held at Duluth, June 27 and 28, under the auspices of the Northeastern Horticultural Society. Peonies in this section are always two or three weeks later in blooming than in other parts of Minnesota and were just at their best during the show. Fourteen exhibitors showed about 300 vases of something over 100 varieties. Judge F. H. Cutting, the pioneer peony grower in the section, exhibited over sixty varieties but not in competition. A. M. Brand, of the Brand Nursery Co., Faribault, judged the exhibits. The Duluth Floral Co. exhibited a nice basket of peonies and the Quality Flower Shop furnished vases and baskets to help make the show attractive.

J. M. Kleitsch, an enthusiastic amateur who has lately taken up peony growing, won the loving cup offered by the Commercial Club, on his collection of twenty-five varieties. O. S. Andresen, another enthusiast, won second place for his collection of twenty-five and sweep-stake for the best vase at the show with a vase of Therese. The show was held in the rooms of the First National bank, which were not large enough for the crowds who wished to visit the exhibit. The premiums will be paid in roots to the total value of $160, contributed by the Brand Nursery Co., Faribault; Franklin Nursery, Minneapolis, and Lee R. Bonnewitz, Van Wert, Ohio.

The Market.

The fall of the gladiolus from the absurd figures obtained on Monday to the exceedingly moderate prices asked Saturday was the result of last week. The example given of the gladiolus is typical of the market. Monday, June 26, was extremely active; a large business was done at high prices. The market eased Tuesday and Wednesday; by Saturday, July 1, it was dull. The supply, except of gladioli, was not large. Prices were moderate.

The gladiolus is the leading flower today. From a small beginning two weeks ago, the shipments have increased to large proportions. Much of the stock being fine, it is often sold in the original boxes, a great improvement. While asters have made their appearance, they do not amount to much yet. The number is small and the rains have impaired them.

Valley had a fine run last week. Easter lilies are in fair supply. There are some good cattleyas, both C. Mossiae and C. gigas. Pyrethrum and candytuft are good now. Hardy ferns are in heavy supply.

There are good roses in the leading varieties, but carnations are generally poor.

Baseball.

The opening game of what promises to be a brilliant baseball season was played at Belmont Thursday afternoon, June 29. The contest, Bayersdorfer vs. Rice, was an exhibition, not a championship game. The rivalry was keen and there was a good attendance. The Bayersdorfers, who looked well in their new suits, won after an interesting battle by a score of 8 to 3. Bobby Shoch was injured in the second inning; Raymond Brunswick replaced him.

A Real Live Story.

The telephone bell rang. It was a long-distance call from Brown Mills, in the pines, away down in the heart of South Jersey, for William Keller, in Norristown, Pa. Could Mr. Keller come down to Brown Mills the next day, Friday? Mr. Keller said he had an engagement Friday; he could come on Monday. No, Monday would not do. Why not Friday? Pots were wanted. So Mr. Keller decided he must arrange to go. Aided by his trusty Henry, Mr. Keller covered fifty-two and six-sevenths miles early the next morning. On his promises that they would be shipped the following Monday, he received an order for 50,000 flower pots, 45,000 3-inch and 5,000 5-inch, one carload in all. The pots were shipped on time. They are now being used for growing blueberries in frames outdoors. This is how it occurred.

Joseph J. White, Inc., at Brown Mills, N. J., is a large grower of cranberries and blueberries. Aided by liberal prizes offered for the best blueberry plant in fruit and by the United States Government Experimental Station, the firm has developed a new race of blueberries that produce most wonderful berries. These berries are said to be as large as strawberries. Last season they commanded unheard-of prices on the New York market. It is now planned to distribute the stock.

But you ask, what has all this to do with flowers? Nothing directly; indirectly, a good deal. It is interesting to know that anyone excepting a florist could use 50,000 flower pots at a crack. It is interesting to know that an ordinary berry like a blueberry can be so improved by cross-fertilization and cultivation as to warrant such expenditure and to establish a new price record.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, Alexander Forbes, Newark, N. J.;
secretary, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

JOHN HOOGENSTEYN & SONS, Bennebroek-Haarlem, Holland, have sent over the first American edition of their "Flower Seeds for Summer Sowing." They have operated in Europe for twenty-two years.

JULY 1 the Senate passed the agricultural schedule of the tariff bill, including rates on grass seeds in paragraph 761, but action was postponed on paragraph 762, covering garden and other field seeds. The rates fixed by the Senate are given in the report on a forward page of this issue.

ONE American dealer handling 1,000 cases of Paper Whites last season has booked at open prices orders for over 3,000 cases of this season's crop. As the French exporters insist on cash in advance of shipment, it means an investment of more than $100,000 to bring the bulbs over. Will the consumers take them when they find the price more than double that of last year? That is the question.

APPARENTLY stunned by the demands of the French bulb exporters, American dealers have made no move in the last week and few of them have cabled confirmation of any orders placed before prices were announced. They don't know where they are at. But word comes from France that the Hollanders are buying and are encouraging the growers and dealers to stand pat or even advance their prices. The Hollanders evidently believe high prices for French bulbs will help Dutch bulbs.

THE 1922 production of orchard grass in the Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio and Virginia districts is estimated to be approximately 200,000 bushels, compared with about 125,000 bushels last year. A larger crop in the Missouri district is also expected. The increased production is due mainly to the larger yields per acre, but also to the fact that many fields which were not cut for seed last year because of too thin a stand were harvested this year, thus accounting for the increased acreage in most sections. Taking all districts together, the yield per acre was about forty per cent larger and the acreage about twenty per cent larger than last year. The 1921 crop, however, was one of the smallest in some years. Stocks from that crop were augmented by the liberal carry-over of the fairly large 1920 crop.

WILLIAM G. HAEBICH, of La Crosse, Wis., has gone into the seed business. For many years it has been his desire to do so. He was brought up in Germany, where he learned the florists' trade and was for thirty-five years in touch with a number of the seed specialists of that country. Twenty-five years ago he made his home in America, following his profession. He held jobs as foreman and manager with some notable concerns. He specialized with much success in cyclamens, pansies and snapdragons. In his seed business he is specializing in florists' seeds, especially cyclamen, pansy, primula, cineraria and snapdragon. He says he "didn't go into the seed business so much for the money as for the pleasure it affords him to help his brother florists in the improvement of conditions, especially as regards getting better seeds for less money."

SEEDED potato acreage in Aroostook county, Maine, will at least equal, and probably exceed that of last year. In other areas the acreage of last year has been generally maintained. Early plantings have a nearly perfect stand, and are coming finely, although a few reports of seed rotting in the ground have been received from Aroostook county.

CALIFORNIA VEGETABLE SEEDS.

The general growing condition of vegetable seed crops in California is better than at this time last year, according to reports received by the United States Department of Agriculture. The rainfall has been more nearly normal in all sections and it is anticipated that less irrigation will be required than for the past two years.

Many of the crops, however, are two to three weeks late, and some replanting of lettuce and radish has been necessary. The planting of garden pole beans has been completed, and the season has been ideal for germination of the seed and development of the young plants.

There is an increased acreage of most kinds of vegetable seed in California over that of last year, although dealers have been slow to place contracts, and growers, some of whom still have a surplus on hand, have been reluctant to plant a speculative acreage.

SAFEGUARDS IN GARDEN SEEDS.

Seedsman's Duty.

The seedsman fulfills his duty and renders service for which he is entitled to recompense when he delivers to the seed consumer viable seeds that will produce under favorable conditions a merchantable crop of the specific variety which the consumer purchases. I will analyze this statement: By delivery of viable seeds, I distinguish between those seeds which have life only and those which have vitality enough to produce a crop. You will note I say "produce under favorable conditions"; I eliminate the word normal because normal is impossible to define. What would be normal environment unless favorable? I use the words "merchantable crop," though this, perhaps, should be qualified by the words, "on a good or favorable market," because on a glutted market, sometimes, no vegetable product is really merchantable. By "crop of the specific variety purchased" I mean an average uniform product of the particular variety sold, such as might be expected from seed grown by or under the supervision of an experienced seed grower. Some varieties are known to be unfixed; hence this qualification. If the seed sold is purported to be select stock reselected, or stock seed for which an extra price over that for standard stock is paid, there is an added obligation on the seedsman's part to furnish a better than average uniformity and sometimes other qualities, as earliness or precocity in season, size, shape, etc.

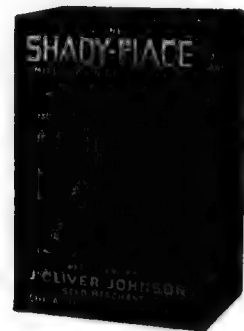

In the general routine of the seed business there may be four steps in distribution from the farm or plot on which seed is actually grown and saved, until it reaches the hands of the consumer: First is the actual grower. Second is the contract grower, who sells the large general seedsmen. The contract grower specializes in certain vegetables or flowers. He usually supplies farmers planting stocks (stock seeds) and contracts for the product, generally at a fixed price for certain quality. The growing farmer is supposed, among other things, to return seed of good or satisfactory germination, free from weather damage and mechanical mixture in threshing. Third is the wholesaler, or jobbing seedsman. Such a seedsman renders a great service to the seed industry as a whole. Usually national in operations, he acquires information on seed problems, such as market demands, adaptability of varieties, methods of cultivation, etc., much more quickly and thoroughly than is possible for growers with a limited production or retailers with a limited area or territory for doing business. The jobber is also a pioneer in developing new seedsmen and outlets for the seed producers. Fourth is the retailer, counter or mail order seedsman.

On the other hand, we have seedsmen who perform from one to all four of these various functions of distribution more or less efficiently and profitably.

Stock Seed.

The first requisite for growing seed which will produce a "merchantable crop of a specific variety" is suitable stock seed. Stock seed is the extra selected mother seed which is planted to produce commercial seed. The production of the proper kind of stock seed is expensive. To grow the highest type of stock seed a scientist is required, one who knows plant eugenics from the practical as well as the scientific and theoretical side, and he must also be a trained seedsman who knows methods of both seed and crop production and seed marketing. Theoretically, the more of efficient skill and labor spent on selection or plant breeding, the better the stock seed. In actual production, one soon strikes that inexorable economic law of "diminishing returns." We have instances in seed growing of the "plant breeder gone wild," with thousands of small dabs of individual plant selections scattered over acres that would take a large corps of skilled men to observe and tabulate. Nearly all the better seed growers are well acquainted with and practice "line breeding," and besides understand the many idiosyncrasies of their particular crops, a knowledge of which is acquired only after years of experience and usually at big expense. Almost every crop requires special methods and practices to produce the better stock seed, and in many cases this variation of selection methods applies to different varieties of the same vegetable. Varieties differ as to their variability; some are better "fixed" than others. Those more variable require special care; environment of both stock seed and the commercial crop are important factors. The latest pathological work of producing disease-resistant strains finds the up-to-date seed grower fully awake and cognizant of its possibilities.

The Seed Farmer.

Seed farmers, or actual growers, make up two classes: The first furnishes his own stock seed and sells the products of his farm to the seed trade under his own name. For the second, stock seed is furnished by someone else—the contract grower—who in turn sells the seed raised, assuming what might in a liberal sense be termed its parentage. The first class are usually individuals, firms or corporations of some means, ability and responsibility. The second class run from men of ability and means to the smallest tenant farmers who plant "contract" seed because sometimes they lack the means to purchase seed for ordinary farm crops.

The ideal seed farmer plants the better class of stock seed on suitable and properly prepared land at the right time and sufficiently isolated to prevent cross pollination, through wind or insects, with other varieties. He properly tends and "rogues" the growing crops, pulls out the visible undesirable off plants and, after ripening, harvests the same with the minimum amount of weather other seeds is eliminated. In the case of biennials, there is the selection of the good plants or roots and the rejection of the "rogues" and the proper storing, pitting and planting out of the same.

Use of Improper Seed.

All of this sounds more or less simple in the saying, but it is very, very difficult in performance. If the original seed grower does not produce good seed, of course, it is impossible for the contract seed grower, the wholesaler, or the retailer, in turn, to function properly. I shall cite a number of the places where the grower sometimes falls down:

In the first place, and most often, improper stock seed is used, poor stock seed, maybe. It may be, first, off grade on selection. This may be due to carelessness, and also ignorance, as to proper methods of selection, but in my limited experience is generally the result of taking a chance with untested commercial seed to raise certain crops for which there has arisen an extraordinary or unexpected demand. The beginner usually has to take this chance, and here is the reason the old, conservative seedsman gives exceedingly few, if any, orders to the new grower. Depending, of course, on the species and specific variety, a good uniform stock not reselected each year runs "off" rapidly and will show sports, from a small percentage to one where the original sort can hardly be recognized. The extreme war demand for all kinds of seed resulted in the planting of thousands of acres with unselected stock seed, as all seedsmen can tell from bitter experience.

Second, the seed may be unsuited for the environment where planted. This applies to particular crops only and must be determined by experience. I cite a few examples: California growers tell us French radish seed, much used for stock seed, is undesirable except to produce their own stock seed. A good European strain of certain lettuce must also be grown a season or two before being marketed. American asters, of perfect type in the United States, will show "center" grown in Germany. Cabbage stocks for Washington must be selected to a smaller type than for growth in Long island. The damage of moving corn and the resulting change in the type and season are well recognized. It would seem that disease-resistant strains of plants must be bred in those sections or localities where such diseases are prevalent.

Other Stumbling Blocks.

The second place where the grower falls down is on proper land and proper preparation. Even when the right kind of stock seed is used, the labor of the seed grower has only begun. Under this head I am going to include volunteer crops. Volunteer crops have worked great havoc in the milder climates, and especially good examples of this are the sweet pea and garden pea fields of California, where some bad mixtures have resulted from following one variety after another on the same field. The raising of seed on disease-affected soil of such crops as onion, cabbage and sweet corn, pathologists tell us, is entirely wrong.

Third, the necessity of proper isolating from wind and insect pollinating is seemingly obvious, but we seedsmen are always learning. Not a year goes by but we have numerous examples of such mixture. The small percentage of mixture of wild radish and off colors in California-grown radish is always a reminder, as is, too, the spotted grains nearly always found in sweet corn and the off-colored onion bulbs in many stocks. Necessity, lack of land and difference of opinion as to safe distances lead the grower to take chances many times, with regret later. A perfect dark red stock of table beet recently planted too close to mangel lost its identity completely the following year. The mangel color, evidently being dominant, so marked the progeny that practically every specimen showed white rings and poor color, as well as the Mendelian percentage of mangels.

Fourth, roguing of the growing crop is always a benefit and many times essential. Many sorts can show as much as ten per cent "offs" in the consumer's crop when not rogued. Carelessness, false economy and too large acreages are causes for lack of roguing. Roguing, or the lack of roguing, also occurs in the sorting of biennial roots, bulbs or plants, as beet, carrot, onion, parsnip, etc.

Fifth, the seed farmer often injures his crop at the last minute because he lacks proper machinery or equipment to harvest and take care of the ripened crop. Safeguards, such as sheds, crates, sheets, a supply of special harvesting and threshing equipment are essential. Too often, for the lack of such, crops lie in the fields, exposed to bad and inclement weather, and are damaged irreparably in appearance and germination.

Sixth, many times the seed farmer ruins good seed in cleaning and thresh-

SNAPDRAGON

Snapdragons have moved into first place with all wide-awake florists and are earning growers more money than any flower in cultivation. This is especially true among growers with a retail outlet. Splendid blooms may be had any month in the year, with a bumper crop over the three great flower days, Easter, Mothers' Day, and Memorial, extending throughout June graduations.

Snapdragons are easy to grow and good seed may be had at such small cost that there is no excuse for having inferior stock. Producing snapdragon seed is our one business and the ever increasing orders show how well we attend to it. Years of experience and our reputation are back of every packet of seed. See complete list below. First comes ing operations. In the cleaning of melon and other vine seeds, tomato, pepper and the like, the same cleaning machinery is used for several varieties. If not watched with rigorous care, these machines are fruitful sources of expensive and disastrous mixtures. The same chance for mixtures occurs in threshing machines used successively for several varieties of peas, beans, radish, etc.

These are a number of the examples of causes for poor seed against which the seed farmer must safeguard himself.

We now pass on to contract growers.

Contract Grower.

After supplying the right kind of stock seed to his farmer growers, the contract grower should check up, first, the type of farmer who is growing the seed. The contract grower who has a poor class of seed farmers, the chances are, is not delivering to his customers a good grade of seed.

Second, the ideal contractor knows the land on which his seed farmer is planting the crop and, in case of crops liable to mixture from wind or insects, how the surrounding land is going to be planted, so as to preserve isolation.

Third, the ideal contract grower should inspect every one of his different contract fields and rogue them himself or check up the roguing.

Fourth, the better contract grower has his farmers properly equipped with harvesting supplies and machinery to prevent loss from weather.

Fifth, the utmost care must be exercised to prevent mixture in cleaning and threshing. There are some clever systems and methods of handling such cleaning and threshing machinery, worked out after years of experience. There are, on the other hand, beginners and other seed contractors who, I might say, trust to luck. "It is better to be lucky than rich."

Sixth, good storage facilities are necessary, as well as dryers for use in which bears the title, "Seeds of Vegetables and Florists' Flowers; also Perennials and Biennials for Summer and Autumn Sowing." The catalogue is notable for its accuracy, for its clearness of typography and for a conciseness of descriptions which resulted in comprehensiveness without crowding. The prices are quoted in British currency.

Swain Nelson & Sons Co., Chicago, Ill.—A businesslike, pocket-form catalogue—well printed, clearly arranged, accurate; condensed, yet comprehensive; twenty-four pages, in a tasteful gray cover. Peonies and other hardy herbaceous plants are listed, as well as full lines of hard-wooded stock, both fruit-bearing and ornamental. Attention is drawn to the company's extensive equipment for landscape work, and prominence is given to the motto, "Picturesque Effects Without Waiting."

Royal Palm Nurseries, Oneco, Fla.—Wholesale list, "for the trade only"; a neat 8-page booklet, in pocket form; printed with brown ink on cream-tinted paper and bound in a greenish-gray cover. The stock offered consists largely of palms, bamboos, tropical shrubs and other southern favorites, but also comprises some genera that are suitable for general distribution. "Our trade is primarily retail," says the company, "but we nearly always have a surplus in some lines which we can afford to dispose of at wholesale rates; hence this wholesale trade list."

Peterson Nursery, Chicago, Ill.—"Peterson's master list" of peonies and irises, "the two specialties to which Peterson's nursery has been devoted for a third of a century." This catalogue is a unique combination, consisting of a large folder and extra pages of cultural and descriptive matter. The entire catalogue is printed in black and red and is bound in a handsomely colored cover. The varieties are arranged according to price, type or class, color and season of blooming. The famous Peterson guarantee, to "replace with three every plant blooming untrue to description," is again declared to be in full effect.

Peter Henderson & Co., New York, N. Y.—"Henderson's Midsummer Catalogue," issued in conformity with the motto, "Make your garden work full time"; illustrated, thirty-two pages, compiled in this company's distinctive and interesting style. Vegetable and flower seeds, garden implements and sundries are listed. At the beginning is a table which shows the latest date at which certain vegetables may be planted, in the latitude of New York, with the approximate number of days required for the growth and maturity of the crop. Another introductory page contains information on the storage of vegetables for winter use.

Henry S. Cooper, Dunmavin Peony Gardens, Kenosha, Wis.—"Tips and Pointers for Beginners with Peonies." This 60-page "combined catalogue and manual, unvarnished facts edition," is really a worth-while contribution to peony literature—interesting, original and finely illustrated. Besides numerous pictures in black and white, there are three full-page colored plates, each of which shows one of the most popular varieties. In the center of the book, also, is a double-page plate, in which a dozen standard varieties of peonies appear in their natural tints. Successful peony growing, which forms the theme of the greater part of the book, is termed by Mr. Cooper "the heaven of peony culture." The diseases and pests of peonies, which are the subject of discussion in seven pages, are designated by him as "peony purgatory," but he says that this purgatory is seldom serious, "only a minor matter," and is easily shunned.

A SHOWER OF SHOWERS.

Though florists in some localities complain of the absence of the one-time June business in graduation bouquets, those in other places are more fortunate. In Boston they are particularly so.

For instance, a feature of the graduation exercises of the Walnut Hill School, for young ladies, was a shower of shower bouquets. Each graduate—there were twenty-three—was presented a bouquet in the class colors, white and lavender. These bouquets are shown in the illustration on this page.

The shower was a great surprise and the innovation most effective. Sweet peas of the most delicate tints, bordered with maidenhair fern, with flowing showers, made this work of Thomas F. Galvin, Inc., Boston, of outstanding brilliance.

"ADVERTISE IT WITH FLOWERS."

A Chicago advertising agency calls attention to the manner in which the Lehon Co., of Chicago, manufacturers of Mule-Hide roofing and shingles, made use of flowers to advertise their product at the recent convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, held at Milwaukee, Wis.

"The readers of your publication," writes the Business Research Co., "may be interested to know that to the slogan, 'Say It with Flowers,' can be added the phrase, 'Advertise It with Flowers.'"

"This statement is by no means a hollow one, because the Lehon Co. definitely secured attention and results through the employment of their big floral piece.

"The receptacle, shown in the illustration, was five feet in diameter and was made of galvanized iron. In it 3,600 carnations were placed to form the trademark.

"The Lehon Co. states that it not only created enthusiastic comment, but that it netted a nice business for the local dealer in Mule-Hide products."

Figuring Interest on Capital Owned.

Rapid progress is being made today in a department of the retail florists' business which long languished; namely, the accounting department. Some day a uniform system will be devised for this trade, as has been for other trades, in some cases by trade associations, in some by the bureau of business research at Harvard University. In the meantime, advance is steady by florists as individuals. In one respect practices of retailers, not only florists but others as well, in bookkeeping vary considerably, and more uniformity must be obtained before one man's costs and profits are to be compared accurately with another's.

Owing to different methods of financing businesses, significant figures for comparison can be obtained only by including interest both on borrowed money and on net investment as an operating expense. The net investment on which interest is charged is exclusive of real estate, because the charge on the books for the use of the real estate is made to "rentals."

The average net investment on which interest on capital owned is determined is the average net worth of the business. It is the sum of the assets (not including real estate), less the sum of the liabilities to outsiders (not including capital stock or surplus of a corporation or undivided profits). The assets include cash, notes and accounts receivable, net inventories of merchandise, equipment, supplies and prepayments, such as prepaid insurance. Good will is not included unless purchased outright. The liabilities include notes and accounts payable and accrued items, such as unpaid taxes (not mortgages on real estate).

A corporation determines its net investment in the same way as a proprietorship or a partnership, irrespective of the amount of capital stock issued. The capital stock authorized may or may not equal the net investment; hence the net investment is determined independently.

The rate of interest to be used in calculating the amount to be included on the books under "Interest on Capital Owned" is the ordinary rate on long-time, reasonably secure investments in the locality in which the business is situated.

For Uniform Accounting.

In its investigation of the costs of doing business in retail trades, the Harvard bureau of business research considers as an operating expense interest on owned capital as well as interest on borrowed capital. The effects of this treatment of interest are that total expense is increased and a more exact definition is given to net profit. The final earnings of the business, however, are unaffected, since the interest charge for owned capital is credited back to the business through an item called "Interest and Rentals Earned" before the total net gain for the year is determined. It is necessary that interest on capital owned and interest on capital borrowed both be handled in the same way if comparable figures are to be collected from a large number of businesses. If one merchant is operating entirely on his own capital and another borrows half the capital employed in his business, for example, relative interest charges on the two businesses obviously can be compared only by determining the total interest charge for each business. While this method of treatment readily will be conceded as necessary to the securing of fully comparable expense figures, there are other aspects of the interest question which concern many business men. There is practically complete agreement that from every point of view interest on borrowed capital should be treated as an expense, but there has been some controversy in regard to the proper method of accounting for interest on owned capital.

"Expense" and "Expenditure."

In discussing this question it is necessary that a clear distinction be made between "expense" and "expenditure." Inasmuch as no outside liability is incurred or expenditure made for proprietor's salary or rent of owned

A MINE I FOUND

A few summers ago was motoring through some of the less frequented roads in the White Mountains of New Hampshire.

It had grown dark and we were miles from anywhere, with no idea of where to stop for the night. Finally, snuggled up under the lee of a mountain we found a little cabin occupied by a kind of half hermit, who consented to give us shelter.

The next morning I got up at peep of dawn to prowl around, hunting for wild flowers, and new trees.

Struck an overgrown path that, with much difficulty, followed for a mile up the mountain; of a sudden there loomed up from the parted branches a huge building going to decay.

It was a copper mine upon which hundreds of thousands of dollars had been spent, a week's run of copper made, and then abandoned.

Somebody had flivvered.

It had been thought out but not thought through.

Every once in a while when some of the boys come to me with a half baked idea, I simply say—"What's this, another White Mountain Copper Mine?"

You and I know that the florist business today doesn't lack for ideas.

But it does lack for ideas that are thought through as well as thought out.

"Say It with Flowers," was thought out.

But we still have the job before us of thinking it through.

store, some accountants believe that no specific charges should be made for these items as expense. The "net profit" shown by subtracting total expense, exclusive of these items, from gross profit includes compensation for proprietor's time, rent for his store if owned, interest on his investment, and a final net profit as a reward for the risks which he assumes and for his proficiency in managing the business. Under such a method it is left to the proprietor to compute these four items for comparison with the total "net profit." As a matter of practice, many proprietors who follow this plan do not make even a mental computation and frequently fail to realize that their businesses are not yielding them the returns to which they are entitled. KEEPING THE BOOKS PROPERLY.

Figuring Interest on Capital Owned.

Rapid progress is being made today in a department of the retail florists' business which long languished; namely, the accounting department. Some day a uniform system will be devised for this trade, as has been for other trades, in some cases by trade associations, in some by the bureau of business research at Harvard University. In the meantime, advance is steady by florists as individuals. In one respect practices of retailers, not only florists but others as well, in bookkeeping vary considerably, and more uniformity must be obtained before one man's costs and profits are to be compared accurately with another's.

Owing to different methods of financing businesses, significant figures for comparison can be obtained only by including interest both on borrowed money and on net investment as an operating expense. The net investment on which interest is charged is exclusive of real estate, because the charge on the books for the use of the real estate is made to "rentals."

The average net investment on which interest on capital owned is determined is the average net worth of the business. It is the sum of the assets (not including real estate), less the sum of the liabilities to outsiders (not including capital stock or surplus of a corporation or undivided profits). The assets include cash, notes and accounts receivable, net inventories of merchandise, equipment, supplies and prepayments, such as prepaid insurance. Good will is not included unless purchased outright. The liabilities include notes and accounts payable and accrued items, such as unpaid taxes (not mortgages on real estate).

A corporation determines its net investment in the same way as a proprietorship or a partnership, irrespective of the amount of capital stock issued. The capital stock authorized may or may not equal the net investment; hence the net investment is determined independently.

The rate of interest to be used in calculating the amount to be included on the books under "Interest on Capital Owned" is the ordinary rate on long-time, reasonably secure investments in the locality in which the business is situated.

For Uniform Accounting.

In its investigation of the costs of doing business in retail trades, the Harvard bureau of business research considers as an operating expense interest on owned capital as well as interest on borrowed capital. The effects of this treatment of interest are that total expense is increased and a more exact definition is given to net profit. The final earnings of the business, however, are unaffected, since the interest charge for owned capital is credited back to the business through an item called "Interest and Rentals Earned" before the total net gain for the year is determined. It is necessary that interest on capital owned and interest on capital borrowed both be handled in the same way if comparable figures are to be collected from a large number of businesses. If one merchant is operating entirely on his own capital and another borrows half the capital employed in his business, for example, relative interest charges on the two businesses obviously can be compared only by determining the total interest charge for each business. While this method of treatment readily will be conceded as necessary to the securing of fully comparable expense figures, there are other aspects of the interest question which concern many business men. There is practically complete agreement that from every point of view interest on borrowed capital should be treated as an expense, but there has been some controversy in regard to the proper method of accounting for interest on owned capital.

"Expense" and "Expenditure."

In discussing this question it is necessary that a clear distinction be made between "expense" and "expenditure." Inasmuch as no outside liability is incurred or expenditure made for proprietor's salary or rent of owned

A MINE I FOUND

A few summers ago was motoring through some of the less frequented roads in the White Mountains of New Hampshire. It had grown dark and we were miles from anywhere, with no idea of where to stop for the night. Finally, snuggled up under the lee of a mountain we found a little cabin occupied by a kind of half hermit, who consented to give us shelter. The next morning I got up at peep of dawn to prow around, hunting for wild flowers, and new trees.

Struck an overgrown path that, with much difficulty, followed for a mile up the mountain; of a sudden there loomed up from the parted branches a huge building going to decay. It was a copper mine upon which hundreds of thousands of dollars had been spent, a week's run of copper made, and then abandoned. Somebody had flivvered. It had been thought out but not thought through.

Every once in a while when some of the boys come to me with a half baked idea, I simply say—"What's this, another White Mountain Copper Mine?"

You and I know that the florist business today doesn't lack for ideas. But it does lack for ideas that are thought through as well as thought out. "Say It with Flowers," was thought out. But we still have the job before us of thinking it through.

store, some accountants believe that no specific charges should be made for these items as expense. The "net profit" shown by subtracting total expense, exclusive of these items, from gross profit includes compensation for proprietor's time, rent for his store if owned, interest on his investment, and a final net profit as a reward for the risks which he assumes and for his proiciency in managing the business. Under such a method it is left to the proprietor to compute these four items for comparison with the total "net profit." As a matter of practice, many proprietors who follow this plan do not make even a mental computation and frequently fail to realize that their businesses are not yielding them the returns to which they are entitled. Those who are opposed to charging the business with proprietor's salary and rent of owned store also consistently oppose the charging to expense of interest on capital owned, but do advise the charging of interest on capital borrowed to expense. It has become more and more commonly agreed, however, among accountants and other business men that it is advisable for each proprietor to charge his business with a salary equal to what he could earn if employed elsewhere, and also to charge as expense rent on an owned place of business equal to the rental for which the premises could be leased. There is such diversity in the form of proprietorship and ownership of premises that figures for expense are worthless unless based on a uniform accounting system providing for just such charges as these. The reasoning in regard to the desirability of including rent of owned store and proprietor's salary in expense applies with equal force to the question of interest on capital owned. No business is truly profitable unless it yields the proprietor not only a salary for his time and rent for his store, if he owns it, but also interest on his investment.

Figuring Net Investment.

Of course, there is frequently difficulty in determining the amount of the net investment. This difficulty of defining capital has been met by the definition which the Harvard bureau adopted. Inasmuch as rent is to be charged as a separate item, the value of land and buildings used in the business is not to be included in this principal sum. Good will, patents, trademarks and other intangible assets are excluded, as are also outside investments in other businesses or in other property. The items involved in the calculation are:

ASSETS.

Cash on hand and in bank.
Notes receivable.
Accounts receivable.
Securities.
Net inventory of merchandise.
Net inventory of equipment.
Net inventory of supplies.
Prepayments.

LIABILITIES.

Notes payable.
Accounts payable.
Accrued items.

The valuation of equipment is perhaps the most difficult point in the determination of net investment. A concern which is starting in business will charge its capital account with all equipment purchased at cost, including transportation charges. At each inventory period a proper amount should be charged to expense as depreciation and credited to this capital account. The balance of the account then represents the net investment in equipment—the original investment, plus additions, less the amount charged to expense as depreciation. A going concern which has not followed this method should make a valuation of its equipment at the amount which that equipment is actually worth and then depreciate that amount properly at each succeeding inventory period. Thus the charging of interest to expense encourages better accounting for actual investment and proper depreciation of equipment. The amount of net investment must be determined in the case of corporations entirely irrespective of the amount of capital stock authorized or issued. The capital stock may be much in excess of the real investment or, on the other hand, the business may be undercapitalized.

The Market.

It is gratifying to report that business in the cut flower market has held up well; in fact, each day has found a steady demand. The supply of roses has been exceptionally good, but the demand far exceeds what is being received in this market. Each day finds the wholesale houses practically cleaned up on roses. The varieties being received at the present time are White Killarney, White Ophelia, Premier, Columbia, Ward, Butterfly and Richmond. The demand, however, is the greatest for white, and in many instances customers have been disappointed. The demand for valley has also far exceeded the supply; in fact, valley is reported as being scarce in both the eastern and western markets. Orchids have also been in demand, but the supply is quite limited. Lilies and gladioli have been two of the main factors in the market and have been moving out at moderate prices.

The demand for gladioli has been exceptionally good, as in many cases there has been a daily clean-up. There have, however, been plenty of lilies for everyone. Plenty of outdoor flowers, such as sweet williams, blue lace flowers, fox-glove, coreopsis and phlox, have been coming into the market. These flowers have been moving fairly well.

Carnations have been arriving in large quantities and have been moving at reasonable prices; in fact, at the close of each day the market finds some carnations on hand. The quality is exceptionally good, considering the time of the year. A few yellow daisies have also been in the market and have moved fairly well.

The month of June has held its own with last year, and in some instances a small increase has been shown.

had, most of them are of poor quality. The hot spell is proving too much for them, and low prices prevail in all grades. Carnations are shrinking each day, both in number and size. Sweet peas seem to be out of the market for the present, and the peony crop is finished. Liliun auratum is fine and sells well. Gladioli are having a hard time, as the continuous dry and hot weather has burned them badly in the fields. The sale on valley during June was excellent.

There is much outdoor stock coming in daily from local growers. Included are candytuft, common field and Shasta daisies, cornflowers, stocks, feverfew and delphinium, all of which clean up pretty well each day.

Flat ferns have been more plentiful the last week, while asparagus and smilax cleans up almost daily.

Nomination of officers is on the program. Two attendance prizes will be given. Members with automobiles should be in waiting in the wholesale district to carry others with them. The start will be made at 1 o'clock promptly. The secretary is sending out special notices to all members, and one of the largest attendances of the year is looked for.

The St. Louis Association of Gardeners held its monthly meeting at Olivette, Mo., July 2, at the home of C. E. DeWever. After the meeting Mr. DeWever gave a demonstration of the Bolens power hoe, made by the Gilson Mfg. Co., which firm he represents.

J. F. Ammann returned home from his southern trip in the interest of the F. T. D. He reports the trip as most successful. Mr. Ammann will be in Dallas, Tex., July 5 to 7, to attend the Texas State Florists' Association convention. July 13 will find him in Tulsa, Okla., attending the meeting of the Oklahoma State Florists' Association. July 17 and 18 he will attend the meeting of the St. Louis district of the National Flower Growers' Association, at Rock Island, Ill., and July 25 he will meet with the Wisconsin State Florists' Association, at Oshkosh.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Weber, with their son and Mrs. Beyer, who is Mrs. Weber's mother, left early last week for a northern trip in their new Dorris car, for a stay during the hot months. Mr. Weber will return this week and again join the family later in the month. Arthur Beyer is in charge of the store in Mr. Weber's absence.

motor boat to the club grounds. In the party were Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Pilcher, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Rowe, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Gumz, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wagner, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar C. May, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Smith, and Mrs. Rowe, Sr., with W. A. Rowe, Jr.

Henry Duernberg, of Grimm & Gorly, left July 1 for Memphis, Tenn., on personal business. On his return this week, Mr. Duernberg, with his wife, will take an eastern trip. June 27 they celebrated their fourth wedding anniversary with friends.

Joseph Frank, July 1, closed his flower department in the Kresge 5 and 10-cent store for the summer. He will reopen it September 15. Mr. Frank will forego his usual eastern trip and take in the S. A. F. convention at Kansas City.

Otto Bruenig, W. J. Pilcher and Werner Bros., out in St. Louis county, have done well with their roses this season. All are still sending in a good cut daily of excellent quality.

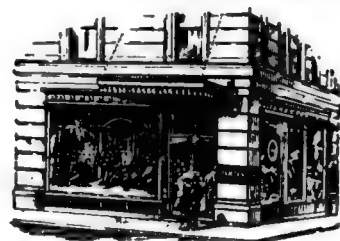

Morris H. Levine, of the M. H. Levine Co., New York, spent a few days here on his way to Dallas, Tex., and Tulsa, Okla. He says he will return to New York, coming west again for the S. A. F. convention.

George H. Pieser, well known in Chicago wholesale circles and last season with the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co. as manager of the cut flower department, will open a wholesale cut flower house under the name of the George H. Pieser Wholesale Floral Co., at 1317 Pine street, in the heart of the wholesale district. The opening is announced for July 15. A force of men is now at work installing two large refrigerators, tables and office fixtures. His telephone numbers are Olive 7240 and 7241.

The "Say It with Flowers" Bowling League will, according to Secretary George Kuehner, hold a meeting at one of the wholesale business houses and reorganize for the coming fall and winter seasons. Captains for the six teams will be elected. Members for each team will be drawn, and the bowling alleys for the season will be selected. Two teams will be selected to represent St. Louis in the S. A. F. bowling tournament during the convention at Kansas City.

The trustees of the Florists' Club report the receipt of a number of special prizes, from members of the trade, for the annual picnic, July 27. All wishing to offer special prizes should advise the trustees at once, as the program goes to press next week.

August H. Hummert, vice-president, and the force of the St. Louis Seed Co.

put in a busy week taking the annual inventory, after which work on the fall catalogue and bulbs have their attention. The season just closed, they say, was the best in years.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Berning will celebrate their seventh wedding anniversary, which fell on June 29, with a trip to Dallas, Tex., and Tulsa, Okla., July 5 to 14. On their return they will rest up for their next trip, to attend the S. A. F. convention at Kansas City.

The St. Louis weather man points out the fact that we are in for a long drought. No rainfall of over one-half inch in twenty-four hours has occurred since April 25. Less than one-fifth of the normal amount of rain for the season has fallen since May 1. The total rainfall for May was 1.26 inches and for June only six-tenths of an inch; the normal for May is 4.47 inches and for June 4.24. There is no immediate relief in sight. J. J. B.

The Market.

Carnations have about reached their limit for the season and roses are almost gone. Some of the growers have stopped cutting both. Roses from new stock will begin to arrive within a week or two. Gladioli are the backbone of the florists' business at present. Local stock is being cut and it is fine. Cornflowers, delphinium, buddleia, daisies, coreopsis, gaillardia—the usual run of hardy stock—are coming in plentifully enough to supply all needs.

June proved to be one of the best summer months that some of the florists ever had. Business has kept up without interruption. Funeral work has Growers are writing to the wholesalers that their plants are good and they will be able to cut heavily before long. Valley is scarce. This has been in heavier demand for weddings and corsages than in any previous year.

the bridal party passed was massed on either side with flowers. The bride's table held a large wreath of garden flowers, in the center of which was a fountain playing over electric lights. Twenty-five smaller tables each contained a wreath of garden flowers. Metal cloth covered all of the chandeliers, carrying out the scheme of white and pink, which predominated in the decorations. The bride's bouquet, made of 300 sprays of lilies of the valley, was a particularly beautiful thing which Hugo R. Neff worked out on original lines. The attendants carried large bouquets of garden flowers. The decoration was the handsomest of its kind ever seen in Joplin.

The Market.

The market during the last week has been extremely dull, affording a taste of the approaching vacation season. In a way just such a market must be expected, as at present good stock seems to be at a premium. Carnations more resemble pinks daily, while the local rose crop is away off. There is little good stock of the latter on the market, the greater portion being mostly short and medium lengths. Delphinium is in great demand, probably because it is scarce, for a few weeks ago, when the market was flooded, one could hardly give it away.

Sweet peas at present are swamping the market and are moving slowly. Lilies of all kinds are scarce, and there has been a strong demand for them. Calendulas, gaillardias, hydrangeas, water lilies, bachelor's buttons, coreop-

The Market.

Conditions last week remained about the same. There were about enough flowers reaching the market to meet the demand.

Gladioli are finding their way to the stores in larger quantities, for during the previous weeks the supply was small. Roses still hold their own and the quality of the flowers is quite good for this time of the year. Of course, there is a good supply of outdoor stock, such as heliopsis, feverfew, hardy sweet peas, etc. Orchids meet the demand, but the demand is small. Easter lilies are good. Carnations are pretty small, but they are still holding their place on the market. Some fine water lilies are being shipped from out of town to the local trade.

Various Notes.

The local trade was much shocked last week when they learned that the Leo Niessen Co., under the management of Mr. McKissick, would close its doors July 1. The local trade certainly has suffered a severe loss in Mr. McKissick,

The Market.

All cut flowers are scarce. A long dry spell has affected all outdoor flowers that might have been blooming at this time. Delphiniums are appearing slowly. Daisies have been ready sellers, but are none too abundant. Gypsophila has sold as rapidly as it has appeared. Roses are limited in supply and are bringing from $4 to $12. As is usual, carnations have seen better days and are now on the downward path, although the price has held well at $3 and $4 per hundred.

Gladioli have been irregular. The indoor stock is about over and outdoor varieties are but slowly appearing. In fact, all garden flowers have been greatly retarded, due to the weather.

Business has been good. Weddings have been numerous. The supply of orchids has been small and quickly utilized.

Various Notes.

Bedding stock has been in unusually heavy demand this season. A clean-up and beautifying campaign was carried on by the public service commission, and competitive prizes were offered the school children. Many yards were beautified that heretofore were barren. It is felt that the national flower show had a great influence on the general public in making attractive their homes and surroundings.

Last week was the best week for florists since the week of Memorial day. Funeral work was brisk and wedding work plentiful. The growers have experienced some difficulty in supplying stock. PORTLAND ROSE SHOW.

Branch Libraries Coöperate.

The 1922 Portland rose show, June 20 to 22, proved to be one of the most comprehensive and attractive exhibits ever staged by the Portland Rose Society. As has been the custom in former years, the rose show was held in connection with the annual Portland rose festival. A feature of this year's show, which the society members feel will do much toward stimulating rose culture throughout the city, was that section known as the district rose exhibits. Through the coöperation of the Portland central library and the librarians in charge of branch libraries, eighteen residential sections of Portland competed in the rose show, each with the idea of establishing its own section as the leading rose district of the city.

A beautiful silver trophy was offered by the Oregonian to the winning district. A second silver trophy was supplied by Frank Riggs, and a third by the Portland Rose Society. A fourth was contributed by H. H. Haynes, chairman of the district exhibits. The display for each district was limited in size, and consisted of a box exhibit of eighteen varieties, one basket containing at least twenty-five roses, either of one variety or mixed as to variety and color, and two small vases of at least three roses. Scoring was on the basis of 100 as the maximum number of points—twenty-five points as the maximum for the first day's exhibit, thirty-five on the second day and forty on the third day. The score of each exhibit was posted each day at noon.

Gresham won the first prize, with a total score for the three days of ninety-eight points. Willamette Heights won second prize, with a total of ninety-five points. Peninsula carried off third honors, with ninety-four and five-tenths points, and Arleta was a close fourth, with ninety-four points as a total score. The following districts were awarded certificates of merit for having scored above seventy points: Brooklyn, East Portland, North Portland-Piedmont, Portland Heights, Rose City Park, Sellwood, St. Johns, University Park. The trophies awarded by the judges to Gresham, Willamette Heights, Peninsula and Arleta will be permanently displayed in the branch library of their respective sections.

Sportsmen-Tourists' Exhibit.

Under the same roof and sponsored by the Portland Chamber of Commerce, was the first sportsman-tourist exhibit ever held in connection with a Portland rose festival. Exhibit space was provided by the Portland Chamber of Commerce and invitations were sent out to various chambers of commerce and resort managers throughout the state of Oregon to install a comprehensive exhibit of what each particular section has to appeal to vacationists and pleasure-seekers.

No admission fee was charged either for the beautiful exhibit of the Portland Rose Society or for the sportsman-tourist exhibit. A constant stream off-seasons, latest cleaning machinery (cleaning in addition to the field cleaning, about which I have spoken before); picking arrangements are necessary to produce the highest grade of seeds.

Seventh, there are numerous chances for mechanical mixtures in storage, handling and cleaning. No novice can invent a semi-foolproof system in a few months' time. The systems in vogue in the older establishments all vary somewhat, but tend to accomplish the same double check throughout that many a severe "bump" has taught them and are well worth the extra labor involved. Yet no one can claim a system that will absolutely prevent the damage from human error or carelessness.

the most common acts which influence the quality of seed are:

A. Mechanical mixture or accidental substitution of one variety for another. The corrective method is, of course, a carefully worked out check system.

B. The blending of seed generally to bring up the germination test of a low lot by adding a quantity of higher-test stock. A conservative safeguard might be: Don't blend.

C. The substitution of what the wholesaler or retailer considers identical to, or similar to a variety ordered. He sometimes guesses wrong.

D. The taking of a chance on low germinating seed, much more of a temptation than anyone out of the seed business can realize, especially when there may be reason to think the test is wrong.

E. The poor storing of seeds where rapid deterioration takes place and seed is sold before the facts are known.

Every one of these general fall-downs of seed farmer, contract grower, wholesaler and retailer mentioned occurs time and time again. The wholesaler cannot prevent the mistakes that happen in the seed farmer's and contract grower's hands and vice versa. In the chain of distribution each has his own proper duties and functions to perform to the best of his ability. The wholesaler and retailer, to give their trade the better grade of seeds, must buy from the seed producers who furnish them such stock.

The producing end, on the other hand, is many times blamed for errors in the distributing end, and then, further, the "ultimate consumer, especially the amateur, wrongly in at least nine times in ten, blames the seedsman and seed for all of his failures. I could talk on this one point I mention almost indefinitely. I wish some of you could analyze with me the usual run of complaints in a retail mail order or counter seed store and check up on how few are really justifiable.

Safeguards.

Now for the four great safeguards in the seed business:

1. A trial ground. A person selling seeds is a seed merchant; not until he runs some kind of a trial ground is he a "seedsmen." A trial ground can tell us what we sell, how our stock compares with what others sell, what growers deliver us the "goods" for our money, what growers to avoid and what new varieties we should list.

2. Inspections of growing crops, both seed and the actual market crops produced from seedsmen's products. Included in this might be visits to the other seedsmen and their trial grounds and institutions, to study other methods and systems. The expense account involved in such traveling is returned manifold in necessary information which can be had in no other way.

3. A careful and rapid double check system of keeping stock, filling and recording orders. Many seedsmen will argue the importance of this safeguard. I am convinced that no really successful seed business can be run without an efficient system for such records.

4. And last is the seed laboratory. Last only because I want to fit this part in with a paper written by the seed analyst of our firm, Miss Leota Thurlimann. I thought that the problems of a commercial garden seed laboratory would be of special interest, and under this head Miss Thurlimann has elaborated a little, as at least ninety per cent of the seedsmen's complaints are on germination. The possibilities of the seed laboratory as a safeguard need no champion.

[Miss Thurlimann's paper, "Problems of a Commercial Garden Seed Laboratory," will appear in this column next week.]

GROWING GLADIOLI.

The gladiolus is fast becoming recognized as the most universally adaptable and useful of all summer flowers for the florist. Its possibilities, not only for outdoor growing but for greenhouse use, are almost unlimited and are just beginning to be realized.

Gladioli should not be planted too deeply, as their roots are less liable to feed in the soil which is above the bulb level; in shallow soils this is important. Deep plowing or spading of soils is desirable, but must be done with reference to the depth of the surface soil, as deep spading of shallow soils would bring to the surface too much of the bottom soil. The best covering above the corms is about four inches of soil. Mellow loam or sandy soil is better adapted to somewhat deeper plantings than is a clay or heavy soil.

By successive plantings from early garden-making time until late in June, then following with plantings in the greenhouse from about August 10 until the following March, one may have blooms almost all the year around. A night temperature of 50 to 54 degrees makes for success with gladioli, but they can also be grown in a temperature 5 or 10 degrees less than this.

Some gladioli have bulbs more rounded than others; the natural preference would be for the rounded bulbs, but it does not make much difference whether they are flat or rounded, provided they are well matured. It would be advisable to remove the old bulbs from the bases of the gladioli. It is not

 ORE. All South and Southwestern Oregon points quickly reached well to remove the skin covering. This acts as a protection to the bulbs and helps to prevent shriveling.

Those plants which have already produced flowers often produce good bulbs, but these bulbs cannot be used for forcing. When growing bulbs for forcing, they should not be allowed to flower.
 In order to insure a good crop under glass, it is necessary to give gladioli sufficient rest. Many people plant in December, sometimes even earlier.
 These bulbs will grow freely, sometimes four or five feet high, but only a small proportion of them will flower. Bulbs under glass mature much earlier than those grown outdoors.

Some of the most commonly grown varieties are America, Panama, Halley, Augusta, Schwaben and Mrs. Francis King.

The usual summer conditions prevail, and there is little doing except for funeral work and weddings. It has been pretty hot at times, but rains have been frequent except for a dry spell the early part of June. Flowers are quite

reason for any concern over its presence.

"It has been identified as Anomala orientalis Water, an insect which gave a great deal of trouble in Hawaii about ten years ago. It is a native of Japan and was probably introduced into Hawaii in soil on the roots of plants about 1908. At that time it attacked sugar cane severely. The pest infested only a small area, but was extremely destructive. An organization of Hawaiian sugar planters obtained parasites from Japan in 1912 and controlled the infestation very successfully within the next seven years. The parasite has extended its diet in Hawaii to include the ordinary Japanese beetle of Hawaii as well as the anomala."

First thing you know, the department will be quarantining that nursery so that its experts may satisfy their "interest" in the insect without the possibility of its getting away.

The Market.

July is here with its torridity and humidity. Most of the people with the means are leaving or preparing to leave for the shore and the mountain resorts; this includes not a few of the craft. The passing of school graduations, college commencements and weddings robs the market of what has buoyed it up of late and business has now sunk to a low midsummer ebb. The supply of flowers is not large, but ample for the feeble calls.

Roses are fewer and of deteriorating quality. Most of them have short stems and the color is not at all good. Columbia holds up well as a hot weather rose and is still easily the leader of its color. Cut ramblers of such late varieties as Dorothy Perkins, Mrs. M. H. Walsh and others are offered, but the demand is not great. Carnations are small and poor and it can scarcely pay growers to send them in. Sweet peas from indoors are done and, the outdoor supply not being large, nice flowers sell well.

Of hardy larkspurs there is a heavy supply. More growers than ever before seem to have taken hold of these flowers. Values are comparatively low. There is also a big supply of both the hardy and annual gypsophila. The perennial sorts sell the best, particularly the double white form. The indoor gladiolus crop is nearly over, but already some outdoor shipments of Halley, America and Mrs. Francis King have arrived. Yellow daisies are now poor.

The call for valley has fallen off with the passing of June. June proved a banner month for weddings. There are still some cattleyas coming in; enough for the demand. Pot plants in bloom are not abundant, but the call for them is comparatively slight. Some good outdoor Lilium regale and small lots of Lilium candidum, the Madonna lily, are also offered. Regale proves a popular lily for June weddings.

Gardeners' Meeting.

A meeting of the Boston branch of the National Association of Gardeners and committees appointed for the national convention, which opens in Boston, September 12, was held at Horticultural hall, June 30. There was a good attendance, over which Robert Cameron presided. W. N. Craig outlined the duties of the finance, entertainment, transportation and other committees. The opening two days will be devoted strictly to business; on the third day automobiles will take visitors and others to some of the noted north shore estates, in Manchester, Prides Crossing and Beverly Farms, thence to Castle Hill Farm, Ipswich, where a real New England clambake will be served before the extensive gardens are inspected. The return trip to Boston will be made so that Cedar Acres, Wenham, the gladiolus and dahlia farm of B. Hammond Tracy, can be looked over.

On the last day the trip planned includes the Arnold Arboretum, part of the Boston parkways, Cambridge and Harvard College, with an inspection of the famous collection of glass flowers in the Agassiz museum; Lexington, Concord and Wellesley. In the last-named town several of the Hunnewell estates will be visited; also, Wellesley College, on Lake Waban. All meetings will be held at Horticultural hall and several notable speakers will welcome the conventionists.

A set of by-laws for the use of local branches was discussed and approved, as well as one or two amendments to the by-laws relative to life membership

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Salem, Ore.—C. F. Breithaupt has purchased from a receiver in bankruptcy the store, and fixtures, formerly owned and managed by C. B. Clancey. From now on he will manage store and green-houses.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Business picked up considerably again last week and it looked as though this June would be up to the average. A few asters are the latest addition to the stock, but they are only of medium grade. Dahlias are improving every day and some fine flowers are in. Gladioli are still overplentiful and many of these go to the dump, while the growers are not cutting one-half of their stocks. It is strange how the old America maintains its position. It will often sell when no other variety does, not excepting the finer new kinds. The purple buddleia sells well, especially as delphiniums are getting past their season. Roses are of better quality than is usually the case for this season of the year. Carnations are poor. Valley and orchids are about equal to the demand and greens are getting better and more plentiful.

Various Notes.

Fraser & Son, of Pasadena, are featuring their ranunculus-flowered portulaca, a most beautiful and showy strain. Many of the flowers are double, like a double ranunculus, and of the most attractive colors. Others are single, but equally beautiful, comprising the richest shades of yellow, crimson and other colors. As is well known, this is a fine hot weather subject, thriving in the brightest sunshine, and, as the flowers can be cut with a good length of stem, the strain would be useful to some of the florists who grow their own stock. At the trial grounds hundreds of trials are being made under glass, and it was the behavior of some of the seeds here that led to the coining of the slogan or trade-mark of the firm, "Seeds and Bulbs that Move the Earth." This firm has some large landscape jobs under way and plans are now being made for the new building of the firm on Colorado street.

James Taylor, of De Longpre avenue, Hollywood, met with a serious accident when the car in which he was taking some lady clients to a landscape job was run into by a truck. His car was badly damaged.

J. M. Grant seems to be progressing rapidly at his nursery, at Eagle Rock, as he is extending his lath houses, enlarging his dwelling house and has just bought a fine new car. Mr. Grant says that landscape work is keeping him busy all the time, and this little city is going ahead so rapidly that business seems quite likely to keep up its present pace for a while. In the short time that he has been at Eagle Rock, Mr. Grant has worked up a good stock.

A. Martini, of the E. C. Amling Co.,

comes to town frequently in the early morning to look the situation over. Everything is doing well at the Sawtelle range and the plumosus has recovered from the effects of the frost early in the season.

The sixtieth anniversary of the birthday of Arthur Letts, one of the pioneer merchants of the city, was celebrated at his home by a barbecue given to about 5,000 of his employees. The Broadway Florist had the decorations, using some 5,000 roses and 600 strings of plumosus, among other things. Another good job by the Broadway Florist was the decorating of the home of Buster Keaton with thirty baskets of American Beauty roses and other flowers on the arrival of a new baby.

Victor Swanson is in with fine dahlias from his place at Culver City.

P. Hahn reports business as particularly good in Hollywood.

The Superior Nursery Co. is erecting a new store and show rooms on Slauson avenue. C. Gutting says that business has never been so good here as it is this year, and he is going after it strong.

Walter Armacost had a few days of deep-sea fishing before leaving for Texas.

J. Roller, proprietor of the Athletic Club Florist, says that the number of weddings this month has been greater than that of any other June since the exceptionally busy war times.

Joseph Maguth, of Ocean Park Heights, is sending in fine roses from his place, all the stock being handled by S. Murata & Co.

Captain Barron, of the good ship Seminole, won third place in the 21-mile race off Leguna beach last week. He is also known as the proprietor of the Alexandria Florist.

Albert Beverley, of the Mission Oak Nursery, Santa Barbara, Cal., was here last week on one of his periodical buying trips.

H. R. R.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

Summer stock was plentiful last week. A few early dahlias were the only newcomers. Gladioli were a drug on the market, in spite of their excellent quality. Roses were plentiful and good, and, though there was not a surplus of the highest grades of these, there was a surplus of good, fresh roses, for only the fancy stock held its own. There were plenty of Cecile Brunner roses. Carnations were plentiful and good, and there was an abundant supply of snapdragons, cornflowers, coreopsis, gailardias, pansies, gillyflowers, marigolds, Shasta daisies, sweet williams, poppies and delphiniums. Fresh strawflowers were plentiful. The supply of gardenias was short, while there were just enough orchids to meet the demand.

Various Notes.

F. C. Jaeger & Son remembered the disabled veterans by sending forty bouquets to the Letterman hospital. F. C. Jaeger, Jr., is spending his vacation motoring on the Russian river. George McAbee, of Jaeger's staff, is recovering from a serious illness and Ed Garibaldi is leaving for a vacation. Members of the San Francisco police force said it with flowers when Lieutenant Lenon was promoted to a captaincy. The Jaeger firm made the floral piece.

The first annual picnic given by the San Francisco florists and growers took place at Fairfax June 25, and attracted an attendance of some 800 members of the trade and their families. The refreshments met with the cordial approval of all those who partook of them and everything proceeded with vim. The handsome automobile was won by Carl Jolls, of Levin's Flower Shop, 1804 Fillmore street. The committee is about to hold a luncheon in order to wind up the business affairs of the picnic, which are in a highly prosperous condition. J. Kilroy, of the Castro Floral Co., was chairman of the day. The members of the picnic committee were: Charles Brown, of Brown & Kennedy; Philip Beneditti, of the Union Florists, and Frank Thatcher, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co. J. A. Axell was chief doorkeeper at the picnic. He proved to be an able-bodied, strong-minded custodian of the committee's dollars. "The free list entirely suspended," said Mr. Axell.

A labor of love was performed by the Suzanne Floral Co., which firm put up a beautiful decoration for the national convention of disabled United States veterans, which took place in San Francisco the closing days of June. Leon A. Habit, one of the two partners in this firm, is a veteran of the world war. Many of the veterans thought the floral piece on display in the firm's window was the most beautiful of any displayed in the city. It showed the national arms in colored flowers, with draped satin ribbons and the lettering, "American War Veterans! Welcome!" The window was draped in the national colors and flags, and the "Lest We Forget" card was prominently displayed. A home wedding just staged by this firm used baby roses and forget-me-nots effectively.

Miss Copeland, of the Misses Hannon store, with ex-Red Cross workers, held a specially organized picnic for some of the disabled veterans the last day of June. The idea originated with Miss Copeland.

The peninsula property of E. W. McLellan is close to the new amusement resort, "Pacific City," which opened to the public July 1. Bands, bathing and many kinds of amusement concessions promise to make "Pacific City" a second Coney Island.

Julius Eppstein has been busy with baskets, some of which were sent as tributes to visiting police chiefs, attending their international convention here.

The Terminal Florist made elaborate tributes for the funeral of Captain Lonroth, late popular master of the S. S. Sonoma. The Oceanic Steamship Co. sent its flag, made in red and white carnations, roses, marigolds, etc., and another big floral offering, with the star of the company in crimson sweet peas.

L. Picetti, manager for the Charles C. Navlet Co., states that summer business is better than usual this year. "On account of the late season, bedding plants are still moving. Work is starting on summer-planting bulbs and we are looking forward to having a large quantity of our own home-grown anemone bulbs and ranunculus," said Mr. Picetti.

Enomoto & Co. are completing the drying of a quantity of helichrysum.

Last week Domoto Bros. received about 25,000 mats in a variety of colors from Japan. They are also showing some new French baskets designed to carry over the arm.

The United Flower & Supply Co. is showing a wide assortment of immortelles of many different kinds, both dried and green. A window of potted cockscombs is attracting attention, owing to the luxuriance of the many varieties.

Rose Festival.

The wholesalers and retailers have passed through a busy week in general, being rose festival week. Many participated in the floral exhibits in the rose festival center, which is the main feature for the public. The following were among the exhibitors: The city park bureau, with several beds of fine shrubbery and flowering plants; J. B. Pilkington, with two beds of fine evergreens in tubs; Wilson-Crout-Gehr Co., with various bedding and border plants; Holden Floral Co., with a fine lot of spiræas in bloom; O. E. Panzer, with various bedding plants, among which was a fine lot of Elks petunias; Swiss Floral Co., with various bedding plants and a few novelties, which attracted a great deal of attention from the public; Mountain View Floral Co., with French hydrangeas, roses in pots and various plants to make the bed complete; George Goos, with various bedding plants, including a large quantity of scarlet geraniums; Rahn & Herbert Co., with Dorothy Perkins roses in pots, ageratums, balsams, etc.; Fred M. second prizes were won by the florists in the different classes. Vancouver, B. C., won the grand prize, $500, and the Portland Chamber of Commerce, the second, $250.

A large number of Tacoma and Seattle florists visited this city during rose carnival week. While Seattle and Tacoma were well prepared for a keen bowling match as a result of the new bowling club organized among the florists here, both were surprised to see the Portland boys play so strong a game for the time they had had to practice. However, Portland was beaten by some 200 points. At the end of the match the visitors were surprised with a fine supper at the Multnomah hotel. Forty-five in all participated at this function and several speeches were made by the various members of the three organizations. Thursday, June 22, the visitors were shown the different establishments, and Friday they were taken driving on our wonderful highway and served with a fine dinner at the Columbia Gorge hotel. They were more than pleased with the entertainment and hospitality shown them by the Portland florists.

The rose show held at the armory June 20 and 21 for the benefit of the general public was fully up to the standard, in spite of the weather conditions which prevailed during the month of June. The Seattle Rose Society had a fine collection of blooms and won several prizes.

Club Meeting.

The Oregon Florists' Club held its regular meeting at the K. P. hall June 27. Many matters were discussed and dealt with by the society. A. J. Steele gave an interesting talk on his recent trip. He had found a general improvement in business conditions through the east and middle west. Mr. Steele visited some of the largest seed and greenhouse establishments and had the opportunity of calling at the White House and shaking hands with President Harding.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, G. M. Pilkington; vice-president, H. Niklas; secretary, F. A. Van Kirk; treasurer, H. Birchler; trustees, E. Cranfort, F. M. Young and L. W. Scott. Light refreshments were served after adjournment.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

There was a generally quiet business last week, with the stock situation unchanged. There has been a great increase in the cut of roses, and this has served to create almost an oversupply, since the home gardens are also producing these flowers in profusion at the present time, and there is little more than a transient demand for the stock. Water lilies are selling well and are proving about the most attractive single offering in the local market. They are being used extensively for window decorations.

The cut of carnations has shown an increase, but the weather conditions have affected the keeping qualities of the current deliveries, so that there is still something left to be desired. Potted offerings are slow movers at present, this being especially true of ferns.

Various Notes.

Felix Rosaia was one of the Seattle florists to attend the Portland rose festival, and he reports royal entertainment from the trade there. It is said that the Portland men vied with each other to see who could extend the most hospitality to their visitors.

The Hollywood gardens are receiving some fine roses from the greenhouses, and have been using these in connection with a group of other summer flowers for window displays. A number of wedding decorations have been handled by this shop during the last week, summer flowers predominating in the decorative effects achieved. Samuel Dunlap represented this shop in the group that attended the Portland festival.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE annual meeting of the Pacific Coast Nurserymen's Association will be held at Portland, Ore., July 11 to 13.

D. T. McCARTHY, head of D. T. McCarthy & Sons, Lockport, N. Y., visited Chicago after attending the Detroit convention of the A. A. N. A splendid spring business is his report.

THE Senate, July 1, passed the agricultural schedule of the tariff bill, which includes the duties on nursery stock. Report appears on a forward page, giving the rates fixed by the upper house.

BENJAMIN CHASE, of label fame, was in Chicago June 30 on his way to Portland from Derry Village, N. H., after stopping at Detroit for the A. A. N. convention, of which he has long been a regular attendant.

PLANT PROPAGATORS ELECT.

The fourth annual meeting of the American Plant Propagators' Association took place at the Wolverine hotel, Detroit, Mich., Thursday evening, June 29. Nurserymen who are chiefly interested in the production of young stock compose this association. At this meeting officers for the coming year were elected as follows: President, E. M. Sherman, Charles City, Ia.; vice-president, J. A. Young, Aurora, Ill.; secretary-treasurer, F. W. Von Oven, Naperville, Ill. The executive committee for the coming year is as follows: Thomas McBeth, Springfield, O.; J. Jenkins, Winona, O.; A. J. Cultra, Onarga, Ill.; O. E. Carr, Yellow Springs, O., and E. M. Sherman, Charles, Ia.

PAINESVILLE OUTING.

The Storrs & Harrison Co. gave their annual nursery community picnic Friday afternoon and evening, June 30, at Township park, where nurserymen and their families forgot their cares and had one joyous and pleasant outing.

Township park is an ideal place for an occasion of this kind and it may be said that it was through the efforts of the Storrs & Harrison Co. that it became a park and it is becoming more popular every year.

The address by John H. Dayton was instructive and was appreciated by the largest gathering of nurserymen ever assembled for an occasion of this kind.

One of the features of the day was the ball game between the married men and single men, which resulted in a victory for the former. Other sports were races and novelty sports. T. J. M.

A. A. N. WINDS UP MEETING.

Officers Elected.

Friday, June 30, at 2 p. m., the forty-seventh annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen came to an end on the mezzanine floor of the Hotel Wolverine, at Detroit, Mich. Just before the wind-up the retiring president, Michael R. Cashman, introduced the newly elected officers: President-elect, Paul C. Lindley; vice-president-elect, Harlan P. Kelsey, Salem, Mass.; treasurer-elect, J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia. Additions to the executive committee are M. R. Cashman, Owatonna, Minn., and William Flemer, Jr., Princeton, N. J. All the above were recommended by the committee of state vice-presidents through their chairman the day preceding, but, since the committee's nominee for vice-president had withdrawn previous to the chairman's report, a unanimous election placed Harlan P. Kelsey in the vice-presidency. William Flemer, Jr., was introduced by Mr. Cashman as the "youngest member of the executive board in a long time." Charles Sizemore is to be retained as secretary.

Paul C. Lindley.

(President American Association of Nurserymen.)

Members Expelled.

Abandoning the secrecy of the old-time executive sessions, the association voted in open meeting on the last day of the convention to expel three members of the association and to reprimand one other.

In the case of Harrison's Nurseries, Berlin, Md., the evidence presented to the vigilance committee was thought not sufficient to justify any stronger action than censure. After much discussion, the following resolution was passed:

Resolved, that Harrison's Nurseries, of Berlin, Md., be hereby reprimanded for carelessness in the Musselman case for having shipped stock without adequate inspection and grading. In the mind of the committee the evidence does not warrant the charge alleged, that ninety per cent of the one-year trees shipped were affected with crown gall and hairy root, or that Harrison's Nurseries, willfully and with intent to defraud, cut crown galls from trees before shipping same.

In the case of Glen Bros., Rochester,

N. Y., the following resolution was introduced by the executive committee:

The American Association of Nurserymen, through its vigilance committee, having reviewed the evidence in the case of Glen Bros., of Rochester, N. Y., and they having been regularly notified to appear before the vigilance committee in their own defense, without response on their part;

And further, it being apparent that their catalogue and advertising are calculated to mislead the buying public;

Therefore, be it resolved, that this association does therefore censure Glen Bros. for violating established ethical rules and for failing to maintain the standards required by this association.

On the floor of the convention it was voted to change the word "censure" to "expel."

Two other members were expelled in subsequent resolutions of the executive committee, as follows:

On account of persistence in unethical trade practices as revealed by the vigilance committee, we recommend to the association that Leamon G. Tingle, of Pittsboro, Md., be expelled from membership in the association.

The case of H. M. Whiting was reported to the association in June, 1921, but action for dismissal at that time was deferred on account of a technicality. We now recommend that H. M. Whiting, of Geneva and Boston, be expelled from this association.

In order to restrict the circulation of information regarding wholesale prices, the association voted at the same time to pass this resolution, presented by the executive committee:

Since quoting wholesale prices on open mail cards, reveals information to those who should not see it;

Therefore, be it resolved, that we condemn this practice and request members to discontinue and discourage it.

Committee Reports.

J. W. Hill, of Des Moines, Ia., was called upon to deliver the invocation Wednesday morning in place of W. H. Wyman, of North Abington, Mass. The latter had been in an automobile accident and, while not seriously injured, was not in condition to travel to Detroit.

The mayor of Detroit, James Couzens, was also prevented from attending by illness, and the address of welcome was delivered by Captain Bush, of the department of parks and boulevards.

Wednesday afternoon, June 28, was given over mostly to reports of committees. President Cashman, in his report on the executive activity and the financial status of the association pointed out the progress made, the progress that can be made, and emphasized the high aim of the organization.

Orlando Harrison, of Berlin, Md., as chairman of the committee on legislation and tariff, said in his report:

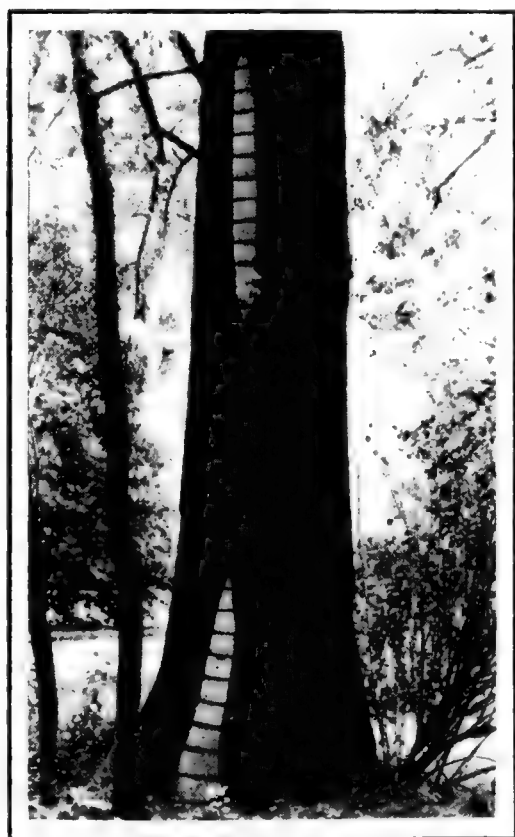

"December 14, 1921, in cooperation with your secretary, Mr. Sizemore, we went before the interstate commerce commission asking for reduced freight rates. We feel sure that our presentation to the commission had at least some bearing on the recent reduction of freight rates, which the nurserymen will share in, as well as their customers.

"April 7 this committee was called together with the executive committee of this association at the New Willard hotel, at Washington. Your committee held its sessions to consider thoroughly our action before going before the federal horticultural board. After full discussion of the conditions that were before us, the following resolution was passed and was presented to the federal horticultural board, the Secretary of Agriculture and others assembled at the hearing on quarantine 37:

Resolved, that the executive committee and legislative committee and other attending nurserymen go on record as approving sections 2, 3, 4 and 5 of regulation 3, now in force, except that Norway Schwedleri maples 4-foot to 8-foot whips for transplanting and not finished stocks for resale be admitted under regulations for a period of three years from June 1, 1922. And, further, we approve the action of the federal horticultural board in fully investigating the production and quality of Manetti and other rose stocks in the United States.

"The proposed tariff bill now before the United States Senate doubles the duty on fruit tree stocks. A majority of our committee feel that we should oppose the proposed increase. I have entered protest against this increase through our United States senator, which has been filed with the committee. If nurserymen are interested in keeping the tariff where it now is, each one should write to his United States senator requesting him to vote against the proposed increases."

Directly following this Harlan P. Kelsey gave an interesting and enlightening report on the progress of the committee on nomenclature. This report, telling of the progress of the Official Catalogue of Standardized Plant Names, appears on a forward page of this issue.

The discussion on standardization and trade practice opened after Harlan P. Kelsey had given his report, and the preliminary report of the committee on standardization was referred to the Retail Nurserymen's Association, in order that the latter association might make recommendations on the grading tables of fruit trees. This preliminary report was distributed among all those present for consideration. The report was in pamphlet form, interleaved and so arranged as to allow of written notes. This matter was carried over until after the meeting of the retail nurserymen, Thursday evening.

Training in Colleges.

Reporting as chairman for the committee on courses in nursery training in agricultural colleges, Alvin E. Nelson, of Chicago, read as follows:

Your committee on courses in nursery training in agricultural colleges respectfully reports that the Massachusetts Agricultural College, at Amherst, has provided a short-term course, which was in operation last winter.

The University of Illinois has announced that it will provide a 4-year course for nursery training, commencing September, 1922, under the direction of Prof. J. C. Blair. It has been suggested by Professor Blair that a great aid in promoting the work would be a formal action in the form of a resolution by the American Association of Nurserymen indorsing the course referred to and promising cooperation in the matter of recommending the course to prospective students.

All applications for this course should be addressed to Prof. J. C. Blair, University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill.

The New York State College of Agriculture, at Cornell, is willing to provide a 4-year course and to add two specialists on insects and fungous diseases of trees and shrubs as soon as funds are made available by the New York legislature. The New York Nurserymen's Association should get the appropriation for this.

There should be courses in the southern and Pacific states, and we recommend this to the attention of the associations in these states.

We also recommend that colleges make arrangements so that students can take courses in one or more colleges, and so may travel and work in various parts of the country. This will give them a broader view of nurserymen's duties and opportunities.

Following this report, Robert A. Simpson, of Vincennes, Ind., talked of the work of the committee on deciduous and tropical fruits nomenclature. He said that three lists of names of fruits in America had been received; that they had been carefully examined; that

At the Banquet.

Wednesday night the Baby Ramblers were, as one member said, "sure rambling." With Paul V. Fortmiller, of Newark, N. J., in charge, a banquet was staged that eclipsed anything ever before attempted. With J. Edward Moon as toastmaster, a brilliant company of speakers was introduced and they succeeded in making the evening lively. Besides, there was splendid dancing by professional talent. As promised, there was "real food, real music, real fun and real surprises." Among the speakers were John Parker, Harlan P. Kelsey, J. C. Lindley and S. C. Lovejoy.

Thursday Morning Meeting.

When the meeting of Thursday morning, June 29, came to order two telegrams were waiting to be read: One was from L. C. Corbett, regretting his inability to attend the sessions. The second was of greeting from J. C. Vaughan, Chicago. In this regard it was mentioned that Mr. Vaughan and J. T. Silver, of New Jersey, are the two living charter members, and it was voted to send them telegrams on this occasion.

A. F. Lake, in his talk, "Are We Fooling Ourselves?" pointed out the value of the nurserymen's life, advised young men not to be fooled by those who wrongly spoke against the nursery as a place of occupation, and strongly defended the time-honored occupation as one worthy of any man. He made the point that conventions should be practical. He was given a rising vote of thanks for the talk.

Richard M. Wyman spoke briefly on the progress made in the nursery training at Massachusetts College of Agriculture. He pointed out the difficulties met; explained the exact courses given; showed where mistakes had been made and took a brief glimpse into the future of the training.

Publicity.

Robert Pyle then took the floor and introduced Major P. F. O'Keefe, of Boston, who at once began to pile up arguments as to why it pays to advertise nationally. He showed figures in instances where national advertising had actually paid. He suggested, however, that the American Association of Nurserymen was not yet large enough in membership to undertake so large a campaign, but he said that the future would produce the action needed.

J. F. Ammann, introduced by P. V. Fortmiller, showed the advantages of cooperative advertising and cited cities like St. Louis, where florists had undertaken such a plan with great success. He showed some specimens of advertising so carried out by groups of florists that it resulted in benefits for every individual.

Robert Pyle introduced Ex-Mayor Breitmeyer, of Detroit, as one who had "won his way into the hearts of all the people of Detroit." Straightly thereafter in a well worded talk, extemporaneously given, Ex-Mayor Breitmeyer proved that publicity and cooperation had won a place in his heart and he endeavored to urge the assembled nurserymen to take up the weapon of publicity full-heartedly. His talk was a brilliant complement of Major O'Keefe's. Mr. Breitmeyer demonstrated with figures just what advertising had done for him; showed the vast increase in his business since "Say It with Flowers" and F. T. D. had come onto the job. And he ended his talk with an earnest exhortation that the nurserymen's association "do something." He was roundly applauded.

The applause had barely subsided, when F. F. Rockwell, chairman of the committee on market development and publicity, opened the discussion on publicity and practically settled it with his report of the committee's work. On the wall just above him Mr. Rockwell had a comprehensive group of clippings showing the kind of matter that had been sent to the newspapers; also, he had a map pasted with stars showing where most of the publicity was being rendered, i. e., the localities to which the matter distributed to newspapers was going. As was shown, most is being done in the middle west and northeast, toward the New England states. Little has reached the west of the United States and the south had few stars pasted upon it. The committee has started out, Mr. Rockwell said, to get the most publicity for the least money. An even $4,000 had been provided for the purpose, with the provision that the committee would not spend it all. The committee did not spend it all, but, at the same time, achieved marvelous results. More than 4,000 papers are on the list for distribution, including an increasing number of large newspapers.

The committee had depended, Mr. Rockwell said, on each nurseryman's sending in the names of newspapers in his locality, but little of this had been done. Post cards were first sent out to newspapers, asking them if they would care to run the material. Sixty-four and one-half per cent of the replies were favorable. This number was largely due, according to Mr. Rockwell, to the fact that each newspaper had been promised the exclusive rights in a given territory.

Setting an Objective.

In preparing the stories three points had been aimed at: To attract attention, to give real information and to create a definite desire. The material became quite popular, some papers even printing in advance the entire list of subjects to be discussed. The committee spent in reality less than $4,000, because the "nearly" $4,000 included running advertisements in trade papers, getting out the "Booster," etc.

One of the greatest troubles was making the material seasonal. Information from the Department of Agriculture helped greatly, but, because the editors of newspapers so desire, it has been decided, the coming year, to send out all the material at once, and the editors can select what they want for the right occasions.

At the time the report was being given neat booklets containing much of the material sent to papers were passed about, with the suggestion that nurserymen might distribute the material in this form, with the firm's compliments printed on them. On the cover page of the booklet was a neat cut of a well laid out piece of property, over the title, "Success with Trees and Plants."

After Mr. Rockwell's report the general opinion was that all had been listening to "the real stuff." In a moment

Mr. Rockwell was asked what he proposed for future publicity. Taking the floor, Mr. Rockwell explained that his views in general coincided with those of Major P. F. O'Keefe, but that he thought the association was not yet ready for publicity on such a broad scale. He suggested, instead, that the present method be continued, with the following proposals: That the publicity should not be limited to the planting season, but should be continued through the entire year; that the individual nurserymen tie up more closely with the campaign by sending in names of newspapers and distributing the material in bound form; that a number of leaflets be prepared on the subject of how to care for stock, and that cooperation be stimulated in the sectional associations, so that all will link up with the publicity work.

The entire membership was "with" Mr. Rockwell and his suggestions.

Here, according to schedule, the program for the morning should have ended. But T. A. Ferran, secretary of the Michigan Horticultural Society, had something to say about the trouble with Michigan nursery stock and he said it briefly, asking that the nurserymen do something to check the shipping of bad stock, or in some way to improve conditions in the way of furnishing stock true to name. Professor Marshall, of the Michigan Agricultural College, spoke to the same point. After the two talks, it was voted that the matter be referred to the executive committee.

Thursday Afternoon.

Thursday afternoon promptly J. A. Young, of Aurora, Ill., started the meeting well with a spirited talk on the work of the Illinois "Plan to Plant Another Tree" movement. Mr. Young outlined the work, showed the results obtained and explained just exactly what the slogan means. He suggested an appropriation by the American Association of Nurserymen to the end of furthering the movement. On motion of Robert Pyle, this matter was referred to the executive committee and the market development committee.

Prof. L. B. Scott, of the bureau of plant industry, reported on the progress of the nursery stock investigations of the United States Department of Agriculture and told just who was in charge of the actual work at the different stations. He explained that an appropriation of $20,000 had been received for the work two years ago and that the appropriation had been repeated for the present fiscal year and for the next, beginning July 1. The experimental work this year, he said, had been carried on at Bell, Md.; South Haven, Mich., and Diamond Springs, Va. The board's main sub-projects Mr. Scott grouped as follows: The raising of fruit tree seedlings; the vegetative propagation of fruit tree stocks, and a comprehensive study of a number of common and several promising new rose stocks. The rest of Mr. Scott's talk had to do with the methods of carrying out the work and the results so far obtained.

Speaking for Quarantines.

R. Kent Beattie, speaking of federal control restrictions, explained the real meaning of "quarantine." He showed that the quarantines had saved thousands of dollars by excluding pests and he drove home the point that quarantime 37 was only one of twenty-three quarantines, of which thirteen or fourteen are domestic. Mr. Beattie proved the wisdom of prevention by giving figures as to the actual cost of "curing." By examples, such as that of the citrus canker, which was introduced in 1911, he made progress in showing that quarantines are really a necessity. And he proved also that the men in charge of the actual "doing" are men who know their business. The idea of making America as independent as possible is, in Mr. Beattie's mind, a great idea. And he ended up with a hot shot to the effect that those who fought the quarantine were not fighting the federal horticultural board, but the American Association of Nurserymen.

A. H. Hill, of Dundee, Ill., was not present to deliver his paper on the report of the special committee that had been appointed to assist F. H. Detwiler, of the United States Department of Agriculture, in the compilation and republication of an edition of quarantine regulations. Mr. Hill's paper was read by J. A. Young, of Aurora, Ill., as follows:

with F. H. Detwiler, of the Federal Department of Agriculture, in compiling and publishing a condensed and easily understood edition of federal quarantine laws and state regulations, bearing on the interstate movement of nursery stock. This committee has held several meetings to determine the most simple and effective methods, and has finally decided on a definite plan for the publication of all federal quarantine laws and state regulations in book form, accompanied by a chart arranged in alphabetical order by states. This will show at a glance what each state requires of all nurserymen who intend to ship nursery stock into their states.

You can readily understand that it requires a close study of the laws of forty-eight states to complete this chart. A plant quarantine officer or state inspector of each state will be asked to approve all the statements made covering the movement of nursery stock in their state and to work toward uniform state regulations covering interstate shipment of nursery stock.

We hope, through the aid of Mr. Detwiler, to have the Department of Agriculture publish the above-described bulletin complete as soon as the data contained in the manuscript are known to be complete and correct.

The outline of the plan and the charts will be available for inspection during the three days of the convention. We hope that all nurserymen who are interested in the federal quarantines and state regulations covering the movement of their nursery stock will inspect the outlines and offer any criticism or suggestions that may be helpful in carrying this work through to completion.

At this point the secretary of the American Pomological Society was introduced. He explained briefly the work of his society and asked that the American Association of Nurserymen give his association moral support and take out membership in the society.

A letter from Secretary Wallace, of the Department of Agriculture, was read. In this letter Secretary Wallace agreed with the American Association of Nurserymen that it would be well to have an advisory committee to cooperate with the board, when matters within the scope of both came up. At a later meeting of the association it was decided that the president appoint a committee to act as such an advisory board. Those so appointed are J. W. Hill, M. R. Cashman and Harlan P. Kelsey. And it was decided that J. W. Hill write a resolution, to be presented to Secretary Wallace, showing the association's attitude.

Chicago Next.

The report of the state vice-presidents, through their chairman, as to choice of officers, is set forth in the first paragraph of this report. The last decision of the state vice-presidents was that Hot Springs, Ark., be the next meeting place. This suggestion acted like an electric shock. At once J. W. Hill leaped to his feet and spoke for his home town, Des Moines, Ia. West Baden, Ind., was suggested; Chicago was suggested. And after two ballots Chicago won over Des Moines by 61 to 50. So the association will meet in Chicago next year. But J. W. Hill promised that Des Moines would be on the job for the nomination next year and he then moved that Chicago be unanimously chosen. It was.

Friday morning the report of the vigilance committee at once took the interest of the members. During this report one firm was practically found blameless of a charge against it, while four other firms were expelled from membership in the American Association of Nurserymen. The discussion consumed well over two hours.

Henry B. Chase, of Chase, Ala., had a surprise in store in his lecture on "What's Around the Corner?" Taking a far look into the future, he pointed out the fallacy of overproduction and explained just how it would detrimentally affect the market. Overproduction, he showed, would mean, in the long run, selling at pre-war prices with a post-war overhead, and "we shall be back to normalcy with a vengeance."

Then the preliminary report of the committee on standardization of horticultural trade practice came up for a continuation of the discussion that had started before the report had been referred to the retail nurserymen for discussion. The retailers at their meeting Thursday night had suggested certain changes in the grading table of fruit trees and in two of the rulings. After a prolonged discussion the entire matter by motion was referred back to the

W. C. Reed, Vincennes, Ind., reporting as chairman of the committee on arbitration, said that all cases, numbering fifteen, that had been referred to the committee were settled with the exception of three. The cases settled involved an amount of $10,000. The names of the firms concerned were not mentioned.

Several changes were made in the constitution of the association, mostly in order to tie up with the laws of New Jersey, where the association was incorporated. Copies of the constitution, as changed, were distributed and several of the important changes were made, with the condition that the entire constitution come under discussion at next year's convention.

those who are on a "nurseryman's mission in the landscape field."

Paul Lindley, newly elected president, was presented the gavel by President Cashman; President Lindley adjourned the meeting, and all departed for the waiting taxicabs, which were to carry them for a trip through Henry Ford's factory.

Exhibits.

One exhibitor said, "We had almost to fight in order to get our exhibits into this hotel. We had all arranged for our space in the Y. M. C. A. building."

The Gilson Mfg. Co., Port Huron, Wis., showed several power machines, including a Bolens cultivator.

The A. B. Morse Co., St. Joseph, Mich., with E. G. Schoff as representative, had an exhibit of unusually fine catalogues; according to Mr. Schoff, 200 or 300 of them.

The Benton Review Shop, Fowler, Ind., had a well selected catalogue exhibit, in charge of G. J. Roby.

The J. Horace McFarland Co., Harrisburg, Pa., had a fine display of catalogues. E. Fred Rowe and P. Mark Parthemore attended.

B. F. Conigisky, of Peoria, Ill., expert at photography, was present with specimens of photographs, colored and otherwise, that would be of value in demonstrating a nurseryman's work.

E. W. Dorey, representing the A. T. De La Mare Co., New York, was showing the usual line of catalogues and printing work.

Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., had excellent exhibits of roses in pots. These included Ophelia, Premier, Gruss an Teplitz, Riecardo, Pharisaar and Mrs. Aaron Ward.

The General Box Co., Chicago, had some specimens of large packing boxes and smaller ones.

William Von Helms, of Monsey, N. Y., was represented with a display of different types of pruning shears.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

IS BOILER LARGE ENOUGH?

Will a 24x48-inch Wilks boiler heat a greenhouse, 17x60 feet, to 45 degrees when the outside temperature drops to zero? Will two 2-inch flows and ten 1-inch returns be sufficient for the heating requirements? H. H. G.—O.

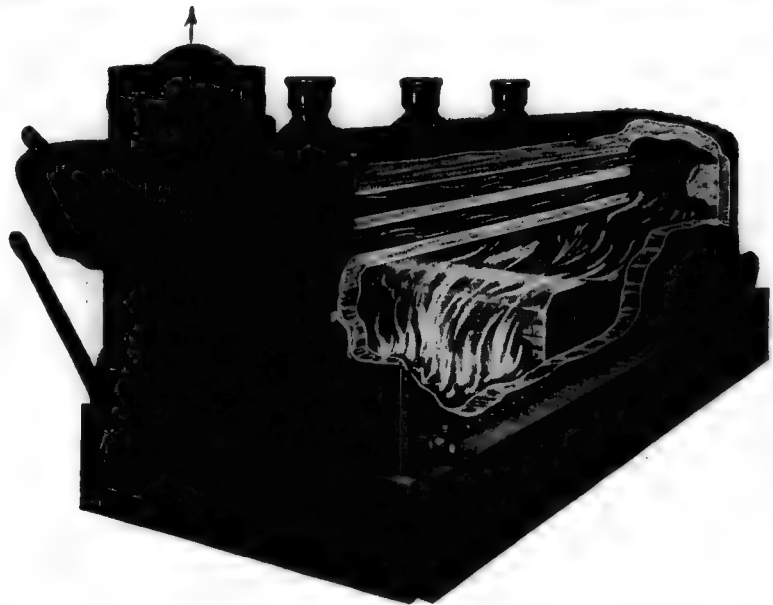

A greenhouse 17x60 feet, to be heated to 45 degrees, will require from 300 to 400 square feet of radiation, according to the amount of glass in the walls, and a boiler of the size mentioned is generally rated at about 2,500 square feet of hot water radiation. Therefore, making every allowance for the mains, the use of soft coal, etc., the boiler will be needed. In fact, a greenhouse 20x50 feet, without glass in the side walls, has been heated to 50 degrees, when the outside temperature was 10 degrees below zero, with a heater having a grate twenty inches in diameter.

If the house described above has no glass in the walls, the piping suggested would be approximately sufficient to supply the amount of radiation required, but it would be advisable to use larger flow and return pipes unless the system is placed under pressure. Our plan would call for two 2½-inch flows on the plates or purlins and six 2-inch returns on the side walls, or two of the returns may be under the middle bench. With two to three feet of glass in each wall, use two more returns.

IS LARGER BOILER NEEDED?

I have mailed you a plan of my greenhouse range, including both that which is now built and in operation and the proposed additions. From the sketch you will learn that there is one house, 29x61 feet, together with an extension to this house of 29x47 feet. There is also a service building, 18x44 feet, together with another addition to the main house of 15x60 feet on the south side. The large house is fifteen feet to the ridge. The house 15x60 feet is eleven feet to the ridge. There will be four feet of glass in one side wall of the large house and five feet of glass in that part of the other side of the large house which is exposed and also five feet in the exposed side of the small house.

There are two lines of interior pipe supports through both the large and small houses. Upon these posts I will hang the flow pipes. I should prefer to put at least two returns along each of the outside walls. The wide house is to be used for growing carnations, sweet peas, geraniums, etc. The narrow house is to be used for plants like begonias, ferns, bulb forcing, propagating, etc. The outside temperature seldom goes below 10 or 15 degrees below zero. What size of boiler will be required and how should the piping be arranged?

L. M. S.—Mich.

The sketch indicates that there will be one house 29x108 feet, with four feet of glass in one side and five feet for a distance of forty-eight feet along the other side and one end, to be heated to 50 or 55 degrees, and a smaller house 15x60 feet, with five feet of glass in one side and one end wall below the gutter. This house is to be heated to 60 to 65 degrees.

The service house, 18x44 feet, extends along the west end of both greenhouses. The concrete wall below the sills of the houses averages about three feet in height.

For the wide house it is suggested that you use four 2½-inch flow pipes, carrying one on each side wall plate and the others on the purlin posts about ten feet from the floor of the house. However, if preferred, two 3-inch flow pipes, to be carried on the purlin posts, would answer for this house.

If four 2½-inch flows are used, ten 2-inch pipes will answer for the coils, but twelve will be needed with two 3-inch flows.

With ten returns, if narrow benches are used, two pipes may be placed on each wall and the others distributed under the benches. When twelve returns are used there should be three on each of the side walls. For use with solid beds, an additional return may be placed on each wall and the others in the walks.

In the narrow house, the use of three 2½-inch flows is suggested, the odd flow to be placed along the gutter of the exposed wall. Although eight 2-inch returns would answer for this house, nine would be better, especially if a temperature of 65 degrees is desired.

So far as the circulation is concerned, nothing will be gained by using two sets of coils in the wide house. However, it may be done, if one end of the house is not to be used for extended periods.

If the service house is well built, and if it does not contain much exposed glass, little radiation will be required in addition to what will be afforded by the boiler, together with the main flow and return pipes. However, if 70 degrees are desired, it will be advisable to place a coil of three 2½-inch pipes on the exposed side wall.

About 2,200 square feet of radiation will be desirable as the rating of the boiler, and the chimney for the above radiation should have an inside diameter of ten inches, with a 10-inch smoke pipe from the boiler.

Spartanburg, S. C.—Fred W. Sass, formerly half owner of Fred's Flower Garden, has disposed of his interests in this firm. He has started a new concern under the name of the Spartanburg Floral & Truck Co. and is now the active manager of this concern.

SEATTLE NOTES.

transient business of late, and funeral work has been holding up to average. Outside activities have been keeping Eugene Lambie away from the shop considerably.

William S. Goldsbary, representing the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, is calling on the Montana trade at this time. He reports better business prospects in all of the cities visited to date.

The Woodlawn Flower Shop has handled several club decorations and organization dances, a number of these having been held at the Seattle Yacht Club. The duckling and water lily windows prepared by Fred Gust continue to attract the attention of passers-by, especially at night, when the lighting effects can be introduced.

One of the most elaborate wedding decorations ever seen here was arranged last week when the Standard Furniture Co. and the Seattle Star combined to stage a wedding in the former's model bungalow for twelve local couples. The furniture company supplied the decorations and licenses for all who wished to marry June 30, while the newspaper carried on a special contest furthering the same event. Roses, summer flowers and greens were used to convert the 5-room model house into a bower of loveliness, and the store's management supplied each bride with a large bridal bouquet.

John Holze, of the Queen City Floral Co., was one of the local men visiting the Portland fête, and he says that a royal entertainment was provided by their hosts. A 5-year lease has just been closed on the property on which the store and greenhouses are located.

Kenney's Home of Flowers was in charge of Mrs. Will Desmond last week, when friend husband led the local bowlers to Portland for the tri-city meet, and her record of sales was such that the regular manager must hurry to keep even.

Gino Desideri, who has been managing the Orpheum Floral Co., is to leave this position and enter business for himself in a location near the Tacoma Inter-urban depot. For the time being, he will discontinue the handling of flowers. General business has been good for this shop.

P. F. Rosaia, of Rosaia Bros., has returned from a motor trip to California, which combined business and pleasure. An attractive window has been worked up for this shop by converting one side of the store into a garden, with two large lily ponds, between flower-bordered walks, and with cane awnings above these. The cut of flowers from the greenhouses has been showing a steady gain, both as to quantity and quality.

John Dressen, of the Art Floral Co., took a long enough vacation to make the Portland trip, and advises that business has picked up somewhat since his return. The more colorful summer blooms are in the best demand.

Some of the best sweet peas seen here this year are being cut by Henry Morgan, and a ready sale has been found for all of this stock. H. M.

Greenwich, N. Y.—C. A. Hall is erecting a large greenhouse in Fort Edward, N. Y. It is expected that Mr. Hall will have his new place ready for business about October 1. He has been engaged in the florists' trade for eighteen years at West Sand Lake, N. Y.

BOSTON NOTES.

Conn. Mr. Holton, lately deceased, was a trustee and active member of the association.

Another meeting will be held Friday, July 28.

Various Notes.

June broke all weather records for precipitation, with an official fall in Boston of 8.04 inches of rain. On twenty out of the thirty days the sky wept. The heaviest fall was June 19, when 3.32 inches fell. Thunder storms have been numerous and hail storms have done great damage. This was the wettest June and the one highest in humidity in the history of the weather bureau. In 1881 the rainfall was 7.79 inches, which most nearly approaches this year's figures. July has opened much like its predecessor and showers still dominate the weather menu.

Elijah Gorney, of the Houghton-Gorney Co., wife and daughter, left this week for an automobile trip, which will take them as far as Maryland and Georgia. They will return by way of New York, Buffalo and the Mohawk trail. A number of prominent retailers will be called upon in various cities.

The two wholesale flower markets have started to close at noon Saturdays, commencing July 1, and ending September 2. Many of the salesmen have started on their vacations or will soon do so.

Joseph Margolis, of H. M. Robinson & Co., has left for the mountains of New Hampshire for a five weeks' vacation.

B. Hammond Tracy, of Cedar Acres, Wenham, the largest New England grower of gladioli, states that, thanks to late copious rains, his fields are in a most luxuriant condition. Dahlias, which he also now grows heavily, are in fine shape. The chief trouble is in cultivating to keep weeds down, owing to the frequent thunder storms.

Benjamin Snyder, wife and month-old baby are away on a tour of the White mountains in their automobile. He has purchased land at Silver lake and will soon start to build himself a bungalow.

William Penn and wife are at Grand Lake Stream, Me., for the month of July, where salmon and trout fishing is fine; boxes of salmon are due at the store now any time. J. C. Harris, of Penn's, is taking a rest at Harwich, on Cape Cod, where breezes are cool and mosquitoes large and voracious. We fear for the outcome, if his stay there proves prolonged.

A. Neddy has joined the forces of N. F. McCarthy & Co.

A final decision is still being anxiously awaited in regard to the selection of a site for the new central wholesale flower market. Boston is enjoying a great building boom at present and permits issued for new buildings break all previous records, in spite of coal, railroad and other discouragements.

The new wholesale flower and supply store of Edward Welch, son of the late Patrick Welch, 288 Devonshire street, opened July 1. The store presented a neat and attractive appearance and the floral offerings of good will pleased Mr. Welch immensely. This is a dull season, but he has already booked some good business and plans to hustle for more.

markably fine display at present in the grounds of Dr. F. Harris Kennedy, where iris gardens are open to the public for the benefit of the Radcliffe College endowment fund. The gardens here contain a wonderful collection and are planted in true Japanese style.

This week the National Educational Union is holding its convention in Boston with headquarters at Mechanics' building and Horticultural hall. Several thousand delegates are present. In Horticultural hall the main exhibition hall looks attractive. A model cottage is attractively placed and the grounds tastefully planted with evergreens and flowering deciduous shrubs by the Little Tree Farms, Framingham. There are excellent displays of wild flowers and other attractive features.

Douglas Eccleston, of Beverly Farms, for a number of years superintendent of the noted A. C. Burrage orchid collection, has resigned his position and has started in business. He will make a specialty of native ferns and flowers and will naturalize them on new and old estates. His excellent artistic taste in staging the late wild flower, orchid and other large displays shows how well fitted he is for this special line of work. Paul de Nave and George I'Anson, of the Burrage staff, have also resigned. Fred Pocock succeeds Douglas Eccleston as superintendent.

One of the finest batches of gloxinias I have seen for some time is at the place of H. J. Borowski & Sons, Roslindale. The plants have splendid foliage and are finely flowered.

The executive committee of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club met June 28 and completed all arrangements for the grand club picnic at Cunningham park, East Milton, July 20. There are twenty-five athletic events on the sports list, including three baseball games and a swimming contest.

The receivership proceedings in the case of Janiten & Kunan, of Arlington, are noted on another page of this issue under the heading, "Business Embarrassments." W. N. C.

HAVE YOU A SURPLUS?

The evidence is that almost everything that has been offered in the Classified ads in The Review has sold well this season. Somewhere among the 13,000 readers of The Review there is someone, usually many someones, who are short just the item of which another has a surplus. It works like this:

We are sure getting orders for the rose plants advertised in The Review; hope they may continue to come as fast.—A. N. Nielsen, Inc., Pana, Ill., June 21, 1922.

Kindly stop our geranium advertisement; got very good results; it sure pays to advertise in The Review.—Brigham Bros., Bowling Green, O., June 21, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

Colorado Springs, Colo.—The Pikes Peak Floral Co. has purchased a tract of well adapted land a short distance north of the city and will build a new range there for the growing of roses on a large scale. A contract has been made with the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., of Chicago, for a start with 60,000 square feet of glass to involve an initial investment of some $75,000. The standardized steel frame house carried in stock by the builder will be used, and it is expected to have the contract completed by September 1.

Callahan

You can get Cypress free of sap

All the wood members in Callahan Greenhouses are cut from selected Louisiana cypress free of sap.

It is a little difficult to get this really wonderful long-lived material at times, but the point that interests you is, we do get it.

We know that Callahan Greenhouses have won wide popularity in a very competitive field by reason of their improved design and high quality of workmanship and material.

From the beginning we have used only the very highest grade of Louisiana Red Gulf Cypress free of sap.

Our customers wanted it then. They want it now. We believe in it and therefore exert unusual efforts to get the very select grade.

It will pay you to get our figures on new greenhouses or repairs. Orders should be placed now for September delivery.

MUM STOCK SELLING WELL.

If anyone could get an accurate count of the number of chrysanthemum cuttings and 2-inch plants sold in the trade at this season of the year, it would be found to run into millions. The volume of the business is so large that it always is interesting to see the first signs of how the trade is buying in any season. It is like this:

Please cancel my chrysanthemum advertisement (offering sixteen varieties), as I am entirely sold out for this season.—W. E. Spafford, Barker, N. Y., June 24, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

Trenton, N. J.—Goeller Bros., florists and landscape architects, operating at 159 Hamilton avenue, have dissolved partnership. Joseph M. Goeller has taken over the Goeller Flower Shop, at 500 Hamilton avenue. Nicholas J. Goeller has taken over the landscape work of the old firm and has purchased the ground at the corner of Hamilton and Olden avenues, which is planted with nursery stock. He will build two large greenhouses. Martin J. Goeller has purchased the E. L. Riley range, at Nottingham way. He also has thirty acres of land upon which he is growing hardy plants.

EARLY-FLOWERING PANSIES.

Please give me directions for the culture of early spring-blooming pansies.
J. C. F.—Ind.

The last week in July is sufficiently early to sow pansies in order to have them flower in the spring, either outdoors or in coldframes. If, however, you want plants extra early and intend either to flower them under glass in coldframes or in a cool greenhouse, sow the seeds now. The present is also a suitable time to sow the seeds for forcing under glass for a winter and spring crop. The use of a coldframe is recommended for sowing pansy seeds at the present time. Shade and water carefully until the seedlings germinate. Protect the seedlings from drenching rains, which often cause damping off.
C. W.

"SPIRAL PALM."

I am enclosing a leaf of what is known here as spiral palm or fern. If you are able to name it, let me know how it is propagated.
L. J. S.—Pa.

The plant in question is neither a palm nor a fern, but is Dracæna indivisa. Dracæna indivisa is propagated by means of seeds, which are offered by most of the large seed houses. The seeds are sown in the spring or early summer in the greenhouse.
W. H. T.

PARASITE VINE.

We are mailing you a specimen of a running vine for examination. It has no roots and grows rapidly. It wraps itself about other plants, often killing them. Will you kindly explain its origin and nature and tell its name? What can we do to exterminate it?
B. W. F. C.—Utah.

The yellow vine is the cuscuta, or dodder, a parasite that is common in many parts of the west, growing on native vegetation, as well as on alfalfa and other leguminous crops. It was probably introduced into your greenhouse by the presence of seeds in the potting soil. It has a strangling effect upon the plants and will eventually kill anything it fastens upon. In your case it should be easy to destroy it by hand picking when it is small. The writer is not aware of any other method of destroying this parasite.

Will they be dead when you get back?

WHEN you leave the fumigator burning in the greenhouse and shut the door after you—how sure are you that it will do its work?

That all depends on the fumigator.

Hall's Nicotine Fumigator is prepared under accurate and scientific processes that insure its effectiveness against plant-lice, thrips, and similar soft-bodied, sucking insects.

It lights quickly, burns evenly and will not go out. No waste—every particle is consumed.

It is guaranteed to contain 12½% pure nicotine and it retains this strength indefinitely—the airtight tins take care of that. It is most economical; in fact, it costs but 25 cents to fumigate the ordinary greenhouse (20 by 100 feet).

10-pound tins, $8.50; 2½-pound tins, $2.50; one-pound tins, $1.25.

GREENHOUSES

Type of house being erected for W. Scott Co., Florists, Buffalo, N. Y.

44 Years as Growers, Scott, the Florist, Chooses a King

The William Scott Co., Florists, Main and Balcom Sts., Buffalo, New York, have been in business for forty-four years. In that time they have built and rebuilt many houses. When they decided on a new house they chose a King for its superior construction and growing qualities.

"We want more firsts," said Mr. W. F. Scott, "and that 40x150 Steel-Frame house will grow them for us. There are no gutters to fill up, leak and spoil plants. We will save fuel and protect the flowers because there won't be rapid temperature changes with all that air space. The shadow is hardly noticeable in big houses of that design."

The W. Scott Co. will have a fine lot of Chrysanthemums this fall to fill F. T. D. orders for Buffalo.

We'll be glad to furnish estimates and suggestions for your next house.

When you think of good greenhouses, think of KING.

Continuation Of Last Week's Talk About Our Desire For Small Orders And The Making Of Right Prices

Last week, hope we made it clear to you, just how important to us are all small orders from so little as even a dollar up. Also, that of our 3 or 4 thousand customers, only about 150 each year buy more than $500 worth.

Strange as it may seem to you considering how big this concern is, and how many big houses we build, still the business is largely made up of small orders.

Many a grower who now has our 40 or 50 foot iron framers, started by giving us an order for a few hot bed sash, or the buying of a little repair materials.

This spring we have been doing so much talking about that Number Two Iron Frame house that costs no more than the Semi-Iron, that you may have the impression that we don't want to sell anything else, but iron frame. Also that your order for a little semi-iron frame house using only the materials you may desire, does not interest us, or that our prices will be too high. In all three cases you are wrong—way wrong. We fully appreciate that it's foolish for a man with a Ford pocket book, so to speak, to buy a Buick or a Reo.

Or one with a Buick pocket book, to buy a Packard.

Everybody knows that for the purpose it is intended, the Ford is a mighty good buy. It's worth the money.

If you are not ready for either our Buick or Packard house, then we will gladly sell you the Ford kind, at a Ford price.

For equal greenhouse values, we don't propose to let anyone undersell us.

We are particularly interested in the small grower with only a few dollars to spend.

None of our salesmen have any high and mighty notions about the size an order should be.

They are paid to sell satisfaction. You will find them a fine folksy lot of fellows who thoroughly know the greenhouse business.

Let us remind you that any orders, no matter how little you may send in, will receive prompt attention. Order from the Handy Hand Book. You will find it a regular mine of good things.

A No. 1

If you could buy a brick house for the same price as a frame house, which would you buy? Of course you would invest in the brick, because it is stronger and lasts longer.

And if you could buy an AGMCO Steel Frame 1922 Model Greenhouse, No. 1 Construction, for the same price that you could buy an ordinary pipe frame house, or others' No. 2 Construction, which would you buy? The steel frame would be your choice.

AGMCO offers the Number One Steel Frame House for exactly the same price as the semi-iron or pipe frame house.

We would not build a Number Two Construction house. There is no economy in second quality design or construction.

AGMCO Service Department will gladly submit plans on the No. 1 House, without the slightest obligation. Standard units in stock enable immediate delivery. Build NOW and prepare for big business. It's on the way.

IT TAKES

Experience as well as a lot of knowledge to design a greenhouse properly and AFTER THAT it takes a well equipped factory to turn out the material to build the greenhouse. There are a thousand and one little schemes and wrinkles which are used in manufacturing a greenhouse. The average greenhouse man does not know about these and is apt to be misled.

When you buy from us you get the result of years of experience added to some real brains.

IMPORTANT

This Means a Lot to You

There are two things that most of us are mostly alike in.

1. We get so used to seeing the things we see that we don't see them.
2. We know so many things, that we forget that we know some of them.

For example: Every advertisement of ours always carries at the bottom a list of our three factories and nine offices. Still, every once in a while we bump into a grower who somehow has the impression that our Western and Canadian houses are still being manufactured and shipped from our original home factory at Irvington, New York. Every one of these men has seen those factories listed at the bottom of our ads.

Every one of them at one time or another knows that 15 years ago we erected a splendid up-to-date factory at Des Plaines, about 10 miles from Chicago.

Likewise that for 10 years we have had our own model factory at St. Catharines, Canada, just across Lake Erie from Toronto.

But they have forgotten it.

These three factories of ours mean dollars saved for you. They mean a tremendous saving in freight rates, as all your shipments will be made from the factory that means the cheapest freight rate.

The St. Catharines factory is run by The Lord & Burnham Co., Ltd., an out and out Canadian Corporation.

Always bear in mind that your small orders are most welcome and given the same careful attention as the large ones.

Our business is mostly made up of small orders, in spite of the fact that we do so many of the big things.

FREESIA PURITY—Improved

We believe we are the largest handlers of high-grade Purity Freesia bulbs in America. All our fields are thoroughly examined during their growing stage by members of the firm, to insure our customers the best the crops can produce. We can deliver Freesia bulbs early enough to enable you to get them in bloom for Christmas, if properly handled. Our bulbs are not grown in the wet district of California, but are properly watered by irrigation. They are all grown near Los Angeles, which florists in California recognize as the best place to grow high-grade bulbs. The fact that we sell quantities in California of our own growing is evidence that florists know where the best quality is produced. Bulbs offered in the following sizes, all up to size

Dear Sirs:
The Freesia Purity you sold me this year were as good as ever. I have found that I can always rely on your Freesia Bulbs. The large ones for early forcing were in for the holidays as usual.
The Rainbow Freesias are fine, growing tall and have very stiff stems. The colors are very fine and sell readily.
Yours truly,
GEORGE C. WEILAND.

American Bulb Company, Chicago, Ill.
Gentlemen:
Just a word about the Freesia bulbs you sold me. I have grown Freesia bulbs for the past 20 years, but I have never before cut so large a percentage in December. I cut fully 50 per cent of my crop for the Christmas holidays. They were fine and sold well at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange in Detroit.
Your Dutch bulbs are also fine.
Yours truly,
ROBERT KLAGGE,
Mt. Clemens, Mich.

CHEERFUL

Burpee's New Winter Flowering Sweet Pea

This fine novelty is an entirely new shade among the Early or Winter Flowering Sweet Peas. It is most appropriately named, the color being a "cheerful" soft shade of Begonia-rose. The color is pure throughout with no other tints. Few varieties make such an imposing bunch as this great gem. The flowers combine immense size with good form. The standard is broad and well waved. The wings are also much frilled, and in size of the right proportion to the magnificent spreading standard. The whole flower is all that could be desired.

CHEERFUL is good under all conditions and lightens up to a most attractive brightness under artificial light. The substance of the flowers is thick and heavy, adding greatly to the keeping value after being cut. They are well placed in fours on long stout stems.

CHEERFUL is a good grower and bears a large crop of giant flowers on strong and healthy vines. The foliage is a rich deep green. Not only are the individual flower spikes most artistic but they make up into a delightful bunch.

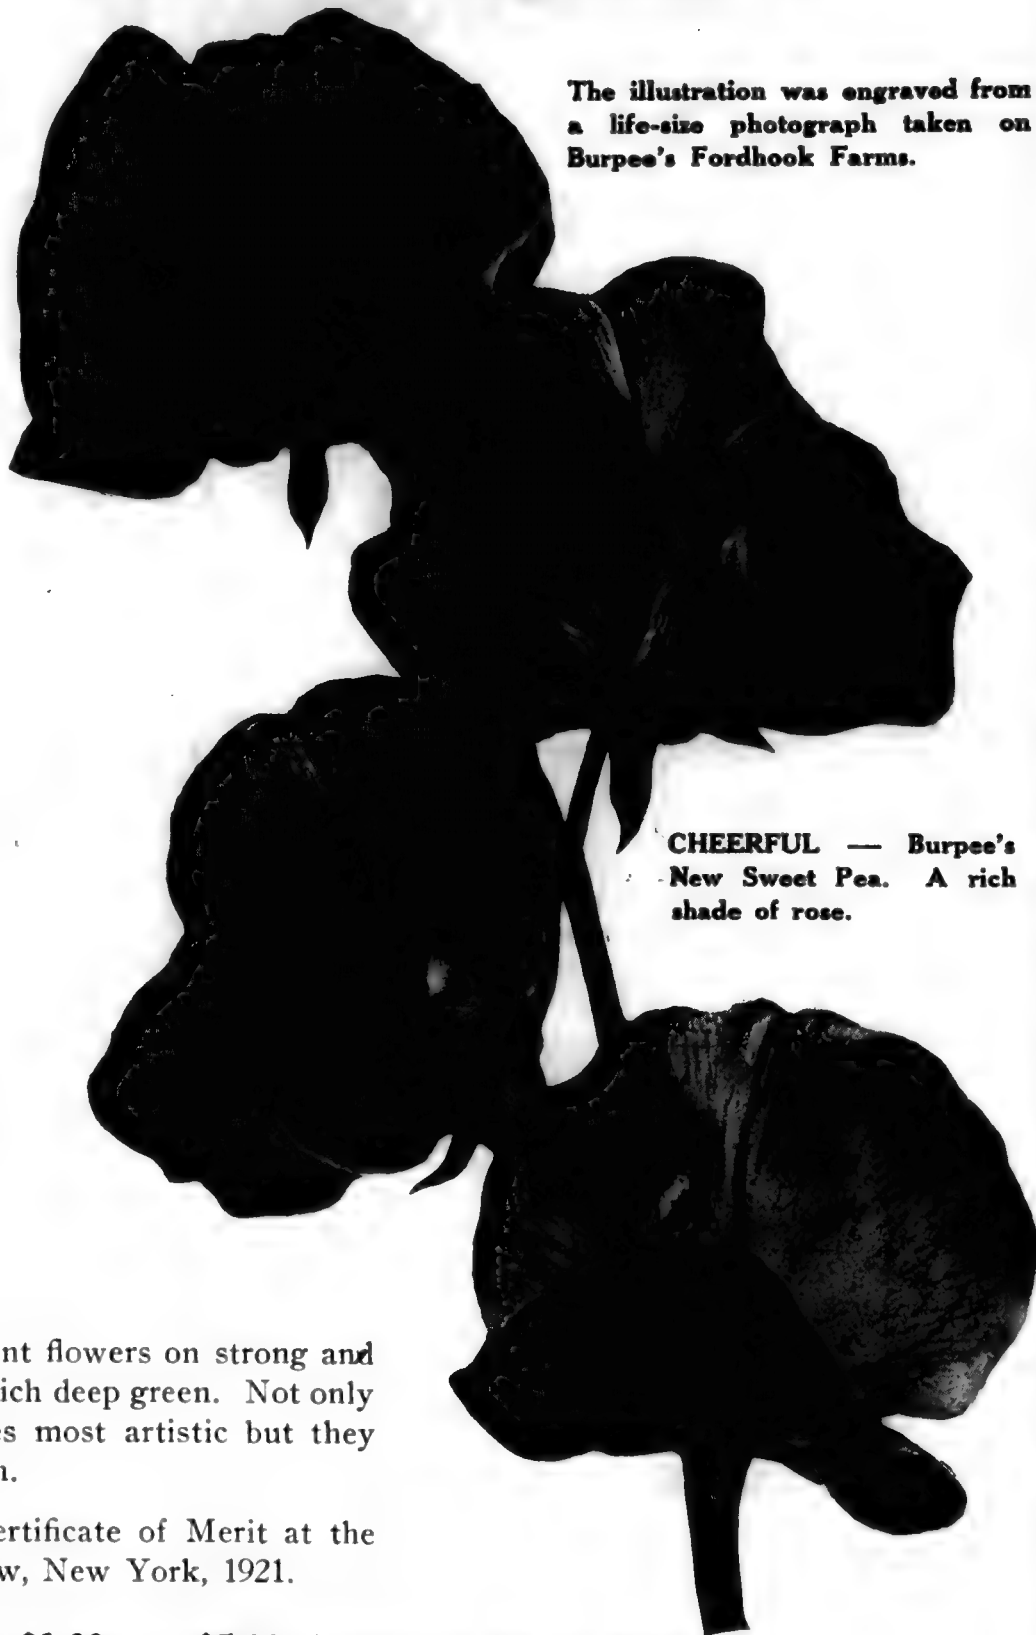

CHEERFUL was awarded a Certificate of Merit at the great International Flower Show, New York, 1921.

Trade packet, $1.00; oz., $5.00; 1/4-lb., $15.00; lb., $50.00.

The Ball Calendula

Five years ago we selected a dozen extra fine calendula plants from a strain of Orange King, saved the seed, and grew the plants separately. Two of these retained their fine points; one, a particularly double and strong grower, became the parent of a strain that we have found superior, and this becomes

THE BALL CALENDULA

The flowers are rich, glowing orange, with yellow centers, and uniformly double throughout the winter. The growth is distinctly upright, producing flowers on long stems that, when disbudded, are very large.

The A. L. Randall Co. and the Chicago Flower Growers' Association are our selling agents for these flowers, as well as our sweet peas. Reference to their cut flower price list for the past three years will show priced at about double that of ordinary calendulas. To make certain that these fine flowers have not been produced by unusual soil or treatment, we placed seed with a number of responsible growers. The representative character of these testimonials will make it unnecessary to add anything further except the price, which is:

Trade packet of $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., \$3.00; oz., \$5.00.

Our seed grower informs us the stock will be ready about August 1.

Dear Sir:

The sample packet of seed of your new Calendula which you kindly sent us germinated well, and we are getting some excellent flowers. The plants are stronger growing than those of Orange King, and the flowers are much larger and very double.

Thanking you for this opportunity of trying out this new variety and assuring you that we will want to grow it exclusively the coming year, we are

My dear Mr. Ball:

In answer to your inquiry as to how I like your Calendula, I can say without fear of contradiction that it is the finest Calendula on the market. The color is perfect, flowers large and very prolific. I have grown it for two years and feel more than satisfied with it. If I could get as many dollars out of the rest of my glass as I do out of the Calendula, I would be more than pleased. Wishing you the greatest success.

Very truly yours,

Mr. Geo. J. Ball,

Dear Sir:

It gives us great pleasure to recommend your new extra large and double Calendula, which we tried out for you last year. This Calendula is much better than the ordinary type, as it not only produces more blooms, but they are of so much better quality. It is a very great improvement in the Calendula family.

Thanking you for the seed and with best wishes, we are

Mr. Geo. J. Ball,

Dear Sir:

The Ball Calendula you sent me to try out proved to be a very fine strain; indeed, the only strain that is profitable to grow. With us it produces an upright growth with long stems that, when disbudded, produces very large orange-colored flowers and practically 100 per cent of them double.

Respectfully,
HENRY D. NEVE.

PUTTING OFF THE RAINY DAY

Borrowed money is "easy money"—to get. It's paying it back that brings the gray hairs. But here is a way to avoid gray hairs and overdue notes, and still have money to develop your business. It doesn't take a J. Pierpont Morgan to use it, either; it's a plain plan for practical people.

CREDIT is like a buzz saw. For the man who understands its use, it has no dangers. But the man who takes chances, like the man who "monkeys with the buzz saw," is sure to come to grief. Those florists who, besides running their own business successfully, bank directors—and of these there are not a few—will, therefore, find little of profit in this article. On the other hand, those who from time to time find themselves in hot water financially may learn the reason for the high temperature and be able to climb out before they are scalded.

The Common Error.

In spite of the fact that failures in this trade are recorded from time to time in The Review, this line cannot be called an unprofitable one, even by a pessimist in the summer time. The explanation of these occasional cases of misfortune lies in the individual management, or mismanagement, and in nine cases out of ten the item that brings in the sheriff is a note which the creditor is unwilling to renew.

The books of the embarrassed concern nearly always show a running profit, but they also show that this profit was not put in the bank to meet the note when it came due, but was spent as it came, usually in an otherwise praiseworthy effort to boost the business.

As a usual thing, the business into which new capital has been put shows so marked an improvement that the man at the helm believes the way to success lies in putting into the concern as much more as he can. He follows one improvement with another, thinking that the profits of next year, or of the year or two just before the note comes due, will be ample to satisfy his creditor. Perhaps it is; but again, perhaps it isn't. If he makes a bad guess, he is up against it, and there is trouble when word comes from the creditor.

Playing Safe.

Bad debts, like bad deeds, "always come home to roost." The man who remarked that something or other was "as sure as death and taxes" might as truly have made the comparison read, much trust in the future, has taken too great chances on the days ahead, instead of "playing safe" as he went along.

"Playing safe" does not, on the other hand, require the hoarding of every dollar that crosses the counter. There is a happy medium which gives abundant leeway, but requires the avoiding of extremes.

A lump sum of $1,000 presents a most respectable appearance to anyone this side of John D.'s class. Yet $1 a day for three years will amount to this sum and nearly ten per cent more. This is infantile finance, 'tis true, but it forms the basis for more elaborate systems. It is half the principle of the amortization plan.

A Big Word Explained.

Like many simple things in elaborate dress, the amortization plan sounds more formidable than it really is. Under this plan, instead of being called upon to raise a large sum of money at a certain time, after having paid interest on that amount annually or semiannually, the borrower pays a fixed sum annually, and this payment includes the interest and also a sum which goes to reduce the principal. It is not unlike the system by which a borrower pays his periodic interest and at certain periods, in addition, pays off a part of the principal.

The accompanying tables show how the payments are made and what they include. For instance, a man who has borrowed $1,000 for five years at six per cent, instead of paying $60 interest each year, a total of $300, and a lump sum of $1,000 at the expiration of that time, pays $250 each of the first four years and the balance the fifth year. His total interest is six per cent of the amount due after each payment, and is only $178.96. The first year's payment, $250, includes $60 interest—six per cent on $1,000

"as sure as debts and taxes." Few people escape from one any more than from the other, and all are distasteful.

There are other ways, of course, besides the one outlined above, in which an upright and honest florist—we are not considering any other kind—may come to be reported under "Business Embarrassments," but almost invariably this condition is the result of an assumption on the part of the florist which failed to come true. It is usually apparent that he has placed too for one year—and $190 to be paid as the principal. The second year's interest is six per cent on the remainder, $810, so that the amount that goes toward paying off the principal is so much larger. Each year the interest is smaller and the amount paid on the principal larger, and the final year of the period the payment which clears the debt is less than the usual $250.

Under the plan above outlined, the borrower does not face the task of raising a large sum at the expiration of a certain period, but by smaller payments gradually clears the debt. The debtor therefore is not led to trust to the future, for he must pay as he goes along, step by step.

Two Ways of Application.

Bankers in the agricultural districts are making loans in this way, though it is little used in the large cities. The florist who finds he cannot obtain a loan of this kind can use the system in another way, with the same good results. Instead of making the payments to his creditor, let him make them to a savings bank, in preparation for the date when the note is due. If he follows the latter plan, the interest he pays will be greater and his final payment larger than otherwise. But, at the same time, the money he places in the bank each year will be drawing interest, so that the additional amount will be reduced that much.

The value of the plan, no matter how it is applied, lies in the fact that it keeps the borrower from extravagant expenditure in the early years of the period for which the loan is made and so prevents him from being compelled to face the necessity of raising a large sum in a short time. It is a way of "playing safe" that will bring to more than one the pennant of prosperity and financial ease.

FLORISTS' CREDIT

ESTABLISHING CREDIT.

A Business of Beauty.

As a cow man would express it, I am a "coming 1-year-old" in this wonderful business called the florists' trade. My life's work has been devoted to banking and bank credits. I do not claim to know all about banking and certainly no one individual could master all the salient points of any business, let alone the florists' trade, within a short space of seven months. You might be led to think I so speak of this business as a wonderful one on account of that well known term, profits, but this is not the case, for I dare say few florists in America have been burdened by the excess profit tax in the last eighteen months.

I have been a half brother to this industry for a long, long time. A boyhood chum was a florist; his father before him was a florist, and when the time and conditions became propitious for this pal to go in for himself, I was fortunate enough to become one of his associates.

From my brief entry into this business I take the attitude that a florist is one who has built his success upon those great psychological emotions of the human heart and mind. We are dealers in nature's best and most beautiful productions. We are in constant touch with the heart strings of human life. This should mean that a florist, as a man or woman, be of a high type of citizenship, and as a rule you will find that this is the case.

The Necessity of Credit.

How may a florist establish better credit as a borrower? In the first place, let us get a full understanding of the strict meaning of credit. Put in its simplest terms, credit is an advancement, either of goods or money, such advancement being based upon the supposed ability of the party to whom advancement is made to make payment for such goods or money within a certain time.

Viewed from the bankers' standpoint, there are two elements or two classes of credit—one called the moral risk, the other a secured risk. The moral risk, to my mind, is most vital and important as relates to the florists' trade. When I mention florists' trade, I mean all of the branches of our industry, whether production or selling.

Ninety per cent of florists at one time or other must have credit of goods or money—money with which to carry on the business, take care of the important items of overhead, such as labor, rent, taxes; and to buy goods with which to stock the shelves. And at times it becomes necessary to ask for credit to tide over dull periods or periods of depression.

The Instruments of Credit.

Since credit deals with an ability to pay, necessarily this means that such an ability to pay must largely be judged by past performances. The person who can walk into his bank and sign his name on the dotted line, with no questions asked, is a man who has given due and thoughtful consideration to his obligations, has either paid his paper promptly when due or has, after full explanation, made prompt payment of interest due.

Banks are most largely used in the obtaining of credit. Banks, to a great extent, are loaning the other fellow's money. With the increasing volumes of trade, with the added intricacies caused by the ever multiplying new lines developing, and with restrictions of state and government being drawn closer and closer, bankers are required to place more safeguards around the funds which they hold as trustees. The moral risk is fast disappearing; they now are not only considering the moral ability and desire to pay, but are demanding that the borrower give further evidence of such ability to pay, in case of unforeseen conditions that might arise, and are asking that collateral security be given.

In order to meet this condition, we, as florists, must get our houses in order. Any business, whether it be manufacturing, merchandising or farming, is resolved into two elements, assets and liabilities. Credit is based upon the relation of these two elements, and it is upon such relationship that the banker, wholesaler and supply house must be guided in extending the line of credit requested. You well know the meaning of these two terms.

How many florists have such a system of accounting that they can at any time, or at certain stated periods, make a complete analysis of the past year's business? In order to teach a dog tricks, you must know more than the dog. In order to intelligently give your banker certain facts, you must be able to know these facts. The average banker is a pretty shrewd human; he must be; and he is as full of questions as a 4-year-old child.

Let us imagine that you are sitting across the table asking your banker for a loan. After the usual procedure, he has explained how hard times are, how tight the money situation is, and other information he might add. He looks over his "specks" and begins to fire questions at you.

"What is your annual volume of business? Give your total amount of annual sales. What is your monthly average overhead? Give an itemized statement of your liabilities. What is your percentage of loss in the extension of credit to your customers? Based upon last year's figures, what do you estimate your earning powers will be for the coming year? In your expenditure for advertising are you getting results? Are your advertisements given time and thought, or do you give Tom, Dick and Harry advertisements, thinking thereby that you are making customers and friends?"

These questions are all pertinent to the banker, even though some of them may seem impertinent to you.

"What is your invested capital? What is the approximate amount of property owned? What is the condition of your assets? Do you carry a lot of dead stock? Are you familiar with the merchandise as to turn-over? Are you specializing in certain lines? In your organizations are your clerks making and holding customers? Are the goods and the condition in which you put them out giving satisfaction?"

Summarizing all of these facts, figures and questions into net results, I have reached the conclusion that in order for florists to obtain better credit as borrowers, they must wake up to the possibilities of the trade; they must have confidence in themselves and pass this confidence on to the banker and to the public. Each must individually study his own problems and adapt to his own needs a system or systems which will give him certain concrete information.

The Golden Rule.

I would not attempt to suggest a system of accounting that would enable a florist to make a complete analysis or audit. There are various and sundry methods, some more adaptable to certain needs and requirements than others. The basis used by the government in the ascertaining of the income tax due is about as simple a method as can be used. Yet it is comprehensive in its

TEXAS CONVENTION

LONE STAR FLORISTS MEET.

In Banner Convention.

Adapting the title lately given the city of Dallas, in which their eighth annual convention was held July 5 to 7, Texas florists this year described their gathering as "the convention of the hour." It lived up to the appellation by exceeding all records of the state association in point of attendance and excellence of program. When one considers how conspicuous has been the success of the Texas conventions, year after year, he will appreciate how high a mark this year's gathering set.

There were about 300 in attendance, mostly from Texas cities and towns, though there was a considerable sprinkling of prominent members of the trade from other states, some from as far away as the Pacific coast, on the west, and the Great Lakes, on the north.

The trade's display, too, was the largest in the history of the organization. Supply house and greenhouse equipment manufacturers were glad of the opportunity to get in contact with trade in this section of the country and considered the proximity of the S. A. F. convention in August no deterrent from excellent business on this occasion.

Entertainment.

Since the spirit of these gatherings is one of their most important drawing cards, the entertainment provided for visitors was exceptional, even more exceptional than in preceding years. On the evening of the first day of the convention, July 5, a reception and dance was held on the roof garden of the Jefferson hotel. There was a big attendance and everyone enjoyed himself, or herself, in meeting the leaders of the association and the distinguished speakers, and in dancing until a late hour.

On the evening of the second day, the representatives of the allied tradesmen who staged exhibits furnished the entertainment for the visitors. This was likewise well attended, proving a notable success.

On the closing day, a banquet was held at the Jefferson hotel, where the room provided was filled to overflowing. Robert C. Kerr presided with his customary felicity and called upon various members of the trade, who responded with appropriate remarks.

Officers Elected.

On the closing day it was voted to hold next year's convention at Waco, Tex.

The officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:

President—James Begbie, Shreveport, La.

Vice-president—Tom Wolfe, Jr., Waco.

Secretary-treasurer—Wise Adkisson, Greenville.

Directors—Verner J. Davis, Fort Worth.

The Opening Session.

The convention was called to order at 2:30 p. m. July 5 at the Fair Park Coliseum, Dallas, Otto Lang presiding. A prayer was offered by the Rev.

Thomas F. Harper, of Dallas. The address welcoming the visitors was made by City Attorney Galloway, of Dallas, in behalf of the mayor, on vacation in the Rocky mountains. J. W. Begbie, of Shreveport, responded in a happy vein.

When the welcoming remarks and response had been completed, President Verner J. Davis presented his address. In this he said:

"We have met to hold our eighth annual convention in the city of which all Texas is proud, the 'city of the hour.' Another year has slipped back behind us. We have gone through trying times. The business world has been standing upon an uncertain brink, but I am happy to say that the clouds of business depression are rolling away, and the one bright spot in all this uncertainty is that the florists' industry has risen above most lines of business and has felt this depression to a small extent. This should put new energy, new hope and new ambition into each and everyone of us. We should go forth with the confidence that success awaits each of us in the line of endeavor that we have chosen.

"To our friends I want to say that we are proud of this great and wonderful state of ours. We florists in Texas are living on the frontier of the florists' industry of this great country of ours. Opportunity constantly walks up and down our great state, and success awaits every man and woman who pins his or her faith to the future of Texas.

"There are those who still believe that Texas cannot successfully grow her own flowers, but to the observing men God has written a message that cannot be misunderstood. Across Texas from the Rio Grande to the Red, out upon these great rolling plains of ours, extend hundreds of miles of the most beautiful wild flowers that can be seen anywhere in the world, many of which have been domesticated and are being used in the florists' shops all over this country. And God has even gone farther; He has tried to show us the secret of their growth. The past spring He has sent an abundance of rain, and Texas is heavily laden with bloom. Occasionally He sends a year with no rain, and Texas has no wild flowers. This proves to me that, with Texas soil, an abundance of water and good common sense is all that is needed to produce all the flowers that Texas needs.

"This association of ours has been growing by leaps and bounds, and today

Verner J. Davis.

(Who Presided Last Week at Texas Florists' Biggest Convention.)

we stand equal to any state association in the United States. But there remains much to do, and we should not be satisfied until every florist in the state of Texas is an active member of this association. I appeal to you Texas florists to be ever alert and see to it that this association does not go back, but that it shall go steadily forward until it stands as a monument to the florists of this state.

Support the S. A. F.

"I feel also that the Texas florists should not forget, in their enthusiasm for their state organization, that they owe allegiance to our great national organization. I ask every florist in the state of Texas who can possibly get away to attend the national convention at Kansas City. It is a rare opportunity for Texas florists, being only a night's ride from this city, and there you will get a bigger and grander vision of the florists' industry and its future than you have ever dreamed of, and you will come back to Texas a better florist. These conventions, both state and national, are things that no florist should miss. For the man who mixes with his fellows is ever on a voyage of discovery, finding new islands of power in himself, which would have remained forever hidden but for association with others.

A Good Example.

"In closing I want to give you a little piece that I found the other day, entitled, 'The Only Way Out Is Through':

The only way out of a job Bill knew

Was through!

He never once thought of going around,
Or tunneling under it, into the ground,
Or turning back—none of these would do.

"The only way out of a job is through,"

Said Bill, and—well, he proved that he knew.

"Let's build a derrick and go overhead,"

One said.

"The job is wrongly shoved on us;

"It rightly belongs to the other cuss.

"Let's slide right by and leave it flat."

But Bill with a grin said, "None of that!

"It isn't my job by rights, 'tis true.

"But the surest way out of a job is through."

Whatever they put on Bill, he'd do.

Bill learned a lot that none other knew,

Going through.

Jobs hunted Bill up and got in his way

Till it even affected the poor boy's pay!

And the others said: "Just watch that duck!

"Some stupid fellows have all the luck!"

But luck had never a thing to do

With Bill's success, for the head guys knew

Bill's only way out of a stunt was through.

Now they call him, "Boss", those others do.

And you,

If you for your motto will take old Bill's,

And use your several brains and wills,

And look less oft at the office clock,

Will soon have boosted your personal stock

Till the "luck" of Bill may be your "luck," too.

Remember his came because he knew

"The best way out of a task is through."

Remarks from Visitors.

President Davis next introduced a number of distinguished visitors from out of town, among them being Walter Armacost, Los Angeles, Cal.; A. S. Gray, president of the Oklahoma State Florists' Association; C. E. Gullett, Lincoln, Ill.; John Furrow, Oklahoma City, Okla.; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.; N. A. Benson, Denver, Colo.; H. G. Berning, St. Louis; T. J. Noll, Kansas City, Mo., and T. G. Owen, of Columbus, Miss. Each responded with a short talk, assuring the association of their pleasure in being present, recounting a number of appropriate jokes and witticisms, especially concerning the Texas weather, and expressing the hope of attending further annual conventions of the florists in Texas.

After the report of the secretary-treasurer, L. J. Tackett, the following committees were appointed: Resolutions—H. O. Hannah, Miss Wood, W. J. Baker; auditing—Robert C. Kerr, Wise Adkisson and William Cunningham.

Second Day.

At the opening of the second day's sessions, Thursday at 10:30 a. m., the report of the chairman of the legislative committee, Mr. Hall, was given. For the finance committee W. J. Baker reported subscriptions amounting to $765 for convention expenses and entertainment. For the ensuing year the finance committee was appointed as follows: W. J. Baker, James Begbie and E. W. Judge. On the welfare committee were appointed W. J. Baker, James Begbie and Mr. Caden.

One of the most helpful addresses was that delivered by Rosecoe Smith on the second day of the convention on "How May a Florist Establish Better Credit as a Borrower?" As manager of the Fort Worth Clearing House, Mr. Smith is eminently fitted to speak from the banker's point of view, and having had intimate friends among the trade and recently having been financially interested in it himself, he realizes the peculiar problems of the florist. His remarks appear in full on a preceding page.

Walter Armacost, of Los Angeles, Cal., who addressed the convention on the same day, took the convention by storm. Had he not been preceded by his reputation from the Pacific coast on this, his first visit to the state of Texas, Mr. Armacost would have met as stirring a reception, since he was remarked by many to be one of the most forceful speakers ever heard from a convention platform and impressed his hearers as one of the outstanding men of the profession.

Prepare—Then Push.

In discussing the outlook of the flower business in that section, Otto Lang, of Dallas, said:

"The future of the flower business in this section is fraught with untold possibilities. While we all know that business has not been so good as during the banner years of 1919 and 1920, we have, as a whole, not had the ups and downs that many mercantile houses had to contend with. It is true we had some stock that we purchased at high prices, some we grew with high-priced labor, but, after all, we came out ahead, and the live florist made money, although the prices were cheaper, the orders smaller and fewer.

"The past year has pointed a clear path in certain phases of our industry, to developments that were not dreamed of a few years ago. Easter and Mothers' day were record-breakers. The telegraph business has grown so large in the last year that many of us found ourselves practically unprepared for the immense volume of business we experienced on the above-named days. And I never expected to see the telegraph orders come in as they did this year, even though I lived to be 100 years old.

"While the last year has not been a highly prosperous one, it has been better for the florists' industry than for many other trades. Why should we be pessimistic? Why should I express or think of anything but the bettering of business, or wish for anything except that I could carry all the stock and supplies I shall need and grow all the flowers wanted for our local trade and some to spare? Texas is a large state, and with good crops and good prices, we shall have good business. Therefore I say, prepare—then push."

H. O. Hannah delivered a touching tribute to the memory of J. E. McAdams, one of the first life members of the association, who had died since the previous year's meeting.

A most instructive talk on "Carnations and Carnation Diseases" was given by John Furrow, the noted grower of Oklahoma City, Okla. The skill and knowledge of Mr. Furrow regarding this flower and the interest in growing it lately demonstrated among Texas florists made his remarks doubly valuable. Mr. Furrow advised against growing carnations in soil formerly used for growing cotton, since there was great danger from possible fungous diseases.

The remarks of J. C. Vaughan, of Chicago, were listened to with close attention and respect for this long-time leader in the seed and florists' trades.

Friday's Session.

Upon the opening of the session Friday morning, John S. Kerr, of Sherman, Tex., spoke interestingly on "Coöperation between Florists and Nurserymen in Texas." He urged the establishment of an arboretum for Texas.

At this time the convention was favored with a solo by Mrs. Lang, who sang "An Old-fashioned Garden," which was much enjoyed and most appropriate.

A stirring address by J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., in behalf of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association created a good deal of enthusiasm regarding that organization, and the plan advocated by Mr. Ammann received the convention's endorsement. About a dozen new F. T. D. members were enrolled.

Demonstration of Designing.

An innovation on the convention program was a demonstration of the latest and best in floral designing, given by Peter Miller, of the staff of George V. Wienhoeber, Chicago. Mr. Miller gave a demonstration of adeptness and artistic selection in the making of floral pieces that kept the close attention of those so fortunate as to be spectators. This feature of the program was voted to be one of the most successful of the three days' gathering.

On to Kansas City.

The appeal of Robert C. Kerr to Texas florists and others to support the S. A. F. was answered by the addition of thirty members to the national society. Consequently, the Texas State Florists' Association has more than an ample number to entitle it to a representative on the board of directors of the national organization.

At the same time it was decided to make up a party of Texas florists to go to Kansas City in special cars, with streaming banners to win the merited attention to the trade in the Lone Star state.

When the convention closed, the outgoing officers and the Dallas florists came in for unstinted praise from the visitors for their thorough preparations for the largest and most successful Texas convention yet held. President Verner J. Davis, of Fort Worth; Vice-president Henry Greve, of Dallas, and Otto Lang, also of the "city of the hour," were particularly congratulated on the outcome of their efforts.

LAWN WEDDING DECORATION.

Large quantities of flowers, massed against one of the most attractive landscapes in the vicinity of Washington, formed the background against which Miss Margaret Fitzgibbons and Ensign Robert H. Cary, U. S. N., were married last week at Laurel, Md. The floral decorations were supplied by Gude Bros. Co., and those who attended the ceremony pronounced the wedding one of the finest outdoor affairs consummated here this year.

A canopy of rambler roses, with a base of Boston ferns and a top of cibotium ferns, led to an arch, also of pink ramblers, beneath which was placed the prie-dieu. Twelve large Boston ferns were used, while the huge spread of the cibotium ferns mingled above with the green of the trees. The canopy itself consisted of twelve screens, each three feet wide and from six to eight feet in height. More than 2,500 sprays of rambler roses were required, and large bouquets of gladioli were also used in the arch.

An aisle 150 feet long of green burlap decorated with ten aisle posts, each bearing a bouquet of gladioli, led from the house to the prie-dieu, which was decorated with bunches of pink roses. During the ceremony the bride carried a shower bouquet of valley and orchids. The bridesmaids' bouquets were of pink roses and light blue delphiniums, while the matron of honor carried a bouquet of Butterfly roses and light blue delphiniums.

The general wedding party was taken care of on the lawn, where twenty-two small tables, each bearing a silver vase containing four large Mock roses, had been placed. The house itself had been extensively decorated, banks of Boston ferns and pink gladioli decorating the mantel in the room in which the wedding luncheon was served, while eighteen baskets of pink and white gladioli and pink, blue and white hydrangeas were also scattered around the room. The table, spread for twenty persons, carried three large vases of Mock roses and blue delphiniums, and the cloth itself was covered with Dorothy Perkins and Lady Gay ramblers. T. N. S.

BARNES DECORATES FLOATS.

Taking part in the floral parade held June 16 as a part of the program of Kansas City's park and plan week, commemorating the thirtieth year of parks and boulevards in Kansas City, there were many floats of attractive design, decorated with flowers and greens, and the day was a triumph for the florists. Many hundreds of dollars' worth of flowers were displayed, while original ideas in decorating with flowers and greens were rampant. Among the foremost of these were two floats decorated by W. J. Barnes, which indicated decorative genius of a high caliber and which did credit to the name of Barnes.

One of the two floats designed by Mr. Barnes was that of the Cosmopolitan Club. This car was covered with green oak foliage, interspersed with Dorothy Perkins sprays and pink chiffon bows in a delightfully artistic fashion. Six 6-foot baskets filled with spring flowers were distributed at regular intervals throughout the float and were an outstanding feature.

The second float was that of W. J. Barnes, Florist. A group of white doves with wings spread, as if in flight, were seen in the front of the float, guiding the way, as it were. These doves were set over a bed of ferns and blooming plants, which were placed in a frame over the car. They were being directed by a fairy who used ribbons as reins and who stood high in the center of the float between two 6-foot vases containing gladioli, larkspur and tamarix. The background of the setting was made up of russet preserved oak. Large areca palms were placed upon the running boards of the car, lending the finishing touch to the picturesque setting. Large placards on either side of the two floats indicated what organization and firm they represented.

A HOTEL FOR BIRDS.

Got a little extra space, some sunlight and some love for feathery bipeds? If you have you will be interested to hear about an idea being carried out by the Wilson Seed & Floral Co., of Columbus, O.

As described by a local paper, the firm has a "bird hotel." When people go away for their vacations and have no place to leave their birds, the Wilson Seed & Floral Co. offers its shelter and care, at regular rates. The birds furnish their own cages and baths.

This is an idea that can be adopted by many florists during the dull season. Why not a bird hotel for a while?

CUSTOMER INJURED IN STORE.

Where a retail merchant has permitted an aisle in his store to become obstructed by boxes and a customer is injured through falling over them in stepping backwards, under such circumstances that the customer is excusable in not having discovered the presence of the obstruction, it is held by the California District Court of Appeal that damages may be assessed against the storekeeper. (Brinkworth vs. Sam Seelig Co., 197 Pacific Reporter, 427.) The court incidentally remarks:

"One who, during business hours, lawfully enters a store to purchase goods does so at the implied invitation of the owner, upon whom the law imposes the duty of exercising ordinary care and prudence to keep the aisles and passageways of the premises, in and through which, by their location and arrangement, a customer in making purchases is induced to go, in a reasonably safe condition, so as not unnecessarily to expose him to danger or accident.

"The jury might have properly concluded that in so obstructing the aisle defendant was guilty of the want of ordinary care, and that, although plaintiff, had she looked, might have seen the boxes, she was, under the circumstances, justified in assuming the place one of safety, and hence her failure to observe the obstruction was not negligence on her part." S.

GETTING THE CASH.

The closing sentence of a paragraph on the editorial page of a recent issue of The Review brought recollections. The sentence read, "The florist who owes nothing is safe under any conditions." Thirty-three years ago I started in business here at East Santa Cruz, Cal., with no cash and a written resolution not to order or purchase a thing unless I had the cash on hand to pay for it. I have stuck to that resolution and so far have neither had to beg or borrow. The founder of The Review, G. L. Grant, told me it was the only way I could have made a go of it. This place was then a cow pasture. I was the first man to locate here when the street was cut through. One old florist said I "was a fool not to launch out," but he is dead and his son is in jail.

About twenty-five years ago I began to print on all my billheads this statement, "Terms: Bills due on the first of each month." This appears on all the billheads that I use. If the bill is not paid on demand, I send a statement on the first of the next month. If this statement is not paid, I put the debt into a collector's hands for legal action. In this way I get rid of poor customers, eat three meals a day, sleep well at night and have no fear of the sheriff.

W. E. King.

BEGINNING AT HOME.

The setting of a good example, like charity, begins at home. Many, though far from all, florists realize this fact and likewise realize the power of such example. One of those who do so is H. Locker, head of the firm of H. Locker & Sons, Milwaukee, Wis. By beautifying the five acres which compose his residential grounds, Mr. Locker has shown neighbors and passers-by how they may add to the enjoyment of their home. Since the grounds adjoin the firm's greenhouses, the step to actual business is close.

The illustration on this page gives a fair idea of Mr. Locker's grounds, though it does not do full justice to their appearance. Some artistic landscape work has been done and new features are constantly added. This summer a large pond was made, directly in front, which is now planted with aquatic plants.

Few florists' homes advertise their owners' profession so well as does Mr. Locker's. It would undoubtedly benefit the trade if there were more such places.

Milwaukee florists admired the Locker home last week, when the monthly meeting of the Milwaukee Florists' Club was held there, upon invitation of the Lockers.

WISCONSIN PROGRAM.

The program of the third annual summer meeting of the Wisconsin State Florists' Association, to be held at Oshkosh, July 25 and 26, is as follows:

TUESDAY, JULY 25, 9 A. M. TO 12.

Registration and reception of members and friends at headquarters, Hotel Atherton.

FROM SCHLING'S STUDENTS.

In behalf of over 150 students who attended Max Schling's school, A. S. Thurston, assistant professor of floriculture at the University of Maryland, asks space for the following expression of appreciation, drawn up by Rachel Butterworth, Framingham, Mass.; George D. Leydie, Indiana, Pa.; Eliese Hansen, Catskill, N. Y.; Frank Clark, Trenton, N. J., and himself, in behalf of the class. Mr. Schling's splendid work in conducting this class surely merits such public appreciation:

AN APPRECIATION.

The week of June 26 was one of opportunity for over 150 florists who gathered from far and wide to attend the school of floral art which was put on in New York by Max Schling. Mr. Schling spared no effort to make the week worth while in every way. The week was notable for the freedom with which Mr. Schling demonstrated methods of using all sorts of material to secure beautiful arrangements, as well as his frank treatment of details of conducting a retail business, for the generous use of his time, money and stock and for the open-handed hospitality, and, above all, for the interesting and courteous attention shown to all who were in the class. One of the most enjoyable and enthusiastic events of the whole week was the banquet which Mr. Schling tendered the class on Friday evening at the Great Northern hotel.

Not only did the class get ideas and methods of arranging flowers, but all seemed to feel the stimulation to go back to their own places with greater confidence in themselves to give better service and the desire to be more original. Although the class presented Mr. Schling with a silver service as a concrete expression of their appreciation, the members of the class feel that they will always be indebted to Mr. Schling—a debt which can only be paid off in the future by a fraternal and friendly feeling to brother florists, and thoughtful consideration of the desires of their customers.

We thank you, Mr. Schling, for the privilege of this week, for your cordiality, and for your kindly human interest and your unselfish spirit.

KANSAS CITY CONVENTION.

August 15 to 17.

The official program for the S. A. F. convention is approaching completion and will shortly be in the printers' hands. It will be found to be of more than ordinary interest, containing, as it will, many subjects suggested for discussion which may be considered somewhat as without precedent in so far as their trade value is concerned. It promises to be, also, the most complete program yet issued by the society, the fund of information it will carry leaving nothing to be desired or expected.

As previously announced, the railroad concession of a rate to Kansas City equal to a fare and one-half has gone into force, and all journeying to the convention city are simply required to purchase return tickets at this rate at their local depots, presenting at the same time a certificate which the secretary will forward to every member entitled to one, with a copy of the program. This certificate presented at the booking office in Kansas City at time of return will secure validation of the return portion of the ticket.

Trade Exhibition.

Some little space is still available in the trade exhibition, but prospective exhibitors should make application for quarters without delay, as there is a strong probability of every available foot of space being taken up well in advance of the opening day.

The following exhibitors are in addition to the list recently published:

L. C. Stroh & Sons, Batavia, N. Y.
Bergman Decorating Co., Chicago.
Allan Hunnison, Chicago.
Eastern Wreath Mfg. Co., Providence, R. I.
C. A. Kuehn, St. Louis, Mo.
H. B. Fred Kuhls, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Brandaw Art Flower Co., Chicago.

A RETAILERS' GLADIOLUS.

The accompanying illustration shows a basket, arranged by George Wienhoeber, presented last week to the mayor of Chicago. The principal material used was Gladiolus Maiden's Blush, a variety which is available in quantity this season for the first time. Gladiolus Maiden's Blush originated in Holland, with J. J. Grullemans & Sons. It is one of their primulinus hybrids of pronounced early-flowering habit. The color is well described by the name. When the variety was introduced, a couple of years ago, its color impressed A. Miller, president of the American Bulb Co., with its value for retail cut flower work, and he laid plans for acquiring as much as possible of the stock. It is said that this year the American Bulb Co. was able to plant 200,000 of various sizes and the variety probably will be widely disseminated by next year. The original stock was imported from Holland under special permit issued by the federal horticultural board, but further permits are being refused because the stock is now available in America.

OBITUARY.

Robert Van Duser.

Robert Van Duser died July 9, at his home, 4852 Blackstone avenue, Chicago, after an illness of six months' duration. Interment took place July 12, at his former home at Hebron, Wis. Mr. Van Duser, assisted by his wife, had been in the florists' and nursery business for several years, first at 4946 Washington avenue and later at the address on Blackstone avenue.

Ashland, Mass.—C. William Becker has purchased the greenhouse of E. G. Warren and is about to purchase stock with which to fill it.

Aurora, Ill.—Peter Tremulis, who has been proprietor of the Aurora Floral Co. for the last eighteen years, has sold it to Harry Haman. Mr. Tremulis has been in the florists' business for twenty-eight years.

defendant was guilty of the want of ordinary care, and that, although plaintiff, had she looked, might have seen the boxes, she was, under the circumstances, justified in assuming the place one of safety, and hence her failure to observe the obstruction was not negligence on her part." S.

GETTING THE CASH.

The closing sentence of a paragraph on the editorial page of a recent issue of The Review brought recollections. The sentence read, "The florist who owes nothing is safe under any conditions." Thirty-three years ago I started in business here at East Santa Cruz, Cal., with no cash and a written resolution not to order or purchase a thing unless I had the cash on hand to pay for it. I have stuck to that resolution and so far have neither had to beg or borrow. The founder of The Review, G. L. Grant, told me it was the only way I could have made a go of it. This place was then a cow pasture. I was the first man to locate here when the street was cut through. One old florist said I "was a fool not to launch out," but he is dead and his son is in jail.

About twenty-five years ago I began to print on all my billheads this statement, "Terms: Bills due on the first of each month." This appears on all the billheads that I use. If the bill is not paid on demand, I send a statement on the first of the next month. If this statement is not paid, I put the debt into a collector's hands for legal action. In this way I get rid of poor customers, eat three meals a day, sleep well at night and have no fear of the sheriff. W. E. King.

BEGINNING AT HOME.

The setting of a good example, like charity, begins at home. Many, though far from all, florists realize this fact and likewise realize the power of such example. One of those who do so is H. Locker, head of the firm of H. Locker & Sons, Milwaukee, Wis. By beautifying the five acres which compose his residential grounds, Mr. Locker has shown neighbors and passers by how they may add to the enjoyment of their home. Since the grounds adjoin the firm's greenhouses, the step to actual business is close.

The illustration on this page gives a fair idea of Mr. Locker's grounds, though it does not do full justice to their appearance. Some artistic landscape work has been done and new features are constantly added. This summer a large pond was made, directly in front, which is now planted with aquatic plants.

Few florists' homes advertise their owners' profession so well as does Mr. Locker's. It would undoubtedly benefit the trade if there were more such places.

Milwaukee florists admired the Locker home last week, when the monthly meeting of the Milwaukee Florists' Club was held there, upon invitation of the Lockers.

DUTCH FLOWERS IN LONDON.

Holland blooms are now being placed on the English markets and in the Dutch shops simultaneously, according to information received by the Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C., from Trade Commissioner Howard W. Adams, at The Hague. The Dutch florists have adopted the expedient of sending their flowers daily to the London market by aeroplane. The flowers are cut at night, packed early the next morning and sent by automobile from the Boskoop flower growing district to the Waalhaven aerodrome, near Rotterdam. The flowers arrive at Croydon, England, at 1:30 p. m., and from there they are dispatched by automobile to the London florists. About 100 kilograms (220.46 pounds) of flowers per day are to be transported in this way, the dispatch says.

INTERESTING IF TRUE!

A British daily paper recently devoted considerable space to a report of an experiment in spraying. It appears that the crop on fifty acres of fruit trees was in danger of destruction owing to the ravages of caterpillars, when the owner hit upon the idea of having the trees sprayed with a dry powder insecticide by means of an aeroplane. Arrangements were made in due course and the aeroplane, flying from ten to twelve yards above the fruit trees, distributed about half a ton of insecticide. Said the report: "The operation was so successful that, after the whole fifty acres had been treated, hardly a caterpillar was left alive."

FILMS TO SELL TOMATOES.

Though the land across the water is spoken of as the "old country," it is not so behind the times as is sometimes implied. Indeed, it appears that, horticulturally, the folks there are, in some instances, in the van. One instance is that of the British Glasshouse Marketing Association, the organization of which was related in these columns some time since. The association, whose object is to advertise British-grown tomatoes, has prepared a film which is to be a feature of its publicity campaign. Description of it is thus given in the Horticultural Trade-Journal:

"The British Glasshouse Marketing Association, Ltd., last week gave a private press view of a film which they will show in conjunction with their publicity campaign at popular seaside resorts and exhibitions. Viewing the film and penning a review depends on the individual writing it; he may approach it from a humorous standpoint or otherwise. To our mind the proper way to deal with 'The Love Apple' film is from a standpoint of pull and cumulative effect in furthering the cause of co-operative publicity as applied to glasshouse crops. The value of this film lies in the fact that it is an interesting story for the ordinary film goer; it is dressed in a manner that appeals to the popular taste. Starting with a conventional scene of 'hubby' off to business—no kiss—and anniversary of wedding day. Just as his wife is turning to go in, a greengrocer's boy delivers a 'container' full of vegetables, among which is a bag of English tomatoes. Seeing the tomatoes, she remembers that they used to be called 'love apples' when she was a little girl and wishes that they had some magical power which might rekindle her husband's (as she fears) dying love. And her wish is gratified. Then the scene changes and from out of a fine range of glasshouses comes a dainty Cupid with bow and arrows—wife at home receives one; 'hubby' passing a fruiterer's one also. Transformation. 'Hubby' led through house after house of tomatoes, all agrowing and ablowing, planting, stringing, staking and tying all being viewed, on to the packing sheds, incidentally showing the British Glasshouse Marketing Association's neat containers, name nice and clear. Wife, also walking around the Lea Valley Research Station, Cheshunt Laboratory, etc., noticing the care taken to produce clean fruit, also shown a very fine panoramic view of what looks very much like Rochford's famous nurseries. On these two wander, never meeting of course, and finally 'come to'—she in the kitchen and he outside the shop. He remembers that he omitted to give his wife the customary 'good-bye,' and decides to take her some English tomatoes as a peace offering. He accordingly purchases a 'box' and returns home with them. She hears his footsteps and runs to the door to meet him. He explains his return and hands her his gift, whereat she is quite satisfied, and he rectifies his omission as the scene fades out. Such is the outline of this film, which should help to make the tomato magic, not only from the consumer's point of view, but the producer's, and give impetus to the slogan: 'There's money in glass.' ESTABLISHING CREDIT.

scope. It has to do with earnings. From earnings come the ability to pay, and upon the earning power of an individual or firm depends the success or failure of the business.

Do not stop with the individual; let the local or community interests be combined. By this I mean that a spirit of coöperation and harmony should prevail among the fraternity; let them practice one with the other the principles of good will and brotherly love, live and let live. The florists are as necessary and are as vital to the community as any other tradesman, and their pay-rolls go to feed hungry mouths, build happy homes, do their bit in keeping the wheels of progress turning.

Much good is now being accomplished by local organizations in studying local problems. In a coöperative way they are acquainting the public with facts and figures; as a result, the public is fast awakening to the realization that the florist is on the map to stay. This confidence in our industry will become contagious. It will reach the banker, the wholesaler and the supply house.

I can assure you that these facts, when intelligently given, will enable your banker to pass immediate judgment, to give you yes or no for an answer. After having been granted credit, guard it as you would your own life. Credit is a good name; a good name is better to be chosen than great riches. Watch your step. Meanwhile

SIMEON FIELD LEONARD.

A GENUINE "I Will" Chicago man is S. F. Leonard, who founded the Leonard Seed Co., in the mid-west metropolis. In Chicago he was born September 4, 1852; here he attended the public schools; here in 1875 he sold for the Chicago Screw Co.; here from 1881 to 1884 he was a salesman for Vaughan's Seed Store and here in 1884 he started out for himself in a small way in the old Haymarket, issuing his first catalogue in 1888, the start of his mail order business. Now the Leonard Seed Co. is one of the largest and most highly regarded wholesale houses in the trade. Mr. Leonard, a practical seedsman and grower, has to his credit seed strains of many of our improved types of vegetables; he is often designated as the pioneer of the onion set industry of Chicago. Noted for his foresight and judgment, he has been active in many civic movements and institutions, such as the Market Trust & Savings Bank, the Chicago Association of Commerce and the Union League Club. He has been a prominent figure in the American Seed Trade Association, of which he was elected vice-president at Chicago, June 23.

watch your overhead, cut your corners, make personal sacrifices of time and thought to your business. In so doing, you will become more and more a part of it. It will be more vitally interesting to you and you can come to the end of your journey with the consolation of having tried to do your best or, as the Texas cowboy would say, "you have done your durndest."

TO WHICH WILL WE APOLOGIZE?

I wish to thank you very much for the prominence you gave to my article on "Growing Seed in California," the paper which I read before the convention of the American Seed Trade Association, in Chicago, last month.

The article by George J. Ball, on "Sweet Pea Fields in California," in the same issue, that of June 29, was interesting. It caused us just a little amusement, over the halftone appearing on page 15. You have the names of Dr. Franklin and Frank Cuthbertson transposed; the serious-looking gentleman with the cigar in his mouth happens to be Dr. Franklin. However, the picture is a good one and we trust was enjoyed by your readers.

Chittenango, N. Y.—A. R. Ellis has purchased property on the Seneca turnpike for the purpose of increasing his range of glass. With the additions, Mr. Ellis will have more than 7,000 feet of glass.

ARNATIONS

INCREASING CARNATION CUT.

How Charles Mueller Does It.

In the illustrations on this page are shown specimens of carnations grown for Mothers' day by the Charles P. Mueller Floral Co., of Wichita, Kan. One illustration shows a stem of Carnation Matchless with five flowers on it; the other shows three stems of Matchless and three of Belle Washburn, with thirty flowers on the six stems. These specimens speak for themselves as to the firm's ability to increase the yield of carnations for Mothers' day. Mr. Mueller has described the firm's method as follows:

"On or about February 1 we select a bench or two of carnations which are beginning to show many shoots coming on.

"By February 15 the buds begin to show. We disbud the lower two, as these two have a rather weak stem. Then we watch the development of the remaining buds.

"If the terminal bud is developing rapidly, we leave that on, as it holds the next bud back somewhat. When the terminal bud has opened, we take it off and use it in design work. If the terminal bud is not developing rapidly, we disbud it and leave the other three or four good, strong buds to develop. The buds must be watched carefully from now on, so as to bring in the crop at the proper time. Should the buds come a little slowly, we put more heat under the bench (we grow all our carnations on raised benches) and open up the ventilators. If they seem to be coming a little too fast, we cut off the steam entirely and lower the temperature in the house by giving plenty of air.

Hastening or Hindering.

"In this way we hasten the flowers a week to ten days or we can hold them back. By treatment in this manner the flowers all develop at the same time. I have had as many as six perfect flowers on one stem. Care should be taken in feeding, as carnations require more nourishment when more flowers are grown to the stem.

"To be sure, the same treatment will not apply throughout the United States and must be modified to suit local requirements. In the first place, we must consider the condition of the weather. In Kansas we have from twelve to twenty days of sunshine a month during the winter, which causes the flowers to develop more quickly and strongly than where there is much cloudy weather and artificial heat must be depended upon. It took us nearly five years before we got hold of the right flowering stem and learned how to handle the temperature in the houses so that we could depend on a big crop. It is quite true that once in a while we miss it by two or three days, but that is due to sudden, unexpected changes in the weather."

Mr. Mueller has found that the best varieties to grow in the manner described are Matchless for white and Belle Washburn for red.

BENCHES OR GROUND BEDS.

Is it advisable to use ground beds in a carnation house? We have Lord & Burnham houses, 30x60 feet, which were built about six years ago. P. G.—O.

If your raised benches are rotted out, it might be advisable to consider putting in solid beds to replace them. As good carnations can be grown on solid beds as can be grown on raised benches. If one style of bed has any advantage in one respect, the other probably has an advantage in another, so that the two will prove out about the same.

If your houses are 6 years old, it will not be advisable to plant in the soil that has been under the benches all this time, even if the drainage is good. Place at least a 6-inch board next to the walk and fill in that much soil. If the natural drainage is not good, build up the sides to a height of a foot or more, filling in with cinders all but the upper four inches. Cover them with an inch of straw manure and then fill in the remainder with soil. A. F. J. B.

TREATING CARNATIONS.

Is it advisable to spray carnations with Bordeaux mixture once a week until housing time.

How old should the manure be which is used for a top-dressing on carnations about October? If I obtain fresh horse manure now and put it on a pile and let it rot until that time, will it be suitable? A. J. L.—Mo.

Spraying your carnation plants with Bordeaux mixture will do no harm, but unless they are being attacked by some fungous disease, there is no need for repeating it weekly. A good spraying now, or a couple of weeks before you begin benching, might be of benefit by keeping away spot disease while the plants are taking hold on the benches.

We prefer rather well decayed manure for mulching in the fall. If you will get fresh manure now and turn it several times to keep it from burning, until it is spent, and then shred it just before using, it will do quite well.

TRAVELERS' MILEAGE BOOKS.

The trade's traveling men will be pleased to learn that legislative action on the bill providing for issuance by railroads of interchangeable mileage books as a convenience for travelers was concluded July 1 by the Senate. However, the bill will not become effective before August 15, because of the House adjournment until that date. The bill must be signed by Speaker Gillett, of the House, in open session before being sent to President Harding.

Interchangeable mileage books at "just and reasonable rates" under regulations of the interstate commerce commission are authorized, but not required, by the bill, which has been before Congress for many years and originally proposed a straight fare of 2½ cents a mile. Senators expressed fear that House amendments in which the Senate yesterday concurred might extend the interchangeable mileage to state traffic as well as interstate traffic and that the bill might be held unconstitutional.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

A PAGE OF TIMELY AID AND ADVICE TO GROWERS

CALLAS.

Are your callas resting now? Of course, they will flower more or less all summer, even in pots, if kept fed and watered, but there is no great call for their blooms in summer, and they should now have a rest. Lay the pots on their sides outdoors and dig up the plants which may be growing in beds or benches; pack these in flats of loam and stand them where they can have a good drying out. You can plant some of the small offsets in the field, if you want to increase your stock. These can be dug up and potted or benched in September. You will find Godfrey by far the most floriferous variety.

TRACHELIUM CÆRULEUM.

Trachelium cæruleum, native to the Mediterranean regions of Europe, proves hardy in many parts of England and should thrive well in our warmer states. It makes a fine pot plant. Its umbels of lovely, soft blue flowers are produced in great profusion from early June until late July under glass. The plant will continue to flower until fall if planted outdoors. Seeds sown in late July and carried over in a frost-proof frame or cold greenhouse will produce plants which can be grown large enough, if necessary, to fill 12-inch tubs. Ordinarily, however, 7-inch or 8-inch pots prove more serviceable. The cloud-like terminal heads of flowers, and the abundant side shoots opening a little later, have fine keeping and remarkable shipping qualities. If you want something not grown by everyone, try a few of the throatwort, as this plant is commonly called. It belongs to the campanula family, but does not in any way look like a campanula.

CYCLAMENS.

It hardly pays the average small grower, who handles but a small number of such winter-flowering plants as cyclamens and fibrous-rooted begonias, to grow them from seeds or cuttings. It is far better to secure stock to grow on from one of the many specialists who handle such plants in large quantities. Now is a good time to buy some cyclamens in 3-inch or 4-inch pots and grow them along for Thanksgiving or Christmas trade. Remember that the red and pink shades of cyclamens are the best sellers at holidays.

In repotting the plants use a compost of fibrous loam, if you have it, to which add one-fifth each of well decayed cow manure passed through a ½-inch screen and some flaky leaf-mold not too much decayed, also a good dash of sharp sand. Give the plants good drainage, pot firmly, leave sufficient space in the top of the pot for water, and be careful not to cover the corm, or bulb, with soil.

Cyclamens are mainly grown in greenhouses during the summer, where they are moderately shaded during bright weather. It is a decided advantage to use clear glass and shade with cheesecloth or some other light cloth. Avoid, at all events, a heavy shade on the glass, as this would make the plants leggy. Water the plants carefully and spray them lightly several times a day in clear, warm weather.

The bane of cyclamens is the mite, which annually destroys many thousands of plants by deforming and distorting the flowers and foliage. Spraying with nicotine of a good standard brand once a week should be done, directing it not only over the foliage, but well into the center of the bulbs. Cold-frames are good for cyclamen culture during the hot months; keep the sashes tilted at top and bottom all the time. Use lath or some other kind of removable shades on the frames, but don't keep them on in sunless weather and do not put them on too early in bright weather.

CLEMATIS RECTA.

There is more than one clematis of shrub habit. C. recta, sometimes called erecta, is pure white in color, and its sweet-scented flowers are abundantly produced on stems three to four feet high in June. The flowers are similar to those of the popular climber, C. paniculata. Splendid for cutting, fine in design work and of excellent keeping qualities, this is one of the most valuable of pure white herbaceous perennials for the florist to grow. It is a native of Europe and has stood 20 to 25 degrees below zero without protection for some years; so it may fairly be classed as hardy.

There is another shrub clematis, with heavier foliage, named Davidiana. This is a native of China and produces erect panicles of large blue flowers in July and August. The foliage is similar to that of the Japanese anemone. Each of these plants is of value to the florist.

There is a double form of C. recta, introduced by Lemoine some years ago, also a form somewhat taller and carrying larger pure white flowers, introduced from China, named C. recta mandshurica. These shrub clematis can be propagated and replanted in fall, by means of root divisions.

PRUNING FLOWERING SHRUBS.

Too many so-called "experts," when called upon to prune deciduous flowering shrubs, use the shears on them in winter or early spring. This is utterly wrong. With the exception of hydrangeas like paniculata and arborescens, practically all shrubs, including syringas, viburnums, spiræas, forsythias, loniceras and exochordas, should be pruned after flowering. Then any weak or dead wood can be removed and the plants shaped up a little if necessary.

This will give them time to make new wood, which will flower the following spring or summer. When pruning is done to dormant shrubs, it simply means the cutting of their flowering wood. The appearance of many topiary plants seen on home grounds show the results.

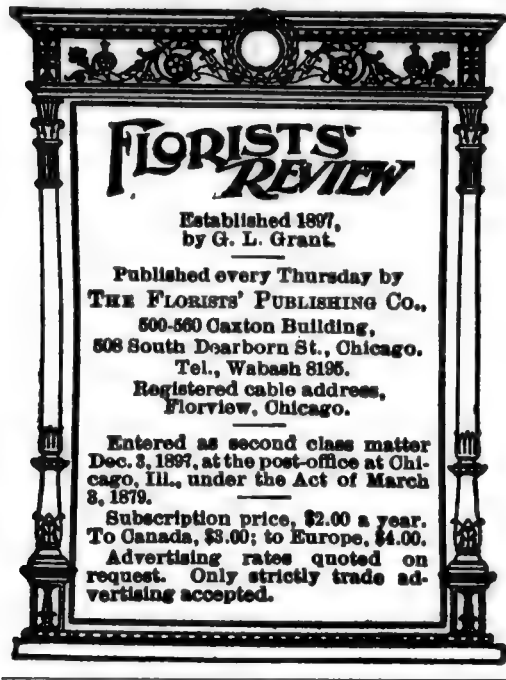

GLOXINIAS.

The number of summer-flowering pot plants is not great. Among them gloxinias are worthy of special note. These are not plants which will stand long shipment, as foliage and stems are quite brittle and easily broken, but for home trade or nearby markets they have considerable value. There has been a wonderful improvement in these plants within the last twenty-five years. A sensation was created by the first erect-flowered plants. Until that time all plants produced flowers which practically lay over the pots unless supported. There is no reason why any florist should not grow his own gloxinias. The seeds germinate readily in a warm, moist house. The seedlings can be pricked off into flats and later potted singly. They bloom well the same season.

The way to get large bulbs, however, is to plant gloxinias out over an old hotbed; shade the glass, and tilt up the sashes at top and bottom a little. The compost should be light, but fairly rich and sandy. The plants should be fumigated once a fortnight for thrips, which are sometimes exceedingly destructive. Gloxinias planted out make wonderful leaves and flowers and will produce splendid bulbs for use the following season. The handsome flowers are most useful for table decorations and other purposes. Winter is the time to sow gloxinias. Those who do not want the trouble of growing them from seed can always purchase bulbs. Gloxinias must not be exposed to strong sunshine, and water must be kept off the foliage, which would otherwise soon have a rusty appearance.

PENTSTEMONS.

The forms of pentstemon hybrids are handsome as bedding plants. There are a number of charming hardy varieties, without some of which no herbaceous border is complete. All are excellent for cutting and can be arranged most gracefully in vases. Probably the finest of the family is P. barbatus Torreyi, which is also sometimes classed with the chelones. Of graceful, willowy habit, this variety carries bright scarlet flowers, which are effective in the hardy border. It attains a height of three or four feet. A pretty variety now in bloom is P. digitalis, with white flowers, spotted with violet. Other good hardy penstemons are cæruleus, dark blue; pubescens, rosy-purple, and spectabilis, blue and red.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

RAIN has ended the forty days' drought in the middle west, to the great relief of all growers of outdoor crops.

It is so easy to get and to hold customers by giving the best you can for the money that it is surprising not more try it.

Now is a good time to advertise the telegraph delivery service to the public. Such orders now are even more desirable than at a busier time.

THE display window will work just as hard for you in summer as in winter if you will give it a chance. Brighten it up with flowers. Don't fill it with palms and ferns.

A FEW price cards on vases of flowers in a florist's window at this time of year will sell many flowers. The public at large does not realize how cheaply they can get good flowers.

It is an axiom among economists that high prices increase production. Nothing could do more to develop American production of Paper Whites and Lilium giganteum bulbs than is being done by the rise in prices in France and Japan.

THERE are times when business expenditures must run ahead of business income, but cash in the bank and a clean slate usually depend on the character of the management. The manager who cuts out non-essentials usually accumulates a surplus and can pay on the dot for all essential needs of his business.

ED. A. HUMFELD, chairman of the entertainment committee of Kansas City florists for the S. A. F. convention, promises a "great time" for those who attend. He and his fellow hosts are expecting a record attendance, since he "knows a great many eastern florists will be crazy to see the buffalo roaming around on our streets."

THE present is most decidedly not the time for the greenhouse man to enter the market for his coal supply. The demand from railroads, public utilities and factories is forcing prices up on the limited supply, curtailed by local railroad tie-ups as well as the miners' strike. In anticipation of a settlement ere autumn's approach, those not in present need of coal are holding aloof.

THE Tuinbouw Aankoop Centrale, with headquarters at Aalsmeer, Holland, is said to be the largest organization of florists in the world, having nearly 5,000 members.

If urban apartment dwellers knew how much they could brighten their homes with a couple of dollars' worth of garden flowers from the florist at this season of the year, we'd sell many more of those that now go to the ash can.

WHEN you want to know anything pertaining to the trade, ask Review readers. One recently wanted a pair of pruning shears with two cutting blades. The reply at hand is: "Write to William Von Helms, Monsey, Rockland county, N. Y., for Kunde & Son normal double-cut pruning shears."

IN most large business houses the "information" desk is directly in front of the entrance. A certain bank pays one of its florist depositors $15 weekly for placing, every other day, a fresh basket of flowers on the desk of the information clerk, where they will be seen by everyone who enters. After several months of experience the manager says it is the best thing he ever did to produce an atmosphere of good cheer and friendliness in his institution. See if you cannot get some good concern in your vicinity to try it. Help the idea to spread.

As it is the practice of some publishers to send out canvassers for subscriptions, a petty swindle often is perpetrated by persons who profess to represent publishers or subscription agencies, but who, as a matter of fact, merely have some fictitious receipt blanks and pocket whatever money they can get, without forwarding any subscriptions to the publishers. Usually such petty swindlers claim to represent some agency, so that they may seem qualified to take subscriptions for any publication their victim will pay for. It is a good rule never to patronize such canvassers. If a publication is worth reading it is worth sending for—send the publisher your subscription in a letter. As for The Review, this paper never has employed canvassers. Its news correspondents are its only representatives and they are all well known in their own communities. If a stranger asks you to pay him money for The Review, don't do it.

GRAFTED DOUBLE GYPSOPHILA.

The Review has received several inquiries from subscribers who wish to purchase plants of grafted double gypsophila, like the ones the subscribers formerly obtained from Holland. If anyone has these to offer, The Review would like to hear from him.

If some reader who knows the process of grafting the gypsophila will describe it in The Review, undoubtedly a number of subscribers would like to try growing it for themselves, and probably we can develop another item on which profitable business can be done season after season.

MOTORING TO KANSAS CITY.

For the benefit of those florists who plan to travel by automobile to the S. A. F. convention, at Kansas City, August 15 to 17, Alpha Elberfield, chairman of the local publicity committee, points out that there are free tourist camps delightfully situated on some of Kansas City's highest points within four minutes' ride of the heart of the city. To those who wish them, road maps will be supplied, showing the best roads to Kansas City from various parts of the country and indicating the location of the tourist camps. A great many visitors are expected to travel to the convention by motor. Those who travel from Chicago and vicinity are advised to take the Tib road from Chicago to Des Moines, thence to Kansas City.

Those who wish the comforts of a hotel after motoring to the convention city will find ample accommodations. The local convention bureau issues a folder in which are listed about seventy-five of the city's hotels and their rates. In next week's issue, The Review will present a list of those most convenient and desirable for convention visitors.

GET YOUR CERTIFICATE.

Members of the Society of American Florists, and dependent members of their families, journeying to Kansas City will be able to purchase round-trip tickets at the rate of one fare and one-half on the identification certificate plan, only good via the same route in both directions. Return tickets must be validated at Kansas City by ticket agents at the regular ticket offices of the lines for which they are issued, on any date to and including final return limit, provided a train selected reaches the original starting point prior to midnight of the date limit.

Certificates will be furnished on application to the secretary of the Society of American Florists, John Young, 43 West Eighteenth street, New York. One certificate will suffice for each member and includes the dependent members of his or her family. These certificates should be properly filled out before presentation to the ticket agent.

The certificates will be available for Chicago florists going August 11 to 17, the return limit being August 23.

HOW'S YOUR STAFF?

From all the indications, there is a long period of prosperity ahead of everyone in the florists' and nursery business. The concerns which realize the benefits of the long run of steady good business, which seems just ahead, will be the ones adequately organized. A one-man institution can do only one-man volume. To handle more than a limited quantity of business requires capable and experienced help. Have you got it? Enough of it? Now is the time to prepare. At the moment experienced help is more abundant than it has been at any time since 1917. Not in the last five years have the opportunities been so good to build a strong organization. It's like this:

Kindly discontinue our Help Wanted ad. We have been swamped with answers. The little liner costing only 54 cents per week already has brought forty-three applications. Never saw anything to equal it.—Enid Floral Co., Enid, Okla., July 5, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

BRIEF ANSWERS.

W. N. C., Mich.—One of the flowers forwarded is the common spiderwort, Tradescantia virginiana, or virginica, which has deep blue flowers. The other specimens were too dried up for identification.

NEW YORK.The Market.

Although under the influence of summer conditions, the cut flower market for several days has cleaned up well and prices have been fairly satisfactory. Recent storms and a long spell of rainy weather curtailed outdoor stock, and improved weather conditions have hardly had time to work a change. Consequently, the daily arrivals have cleaned up, and there has been a noticeable impetus to the general buying.

There is a flood of gladioli, but good prices are obtained. Asters are poor in quality, too poor to make quotations possible. Dahlias seem to have the advantage over asters, moving at from 15 cents per bunch to as much as $1.50 per dozen for fine stock—rather extraordinary conditions for dahlias, but not so wonderful in view of the quality offered.

Roses are in small supply, but, with quality low, the condition causes no excitement and the demand is well in proportion to arrivals. American Beauty is not in good supply, yet the price range is unchanged. Hybrid teas arrive more or less open.

A few good carnations continue to arrive and move at as high as $4 per hundred, but most sales are made within a range of $1 to $3 per hundred. Many growers have already emptied their benches.

Cattleyas are in moderate supply.

White lilies are fairly plentiful. Rubrums are abundant, but are freely taken at $3 to $8 per hundred flowers, the lower figure for flowers cut from stems and in demand for funeral work. Lily of the valley is in oversupply and the range is 50 cents to $4 per hundred sprays. Bouvardia Humboldtii is plentiful and keeps valley sales down somewhat. Sweet peas are scarce, the season being practically past. A few outdoor flowers arrive and bring from $1 to $2 per hundred.

Herbaceous flowers are more than plentiful, but their movement is active. Zinnias are bringing from 20 cents to 75 cents per bunch, the latter price for the giant kind on long stems. Delphiniums bring from 25 cents to 50 cents per bunch. Other items are gaillardias, coreopsis, tuberose, candytuft in several shades, cornflowers, centaureas, phlox; gypsophila, both annual and perennial, the latter commanding 75 cents per bunch; summer lilies, lychnis, hydrangeas, calendulas, marigolds and feverfew.

Various Notes.

Most of the wholesalers in the different markets are closing at 4 p. m. daily, and vacations are the order of the day.

Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., president of the American Dahlia Society, was in town to attend a meeting of the society's executive board Wednesday, July 12, when matters relating to the September dahlia show were considered.

At the Grand Central station the station authorities have established a "clearing house" for flowers for the poor, commuters being able to deposit donations of flowers from their gardens at a point in the depot, where they are collected and properly distributed. This is a good work and worthy of all encouragement. It removes the argument of many suburban garden owners that it is useless to grow quantities of flowers, for the reason that there is no use for them. There is a use, as the railroad people have decided through their generous measures for collection of the flowers, and it is hoped that the commuters will be as liberal in their response to the request which these measures silently convey.

S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, president of the S. A. F., spent Monday morning, July 10, at Secretary Young's office and planned to be there again Thursday, July 13.

David Burpee, of the W. Atlee Burpee Co., Philadelphia, was a visitor Saturday, July 8. J. H. P.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are pleased at the number of out-of-town visitors who have dropped in at their new store. A florist from Columbus, Ga., whom they had not previously met, called and left an order a few days ago.

NEWARK, N. J.The Market.

Growers in Newark and vicinity are completing their chrysanthemum planting in good shape for the fall blooms. The plants are of good quality and an excellent crop is expected. Many people of Newark are now on their vacations, and there is almost no transient trade. Funeral work forms the bulk of business at present, and there is not a large volume of that. The situation is normal, however, for the midsummer season. General business conditions are gradually improving and unemployment is decreasing.

Various Notes.

Rosedale Florist is the trade name which has been filed for the business conducted at 398 Orange road, Montclair, N. J., by Oliver H. Leaman, 390 Orange road.

Fred Philips, of Philips Bros., Broad street florists, and his family are spending the month of July at North Asbury Park. As usual, he is devoting much time to sea fishing, big striped bass being the object of his quest. Mr. Philips is stopping at the Asbury Inn.

Before the war several of Newark's largest florists had a considerable trade in baskets of flowers and other floral gifts for passengers leaving on transatlantic liners from New York or ports on the New Jersey coast. The war killed this trade, but now it is beginning to pick up again. Philips Bros., Broad street, made a special bid for this kind of trade by a recent window display, the center of which was a floral ship three feet long. Oak leaves the color of the water were arranged to represent the waves. Colored oak leaves formed the hull and lilies of the valley and pansies the decks and upper hull of the ship. R. B. M.

FORT WAYNE, IND.The Market.

Business has held up fairly well, considering the extreme heat and the abundance of outdoor flowers. Roses are in abundance, but the quality is not of the best. Carnations are small. Cattleyas are not plentiful and the demand is good. Gladioli, delphiniums, snapdragons, gaillardia, Shasta daisies and snapdragons are fine and there is a good demand for them.

Various Notes.

Edgar Wenninghoff has moved into his new store, located at 124 East Washington boulevard. Mr. Wenninghoff is converting it into an attractive place. The room is much more spacious than his former place and will afford a better opportunity of caring for his increasing business.

The Blossom Floral Co. furnished the carnations used in the opening of one of the new Piggly-Wiggly stores. The Blossom Floral Co. reports business as quite good. A number of made-up baskets have found ready sale. The company has also had its share of wedding decorations and bouquets.

The Fort Wayne Flower Shop, owned by George Bischoff, has been sold. Mr. Bischoff has retired from the business. The place will be discontinued as a flower store. Scott & Tuttle, a shoe firm, will put in one of a chain of stores August 1.

The Doswell Floral Co. was busy last week with weddings and a large amount of funeral work.

Miss Ruth Rehm has been employed as an assistant in the offices of W. J. & M. S. Vesey. S. N.

CHICAGO.The Market.

The week in which falls the Fourth of July is known as the dullest week of the year in the Chicago market. Everything then is in the depths of the seasonal depression in this trade. The supply is smallest, demand is lightest and prices usually are lowest. If the week ran true to form this year, we can with confidence count on a good summer.

While no one could wax enthusiastic over last week's market, there have been many worse. The demand was sufficient to clean up all the good roses, to clear the few good carnations and sweet peas, to move the lilies, valley and other greenhouse flowers. It kept the gladioli moving, but the other garden flowers stagnated; there was little demand for them. Prices were not high, but they have been lower. The total of sales for the week was nothing to brag about, but it was at least as good as for the first week of July in any other year. So why worry?

Of the greenhouse flowers the rose is the only one that retains a place of real importance. The supply last week probably was at the lowest level of the season. The cut came almost entirely from houses being carried for the summer cut, although a few flowers already are being cut from young stock which has been planted for next winter's crops. No doubt the supply will increase steadily as the later-planted houses come into crop. The quality of the roses is all one could expect in the heated term and the demand took all the better grades. With the medium lengths fairly abundant and cheap, the demand for shorts was light and some of these had to be sold outside the regular channels.

During the last week, however, the gladiolus came into a dominant place in the market. For the next two months the indoor flowers will have stiff competition from this queen of the garden.

OUR FLOWERS ARE SECOND TO NONE

There has been wonderful improvement in the gladiolus the last few years and it is small wonder the public buys the new kinds with alacrity; they are so fine they are irresistible if one is a flower lover. By the same token, the man who grows the old-timers is out of luck—the varieties must be good, they must be well grown and they must be cut and handled right or they will not sell. The early varieties began to come in heavily last week. They sell well, but there will be no such thing as being cleaned up, except temporarily, for a long time to come.

All the other flowers can be disposed of this week in a sentence: They occupy a minor place, but the demand for variety creates a market for the best; the culls are hard to do anything with.

The present week opened quietly, probably because of the high heat July 9, continued July 10 and 11. The heat not only deadened the demand but it increased production and filled the market with wide open roses. It also increased the receipts of gladioli. Asters have become available in moderate quantities. The passing of the wedding season is apparent in the accumulation of white roses. These were short of the demand and commanded a premium through June. Now they can be moved only at concessions, finding their principal outlet for funeral work.

Various Notes.

This is the vacation season. One or two faces are missing everywhere one goes.

The A. B. C. holds most of the stock of one of the notable new early gladioli, Maiden's Blush. President Miller had an armful of the flowers one day last week and George Wienhoeber made them up for him, in two handsome arrangements. The basket was sent to the mayor. The vase stood on the counter of the E. C. Amling Co. for several days, a fine demonstration of the value of the variety.

Charles London, for nine years with George C. Weiland, in Evanston, has resigned and is preparing to open a retail store for his own account about September 1. The location chosen is in a new building, now being erected, on Sherman street, Evanston.

Holm & Olson, St. Paul, are large growers of Liliun regale and last week sent quantities of it to the Chicago Flower Growers' Association. The dark livery business has become an established feature of flower store service as understood by the public. He says he finds many customers asking for the service as a matter of course and that in consequence he has been sending out about five times as many orders as he received from other florists.

George Weiland and Mrs. Weiland entertained all the other directors of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, with their families, at their home in Evanston July 2. There were twenty-seven guests in all. The day was spent most enjoyably in eating and drinking and singing.

Charles McCauley, having completed and planted his new place at Geneva, is starting another house, 38x250. This will be used for Premier and Butterfly and will increase the capacity to 18,000 plants.

Bert Chadwick is motoring in Wisconsin.

The daily papers carried a story, July 11, of the death of Robert Van Duser, who was referred to as a "well known nurseryman and florist."

Chicago's Max Schling—Peter Miller, of George V. Wienhoeber's staff—demonstrated the best in floral art before the convention of the Texas State Florists' Association at Dallas last week. This innovation on the program was judged a great success by the Lone Star florists.

Guy W. French passed another milestone July 8. He was born in 1877, at Des Moines.

Budlong Gardens thought so well of the new Philadelphia rose, Phantom, that a considerable part of the available stock has been acquired and now is blooming at the Howard street greenhouses. It is a copper yellow variety which promises to take the place of Mrs. Ward, now practically extinct in this market.

W. J. Keimel drove to Union Grove, Wis., July 9, for a visit to his old associate, Richard Salm. Mr. Keimel found Mr. Salm's roses looking well, though a considerable part are in the resting period just now.

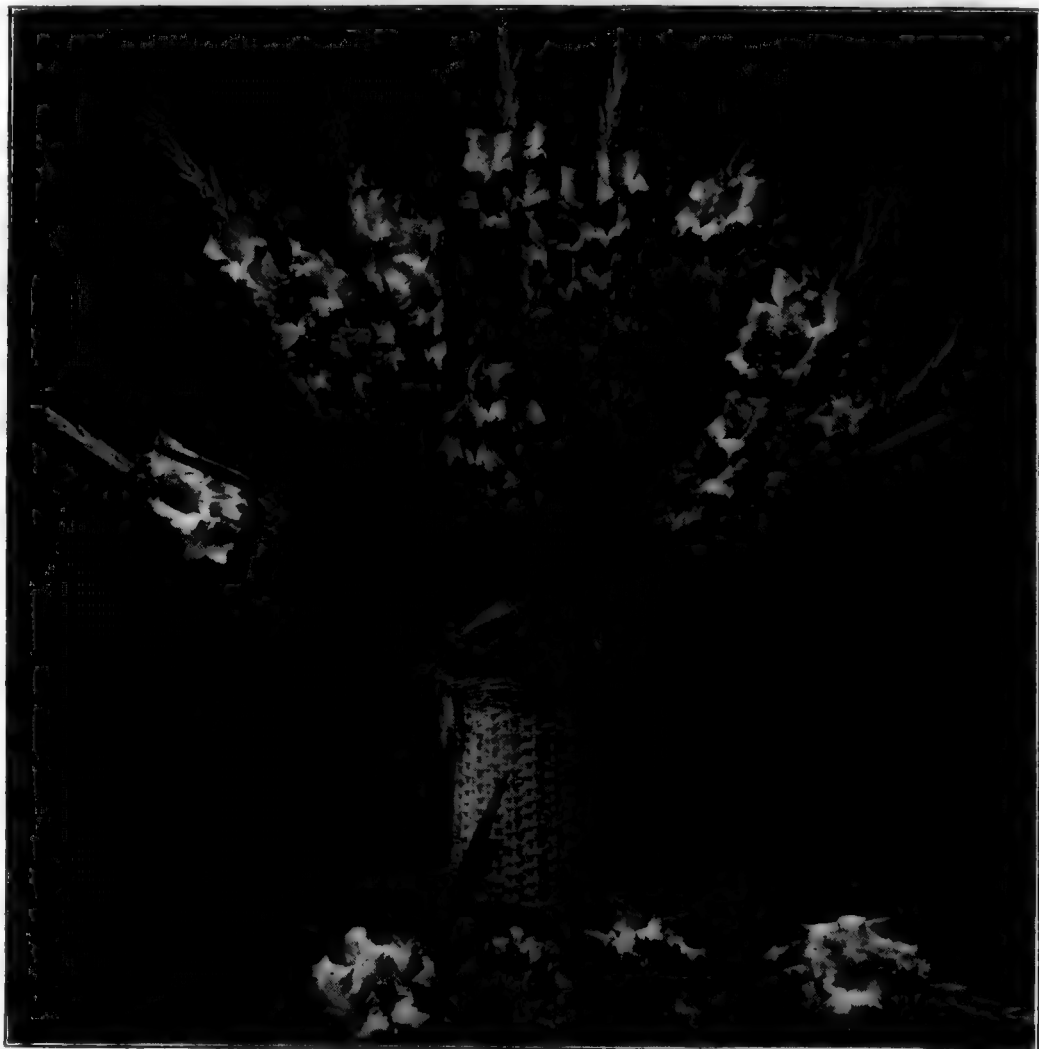

Carl Bachler, who does business as the McKinley Park Florist, 3597 Archer avenue, has gone to Europe for a three months' visit. Leon Glow, for some time in the cut flower department of the A. L. George Heidenreich, of the Bassett & Washburn staff, and Joseph Einweck, with the E. C. Amling Co., are camping on the Kankakee river for a fortnight.

Baum's Home of Flowers, Knoxville, Tenn., is consigning large quantities of gladioli to this market.

The meeting of the stockholders of the Richmond Greenhouse Co. was held July 11, at the store of the E. C. Amling Co.

Alpha Elberfield, of the Alpha Floral Co., Kansas City, plans to spend July 21 and 22 in this market, with headquarters at Hotel La Salle.

Growers in the Chicago territory had a splendid May for their carnation plants in the field, weather conditions being excellent, but for the past six weeks there has been practically no rain and growers were reluctant to start benching under such conditions. The rains July 9, 10 and 11 were of great value to them, as their work may now proceed.

Florists continue to make progress in the financial leadership of their communities and the city, as witness the announcement that J. L. Zender, the florist and landscape artist at 1612 Howard street, is one of the organizers and a director in the new Howard Street Trust & Savings bank, which is to open for business July 15. Mr. Zender is a nephew of Adam Zender, the pioneer Ridge avenue florist, and is related to many others in the trade in the north side district.

The Angel Guardian Orphan Society, which recently acquired ten acres of the Wietor property just west of the Home, has sold for $35,000 the vacant lots that lie in the triangle bounded by Ridge, West Ravenswood and Devon avenues, 57,708 square feet in area.

Herbert Holm, son of E. P. Holm, of Holm & Olson, St. Paul, was a visitor this week on his way home from the east, where he has spent a year and a half in learning the business in such well known retail stores as those of Penn, of Boston; Gude, of Washington, and Schling, of New York. Young Mr. Holm now will join the forces of his father.

John B. Cuomo, treasurer of the California Cut Flower Exchange, a new wholesale house in Detroit, was a visitor early this week, seeking sources of supply.

T. P. McElroy and Mrs. McElroy, of Grand Forks, N. D., were in Chicago for a few days last week on their way home from New York, where they had been to attend Max Schling's school of "floristry," an account of which occupied page 25 of last week's issue of The Review.

Lincoln, Ill.—C. E. Gullett is on a business trip in the southwest. He was in attendance at the meeting of the Texas State Florists' Association, at Dallas, last week.

Sioux City, Ia.—The company operating here under the name of the Glass-acres Garden Co. has been purchased by Rocklin, Lehman & Co., one of the leading florists in this city.

Camden, S. C.—William L. Goodale, manager of the Laurens Street Greenhouses, has incorporated the Camden Floral Co. to take over and conduct the Laurens Street Greenhouses business on a larger scale. Mr. Goodale is to be president of the new company, which is incorporated under South Carolina laws. The business is to undergo many improvements; the capacity of the establishment is to be immediately increased fifty per cent. The greenhouses have been entirely restocked. Special attention will be paid to the growing of roses, carnations and sweet peas. The plans of Mr. Goodale include both a retail and wholesale business.

The Market.

Conditions last week were about on a par with those of the previous one. Stock is plentiful, but business just a little slow, something unusual for this season at this market.

Gladioli seem to be the most plentiful flowers, and are arriving in large quantities from every direction. The varieties most in abundance are Halley, America, Schwaben and Chicago White. Roses are holding on better this year than ever before and the prices hold accordingly. It would appear to be still winter from the prices that are asked for roses, the shortest bringing $6 per hundred and the better grades up to $15, with not a great many long stems.

Carnations are clean but exceedingly small; at that, they find a fair market, now selling at $2 and $3 per hundred.

Outdoor flowers, including Shasta daisies, zinnias, delphiniums, cornflowers, sweet sultans, etc., move well.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell is gradually regaining his strength and was at his office twice last week, more than he has done for some time.

The first annual outing of the Allied Florists' Club was set for July 12, at Laughery island, down the river. Among the many events scheduled was a "flapper" race for the 1922 girl. Another interesting event was a baseball game between the growers and the store men. Ray Murphy, of the William Murphy Co., chairman of the committee for the outing, deserves a great deal of credit for rounding into shape an affair looked forward to for some time. Mr. Murphy worked diligently, practically alone.

H. W. Sheppard's shop is undergoing redecorations. Business has been quite brisk at this establishment, and prospects are good for the beginning of the summer months.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gear are enjoying their vacation in Michigan. Mrs. Gear, who is ill at times, goes away for her health every summer.

Julius Baer's window is a strong attraction these hot days because of the cool woodland scene occupying the space. It includes a babbling brook, a pond with pond lilies and everything that suggests coolness.

Visitors last week were: George Shaw, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago; A. N. Newstrom, of the Sefton Mfg. Co., Chicago, and J. A. Gray, of Hamilton, O. E. Bossmeyer, George Boerner and

Ed. Buschle, of C. E. Critchell's force, and Arthur Becker, of the Avondale Floral Co., motored to Richmond, Ind., and way points and report a most enjoyable time. G. H. K:

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The week of the glorious Fourth, once considered as our only holiday, has come and gone. Despite the fact that many people were out of town over the Fourth and that there was no business on that day, the week was a fair one. The supply was light and some stock was lost, chiefly owing to the extreme heat July 3, but the close of the week shows little left over that was salable.

Gladioli are the principal flowers. They offer better value than anything else, so that they are pushed whenever possible. There is an improvement in the gladiolus over previous seasons. Mixtures are disappearing and the newer varieties are being grown in quantity. The color rule in gladioli should be the same as in carnations. Deep or rose pink sells best, then light pink, then white. Few reds are wanted. Halley is not selling well now. The general quality of gladioli is excellent. The demand for them is strong, at moderate prices.

Roses are far less plentiful than they were a week ago. Russell appears to be going off crop, while the season of drying off and cutting back has disposed of much of the regular supply. Kaiserin is now a factor and a few of the early planted houses are beginning to yield.

Asters are increasing slowly; the wet weather mars their beauty. Candytuft and feverfew have not been selling well. Curiously, achillea, of which there is less, has been in demand. There are plenty of cattleyas, a few spray orchids and much valley. Easter lilies are also coming in freely. Prices are low. While carnations are generally regarded as out of season, there are a few nice ones to be seen. Blue hydrangeas are a novelty.

Baseball.

Albert Swan has reason to be proud of the florists' league. Thursday, July 6, the opening day of the season, saw eight teams start in the race for the Campbell cup. Three games were played at Belmont on that day and one at Lansdowne. This was the more noteworthy in view of the fact that one team, Michell, withdrew after the schedule was drawn up. The vacancy was filled by the Retail Florists. Great interest was shown in all the games. A large crowd of spectators, which included many of those best known to the profession, went out to the grounds to cheer their teams on to victory. Captain Jack Donnelly organized the Retail Florists team almost at a moment's notice and it won a creditable victory in the opening game with Dreer, at Belmont, by a score of 19 to 12. The feature of the game was Coyle's home run with the bases full.

Niessen defeated Bayersdorfer at Belmont by the close score of 9 to 7. The game was well played on both sides and marked by excellent team work. The new suits worn by both teams added to the picturesque effect.

The game, Bickmore vs. Craig, played at Lansdowne, was the most exciting game of the afternoon. By a previous arrangement the game was to consist of only seven innings. In its half of the seventh the Craig team made four runs, tying the score. Both sides were blocked in the eighth and ninth. Bickmore scored one in the tenth, winning 10 to 9.

The game between Pennock and the Independent Wholesalers, at Belmont, was the longest game of all. It will probably stand as a record of length in the league games. The Independents scored a commanding lead, which was greatly reduced by the Pennocks toward the close. The close of the ninth inning saw victory perch on the banner of the Independents; score, 22 to 16. Kenneth Meehan pluckily pitched throughout nine long innings for the winners. The batteries were: Kilgallen, Cox and Swan; Meehan, Miller and Bragg.

Following are the teams' standing:

The Turn in the Tide.

It was noted in these columns one year ago that a number of carnation growers, notably in Chester and Lancaster counties, were turning their attention to growing roses. There is every indication that this movement is not becoming general. A thoughtful observer gives this opinion: "Taking $1.50 per plant for the proceeds of rose growing as a basis of calculation, I believe the carnation growers who planted roses last season have not exceeded this figure, while growers who have continued carnations have done better than this. I think there will not be more changes at present." Better average prices for carnations, lower cost of labor and the fact that the most successful carnation growers are apt to stick may explain the absence of further departures from the ranks of the carnation growers.

The Market.

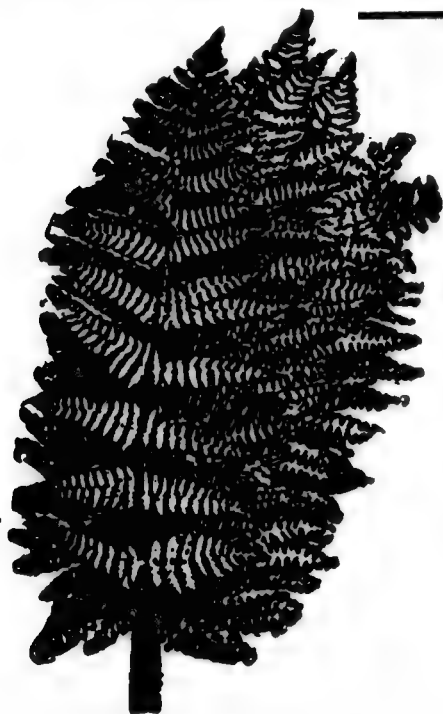

Humid, showery, uncomfortable weather is never conducive to activity in the cut flower business. No one looks for much flower buying in July, and the present year sees no change in the experience of former years. An occasional spasm of buying may awaken a few slumbering salesmen, who are dreaming of their coming tours to the mountains, lakes and seashore; of their flivvers, motor boats, farms, bungalows and prospective shoals of clams, fish, berries and other things good and bad for the inner man, but such spurts are short-lived and leave conditions more quiescent than ever.

Some fine roses are coming in and sell from $2 per hundred upwards, but lower values rule on some days. Carnations are not of much value, outside of Morning Glow, Ward and Benora. Top price for the best of these is $3 per hundred.

While there are a small number of really good outdoor sweet peas coming in, most of them are weather-marked and hardly salable. Asters are due and will relieve the monotony somewhat; they are reported to be a splendid crop this season.

Nice outdoor gladioli are now coming in, but the demand for these is not robust. Double gypsophila has a good call—much better than the more abundant single. The annual variety in the meantime has to take a seat in the rear.

Delphiniums are much overdone and are also deteriorating in quality, owing to the torrential rains.

There is more variety in lilies than for a long time. In addition to L. longiflorum, there are outdoor L. regale and indoor L. auratum and L. speciosum in small lots. A few callas still arrive. Valley is largely in the discard. Cat-tleas are now mainly C. gigas, but the call is at present limited.

A Fern Specialist.

Ferns seem to grow in popularity each year. Last fall it was freely predicted that Boston would be swamped with ferns, since so many growers had houses of them, but for a long time they have been scarce, and salable nephrolepis are about the hardest plants to secure today. The great tropical fern show in Boston last September seemed to stimulate the demand for ferns; this really means nephrolepis, for, aside from small table ferns, bird's-nest ferns and a comparatively limited number of the Mexican tree fern, Cibotium Schiedeii, about all ferns grown are nephrolepis.

For a considerable number of years Henry H. Barrows, of Whitman, Mass., has made nephrolepis a specialty and here originated N. Barrowsii and, somewhat later, the beautiful and still popular N. Whitmanii. Nothing but nephrolepis are grown at Whitman; one ridge and furrow house measures 100x100, and there are a number of other detached houses. The whole of the large house is devoted to plants in benches, while in the other houses are many thousands in pots, mainly from 2¼-inch to 4-inch sizes. So strong is the call for ferns this season that Mr. Barrows is constantly returning checks for orders he cannot fill.

The old Boston fern still remains the largest seller. The dwarf N. bostoniensis makes an excellent pot plant and is also quite popular. Next in favor comes N. Whitmanii. In addition to sales of plants, Mr. Barrows has a constant call for fronds from retailers, and so great is the call that he stated that if all his houses were planted with this one sort for cutting, it would be easily disposed of. Roosevelt closely follows the Boston and Whitmanii ferns in popularity, while following these are Teddy, Jr., Macawii, Verona and Norwood. The heavily crested varieties who married a couple of months ago, is spending his honeymoon in his native land, Switzerland, and is having a most enjoyable trip.

Final arrangements for the annual picnic of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, at Cunningham park, East Milton, were completed at a meeting of the executive committee July 9. It is hoped to complete baseball games for men, ladies and boys before the lunch hour, and it is hoped as many members as possible will be on hand at 10 a. m. to permit the games to be started early. All that is wanted to make the picnic a grand success is good weather, an article somewhat scarce hereabouts of late. However, there is a large gymnasium and ample shelter in case of showers.

Joseph Dowd, for some years with T. F. Galvin, Inc., has joined the forces of the new wholesale house, Welch's, Inc. Mr. Dowd is well known in wholesale quarters, and his geniality and experience should prove valuable assets in his new location.

Douglas Eccleston, who has just retired as superintendent for A. C. Burrage, of Beverly Farms, will start in business at Keene, N. H., as a specialist in New England hardy plants, and his first contract will be on the New Hampshire estate of Mr. Burrage, 700 acres in area, which will be planted exclusively with hardy herbaceous plants, bulbs, shrubs, trees and vines found here. This will be a big contract and will give Mr. Eccleston a good send-off. The Medfield Farms & Greenhouse Co.

has a splendid lot of asters just coming into flower. Business in May and June easily broke all previous years' records. A roadside stand moves a lot of plants, flowers and vegetables.

The Boston Sunday Herald in its rotogravure section July 9 had a full page of charming rose pictures taken in Roger Williams park, Providence, all of the plantings being done by the late superintendent, Frederick C. Green. These pictures were used to emphasize the need of such rose gardens in Boston and, thanks to the Arnold Arboretum and some special funds left by public-spirited citizens, it looks as if we might have such in the near future. Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, Alexander Forbes, Newark, N. J.;
secretary, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

SOME biographical notes regarding the new vice-president of the American Seed Trade Association appear, with his portrait, under the heading, "Who's Who in the Trade and Why," on a forward page.

THE annual convention of the Vegetable Growers of America will be held at Indianapolis August 22 to 25. The Claypool hotel will be headquarters. An exhibit of Indiana-grown vegetables will be a feature.

ALL available assets of the bankrupt Everette R. Peacock Co., Chicago, were purchased June 28 from the receiver by Everette R. Peacock and Peter Peerbolte. The sum paid is said to have been $30,000, and the chief item purchased, the stock and equipment of the store at 4011 Milwaukee avenue.

THERE is an old-fashioned custom still followed by a few seed houses, which send credit vouchers when they are unable to fill a cash order in full. The credit voucher is supposed to be used in ordering other stock from the same concern. Buyers no longer take kindly to the credit voucher. If they don't get their goods promptly, they want their money back.

EXPORTS of bulbs from Holland to the United States in 1920 were valued at $2,951,947, according to figures supplied by the United States Department of Commerce. Exports to this country in 1921 amounted to $3,115,227. In 1920 the exports of flower seeds to this country were valued at $219,626 and last year at $153,329, while the total value of vegetable seeds was $4,328 in 1920 and $171,710 in 1921.

THE problem of getting close to one's customers is solved effectively in the case of the Henry Field Seed Co., at Shenandoah, Ia., by a little monthly publication called "Field's Seed Sense." It consists of sixteen pages on print paper, good enough to carry illustrations, with which it is liberally decorated. It is printed in the private printshop of the seed company. Henry Field gives it his personal supervision and the stories he tells of his children, as well as the personal tone in which the suggestions contained in each issue are written, create a mutual interest between the seed company and its customers, an interest which has made the Henry Field Seed Co. one of the largest mail order houses in the west.

GRASSES FROM RUNNERS.

Many good turf grasses that reproduce by runners have lost the habit of producing seed, and for this reason the United States Department of Agriculture has been experimenting with the vegetative propagation of some of the most satisfactory strains of bent grasses. Better strains have been developed by finding spots in lawns and on golf courses where the turf was particularly good, cutting up the runners and planting these cuttings in increase plots. Most of this work has been done in northern states, although some good strains of Bermuda grass have been selected which give promise of value in the south.

have been working on these improved grasses and now have cuttings for sale. It is possible for a person to improve his own turf by selecting spots where the grass is particularly good and growing the cut runners in rows in a field. When the good strain has been increased sufficiently in this way, the old turf may be plowed up and the new strain established.

GARDEN SEED TESTING.

Problems of a Seed Analyst.

The atmosphere of commercial seed laboratories differs somewhat from that of the official laboratories in its more intense hurry and excitement. These laboratories are always rushed, always under suspicion. In any controversy their tests are mistrusted until they can prove them to be correct. The seedsman hesitates to complain on a given lot of seed unless he is fairly sure he can rely on his test, and the grower or wholesaler from whom the seed was bought is, of course, always convinced his seed is all right. So there must be close control on all factors, and on anything of importance the analyst must immediately get a check test from a government or commercial laboratory, and probably a soil test as well.

It is from this standpoint that the problems of the commercial seed laboratory will be considered, limiting the paper to the germination of vegetable seeds. It will attempt to show how we safeguard, and also point out the possibilities of further precautions.

Dormancy.

One of the important problems is that of dormancy. The dormant seeds fall into three groups: Those that germinate slowly and over a rather long period of time, those that will not germinate at all at certain times and those that lose power of rapid germination. The first of these dormant types is illustrated well by the umbelliferae. Carrots, celery, parsnips and parsley stay in the germinator an awkwardly long time and it would be a great help in a commercial house if their germination could be hurried. There probably is some stimulant for these, if we can get the problem worked out. Possibly a chemical could supply the stimulation.

The second type of dormancy is the period of after-ripening, which is illustrated particularly well by lettuce. The outstanding example is Grand Rapids lettuce, which generally refuses to germinate until almost time for the next year's sowing. Other varieties of lettuce also show this hesitancy to germinate in a more or less marked degree. Carrots seem to give a somewhat better germination the second year than the first, while some other seeds show a similar tendency. Dormancy, of course, is distinguished from lack of vitality by the appearance of the seeds.

The third form of dormancy is the result of age; namely, the retarding of germination, which occurs in the brassicas which have been carried several years. This seems to be a true retarding and not a loss of germination—

Paper prepared by Miss Leota Thurlimann, seed analyst of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, on "Problems of a Commercial Garden Seed Laboratory," and read by Leonard H. Vaughan at the joint meeting of the American Seed Trade Association and the Association of Official Seed Analysts, at Chicago, June 22.

SNAPDRAGON

Snapdragons have moved into first place with all wide-awake florists and are earning growers more money than any flower in cultivation. This is especially true among growers with a retail outlet. Splendid blooms may be had any month in the year, with a bumper crop over the three great flower days, Easter, Mothers' Day, and Memorial, extending throughout June graduations.

Snapdragons are easy to grow and good seed may be had at such small cost that there is no excuse for having inferior stock. Producing snapdragon seed is our one business and the ever increasing orders show how well we attend to it. Years of experience and our reputation are back of every packet of seed. See complete list below. First comes

A NEW ONE:—We are happy to announce a new addition to our snapdragon family and introduce "HELEN," a gorgeous, delicate salmon, named for a daughter who graciously assisted in bringing Helen is a stately variety, medium tall, early and very prolific. The KENILWORTH Giant Pansy Seed

- No. 12. KENILWORTH GIANT PRIZE. I have improved this strain by selecting and saving seed from the best shaped flowers of the most gorgeous color for many years. It is of the blocked Masterpiece type. The plants distinguish themselves by their robust growth and healthy-looking foliage; they are deep rooted and stand the hot, dry weather better than most other varieties. The large flowers on long, thick stems are carried well above the foliage in the most graceful manner, are of enormous size and of good substance. The petals are exceedingly broad and cover each other in such a manner as to make the flowers appear almost double. The border of each petal being conspicuously undulated and curled, the gorgeous and varied colored blossoms of velvety texture, perfect form and giant size, frequently measuring 3½ inches in diameter; the ground color such as yellow, white, deep orange, mahogany brown, bronze blue, and endless variations. Most petals are beautifully marked with a large blotch, a few are self-colored. They are especially fine for planting under glass or outside for cut flowers at all seasons. Trade pkt., 60c; ¼ oz., $1.35; ½ oz., $2.60; ¾ oz., $5.00; 1 oz., $10.00; 4 oz., $35.00.
10. KENILWORTH GIANT EXHIBITION is the very finest complete mixture ever sent out. Seed carefully saved only from marked plants of the best varieties, with the largest and best shaped flowers and richest coloring. It is impossible to convey an adequate idea of the delightful variations in color and markings of this unrivaled mixture. Trade pkt., 60c; ¼ oz., $1.35; ½ oz., $2.60; ¾ oz., $5.00; 1 oz., $10.00; 4 oz., $35.00.
19. TRIMARDEAU GIANT PANSY, improved; it is far superior to the ordinary run of Trimardeau that is sold. It is a very showy class of vigorous, compact growth. Flowers of enormous size in all the self colors, blocked, striped, margined, etc. It is very doubtful if any other pansy will give as good satisfaction as the improved Trimardeau for all general purposes. Trade pkt., 35c; ¼ oz., 75c; ½ oz., $1.35; ¾ oz., $2.60; 1 oz., $5.00; 4 oz., $18.00.
20. PRINCESS, the New Upright Pansy. This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy velvety texture, on heavy stems, carried well above the foliage. Attractive by the brilliancy of its colors. Trade pkt., 40c; ¼ oz., 90c; ½ oz., $1.65; ¾ oz., $3.10; 1 oz., $6.00.
22. GIANT KENILWORTH STRAIN. The flowers are of perfect form and substance; many of the immense flowers are 3-inch. It is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings, rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, medium or dark mixtures. Trade pkt., 40c; ¼ oz., 90c; ½ oz., $1.65; ¾ oz., $3.10; 1 oz., $6.00; 4 oz., $21.50.
24. GIANT KENILWORTH SHOW is undoubtedly the largest flowered Pansy in the world; the immense flowers are of circular form. A beautiful collection of colors and markings. Trade pkt., 45c; ¼ oz., $1.10; ½ oz., $2.00; ¾ oz., $3.80; 1 oz., $7.50; 4 oz., $27.00.
26. GIANT KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE. Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 6 or 7 inches long, in the most graceful manner, and stand the hot, dry weather well. Trade pkt., 45c; ¼ oz., $1.10; ½ oz., $2.00; ¾ oz., $3.80; 1 oz., $7.50; 4 oz., $27.00.

- No. 28. GIANT MASTERPIECE. A remarkable type, the curled wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance; large flowers of great substance, on long, strong stems. Trade pkt., 45c; ¼ oz., $1.10; ½ oz., $2.00; ¾ oz., $3.80; 1 oz., $7.50; 4 oz., $27.00.
30. GIANT THREE AND FIVE BLOTCHED PANSIES. A superb mixture. Flowers large and of circular form and of great substance. The display of coloring is unsurpassed. A combination of almost every shade of rich, velvety colors; reds are particularly conspicuous, the petals being distinctly marked with three or five large, dark blotches. Trade pkt., 40c; ¼ oz., 90c; ½ oz., $1.65; ¾ oz., $3.10; 1 oz., $6.00; 4 oz., $21.50.
32. GIANT PARISIAN. The flowers are of enormous size and beautifully marked, mostly five dark blotches on white and yellow ground; an unusually showy mixture. Trade pkt., 40c; ¼ oz., 90c; ½ oz., $1.65; ¾ oz., $3.10; 1 oz., $6.00; 4 oz., $21.50.
34. GIANT BRONZE. A fine mixture of all shades of velvety brown bronze, Havana brown, mahogany and copper shades. Trade pkt., 40c; ¼ oz., 90c; ½ oz., $1.65; ¾ oz., $3.10; 1 oz., $6.00; 4 oz., $21.50.
36. TRIUMPH OF GIANT. Remarkably beautiful. The imposing five-spotted flowers on long, vigorous stalks surmount the foliage in the most graceful manner, are of enormous size, perfectly round and of unusual substance. The individual petals are very broad and cover each other in such a manner as to make the flowers appear almost double, the border of every petal being conspicuously curled. The plants are of a robust growth and form compact bushes of a round shape. Trade pkt., 40c; ¼ oz., 90c; ½ oz., $1.65; ¾ oz., $3.10; 1 oz., $6.00; 4 oz., $21.50.
40. GIANT BATH'S EMPRESS. The finest of fancy English Pansies. Flowers are very large, mostly frilled and blotched and of great substance and the colors are brilliant and varied. Trade pkt., 45c; ¼ oz., $1.10; ½ oz., $2.00; ¾ oz., $3.80; 1 oz., $7.50.
70. ORCHID-FLOWERED, Mixed. A dwarf, free bloomer, with a range of delicate colors that do not exist in any other Pansies; a remarkable combination of light rose, shell pink, bluish mauve, fawn, light brown, orange and chamolais. Trade pkt., 35c; ¼ oz., 75c; ½ oz., $1.35; ¾ oz., $2.60; 1 oz., $5.00; 4 oz., $18.00.

New Early Flowering Giant Pansies

They are three to four weeks earlier than other Pansies, in coldframes or field; they have four or five large blossoms, when other Pansies planted at the same time are only showing bud. The richly colored, large, well formed flowers, on long, stiff stems, are very fragrant.

up to a certain point. The seeds will develop and give a normal sprout, if given time enough and a higher temperature. In this respect they differ from lettuce seeds, for instance. Lettuce, too, shows a transitional period before complete loss of vitality, but the sprouts that push out are abnormal and cannot be considered able to produce a plant.

These problems need experimental work, and in time may work out more satisfactorily. They might be partially solved by better harvesting methods, but probably the most could be done by correct storage.

Closely allied to the dormancy problem is that of localized dormancy—the dormancy of certain parts of the seed. This is probably not a true dormancy, but rather a complete inhibition of the normal development of one or more of the parts of the seed; for instance, the inhibition of growth in the radical or tap root often found in corn. Such a sprout, if left in the germinator, will often send out lateral roots, often strong-looking lateral roots, but will never send out the radical. Whether this inhibition has an internal or external cause has not been determined. The question then is, will these lateral roots have a strong enough development to make a good plant? The chances are it will make a plant of some kind and possibly a plant which might do well under favorable conditions, but one which would have little chance under adverse conditions. Many of these cases are probably pathological. Safeguarding, then, in a commercial laboratory, would be to count these sprouts sparingly, if at all; for we must aim to have seeds that will give a good stand, not only in the early stages of development, but also in the mature stages as well, and not die or dwarf when partially grown.

Variations in Sprouting.

At this point it might be well to mention the growing importance of the identification of plant diseases in the seed and seedling stages. There is a great deal a seed analyst can do in a commercial laboratory in addition to straight germination. It is something the analyst will have to prepare to meet in the near future.

This opens up the important question of bad sprouts. Here we have the cause of some of the variations in germination tests which one gets in checking up with different laboratories. Good seeds are not considered, of course, as they will not have a variation in sprouts. It only applies to seeds on the border line. When seeds begin to lose their vitality the intermediate stages of deterioration are present. The sprouts will not be normal; neither will they be altogether bad. The official analysts say at this point: "Do not use seeds on the border line," which is all right on carry-over stock. If the seeds are bad and a cleaning does not help their condition, those seeds cannot be sold. When such seeds have been received on an order or contract, however, we must guard against taking in stock that has begun to deteriorate, and it is in such cases where the variation in personal judgment becomes important. It is a question of germination versus viability.

The causes of abnormal sprouts are both internal and external. The internal cause would be a question of age; that is, the inability of some parts to function, which would cause inhibition of growth or abnormal growth of those parts, as seen in the case of corn. Or it may be an internal fungus, a diseased condition, which will cause an abnormal sprout. Unfortunately, most plant diseases do not show up in the sprout, with the result that the sprouts are passed as normal.

The external causes of abnormal sprouts are mold infections, and such mechanical causes as harvesting, storage and handling of the seeds. A striking illustration of mechanically produced abnormality was a case of scarifying. A certain lot of leguminous seeds had been scarified, and, from the way the seeds acted in germination, they had evidently been scarified to the point of injury. A certain percentage of the sprouts were abnormal. They showed a breaking off at the cotyledons, pletion, the test was found to be only seventy-two per cent, the firm buying the seeds was notified to that effect and told it was at liberty to return the seeds, if these proved not satisfactory. In the meantime this firm made a test and got a result of ninety per cent, and wrote back saying that the seeds were satisfactory. The test on these seeds was then checked up by several soil tests and the soil tests ranged between seventy per cent and seventy-five per cent, checking the blotter test. If the situation had been reversed, there would have been considerable controversy. The variation caused by abnormal sprouts is, of course, not usually so striking. It is a question of what degree of abnormality is harmful and therefore must be considered; here a good botanical background, a knowledge of plant structure, development and requirements, is essential. Anybody can do germination, but can he do it intelligently?

Results of Mold.

Mold, the other external factor in abnormality, is always present, of course, but becomes important only in seeds that are on the downward track. The mold problem has perhaps been a trifle overdrawn. With normal care and normal measures to prevent infection, there should not be much trouble with mold. Good seeds will germinate rapidly enough so that the mold will not have an opportunity to become injurious. Most of the seeds that are badly attacked by mold are those that are bad to begin with. There are cases, of course, where infection can ruin a test, but normal precautions should eliminate most of them. The contact of seeds during germination should be prevented, if it is at all possible. With this in view we have used the new method of germinating peas, and seeds of like nature, which roll from their relative positions in the blotters and spread mold by contact. Blotters are used instead of cloths. A double blotter is folded twice, so that there is a double thickness of blotter under the seed and a fourfold thickness on top. The inside blotter is then perforated or scratched to roughen its surface, making fifty perforations. The seeds are put into these perforations and in this way are kept in place, with the result that few of the seeds ever roll together. This arrangement prevents considerable mold infection, by eliminating contact of seed.

Considering the above problem, one would come to the conclusion that the variations one gets in tests are generally the result of variation in mold infection and variation in bad sprouts. Temperature and moisture are important factors, but only in cases of poorly equipped laboratories. The right kind of laboratory has at least a fair moisture and temperature control. There is one more factor, however, which the commercial analyst meets, which is entirely beyond laboratory control; namely, mixture of seed. This may consist of either a variation found in different parts of a field—certain parts of a field produce seeds of good germination and other parts seed of lower germination—or it may be a mixture made by the grower or dealer from whom the seeds are bought. A good lot of the seeds may have a bag or several bags showing a much lower germination—a case where old seed has been mixed with new seed. This necessitates bag tests on all lots of seeds bought. The Market.

Stock in the local wholesale market last week was of improved quality, thanks to the cool nights and a few light rains. Cut stock looked better last week. There is plenty of it for all demands. The only scarcity exists in stock of superior quality.

Enough roses are arriving to take care of the demand. Those having the daily call at reasonable prices are Premier, Columbia, Ophelia, Butterfly and White Killarney.

Carnations are small and the quality is nothing extra; low prices prevail. Gladioli are the flowers most sought now. Among the varieties most in demand are Schwaben, Pendleton, America, Francis King and Niagara. A few asters are arriving, but most of them are quite poor.

Valley, orchids and lilies are not in oversupply. Much outdoor stock arrives daily, such as delphiniums, Shasta daisies, cornflowers, candytuft, gaillardia and gypsophila, but the demand is not strong enough to clear the daily receipts.

Everything in greens is selling well. The arrival of ferns reduced prices on greens last week.

Bowling Teams Selected.

The "Say It with Flowers" bowling league held a meeting at H. G. Berning's wholesale house July 7 at 8 p. m., with more than half the membership present. President Bentzen called the meeting to order. The committee on alleys for the season reported on the various alleys throughout the city. It was decided to secure alleys on the south side, and the chair appointed A. Bourdet, A. Hoffmann, Sr., and J. J. Beneke a committee to arrange for and select the alleys. Then came the work of selecting the captains and members for the six teams. After the selection of the six captains by the members, the captains in turn selected from the membership teams as follows:

ORCHIDS.		SWEET PEAS.
F. M. Alves, capt.	T. Horn	H. Schlechter, capt.	G. Pieser
George Berner	F. C. Bruenig	F. Plotz	F. Strohmeier

J. J. Beneke	R. Bourdet	F. A. Wiedler	J. Krayer
J. J. Bentzen	H. Schneider	J. Braun	E. Niebling

The bowling season will open September 6 and will continue thirty weeks. Two teams will be made up later to represent St. Louis in the florists' bowling tournament at Kansas City during the S. A. F. convention.

Various Notes.

Members of the St. Louis Association of Gardeners enjoyed a pleasant morning July 2, when they held their meeting at the establishment of C. E. DeWever, of Olivette, Mo. The proceedings were interesting, the attendance was large, and the entertainment furnished by the host was indeed pleasing to all who were so fortunate as to attend. President Pring presided. The next meeting of the association will be held August 6, the place of meeting not yet having been decided upon.

The board of directors of the Holmes Motor Co. held a meeting last week; from among the present stockholders the board elected Henry G. Berning, our well known local wholesaler, president of the company.

Philip McKee, head of the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago, with Mrs. McKee and their daughter, spent a day here on their way home from a western trip. They were traveling in their pleasure car.

The officers of the Florists' Club were entertained by Treasurer W. C. Smith, at the King's Highway cafe, July 6. All the officers were present, and an interesting program was prepared for the Florists' Club meeting, to be held in St. Charles, Mo., on invitation of Edwin Denker.

John Kern, until recently with F. H. Weber, has branched out for himself and has opened a florists' department at Conrad's, 409 North Eighth street. The place has been named Conrad's Floral Department. Mr. Kern has the good wishes of his many friends in the trade.

George Berner, owner of the florists' department of the Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., along with Mrs. Berner and their two children, left July 6 for a six weeks' trip, to be spent at northern lake resorts. They left in Mr. Berner's new pleasure car.

Frank Plotz, manager of the Brix Floral Co., reports that the "boss," Adolph Brix, and Mrs. Brix are enjoying themselves in their old home in Germany, where they expect to remain through the summer. They will return late in the fall.

Grimm & Gorly have their usual summer window attraction—a pond with several varieties of fish, the old mill on the hill and the waterfall keeping the mill wheel in motion. Crowds stand for hours daily watching the fish and the workings of the mill.

A. W. Gumz, one of the youngest among the wholesalers, said that his first season in business was pleasing and that July and the balance of the summer season look good to him.

Edwin Denker, of St. Charles, Mo., got home in time from his eastern motor trip to entertain the members of the Florists' Club July 13. Mr. Denker reports a fine trip and says that he visited many in the trade, both going and coming.

The fine bedding on Government hill, worked out under the supervision of John Moritz, is one of the great attractive spots in Forest park. Not-

The Moral of Riding by Her Station

Last February I was riding on a little old jerk water train on a New Haven road branch.

The car was crowded and I was sharing my seat with a matron in a bonnet and wearing a mouth of true Plymouth Rock firmness.

In came the train man and called, "Bindles Corners! Anybody want to get off at Bindles?"

The Plymouth Rock mouth opened, then closed firmer than ever.

Then she turned to me in a semi-confidential way and said: "I wanted to get off at Bindles, but I just wasn't going to tell him my plans."

So the old dame rode straight past Bindles, on to the next station before it dawned on her that she was the one that was losing out, not the brakeman.

Ever since then, when I talk with a florist who is so mighty careful not to tell anything he knows, for fear he will give away the secrets of his business, I say to myself, this fellow is going right by his station.

He's losing sight of one of the biggest things in any business—CO-OPERATION and INTERCHANGE.

A lot of fellows go to the S. A. F. Conventions "just to see what's doing."

They are always on the get. Never give.

It's a mighty good thing for all of us to remember that the closed hand can never receive anything.

Only those who open up, get new openings.

Let's try it more on the F. T. D. and see what happens.

withstanding the long dry spell and hot weather, this is a sight worth seeing.

P. Patton has started in training for the job of umpiring the baseball game between the wholesalers and retailers at the florists' picnic.

Everything is in readiness for the florists' picnic, to be held at Normandy grove July 27. The trustees of the Florists' Club have all the arrangements in hand and they say that many valuable prizes have been donated by members in the trade. It is not too late for more; the program goes to press July 20.

Louis Baumann is arranging for a party of those who will attend the S. A. F. meeting at Kansas City, Mo., for a side trip at the close of the convention to Minneapolis, Minn., to attend the annual meeting of the American Association of Park Superintendents the week following. A considerable number have promised to make up the party.

Frank A. Hoerr, head of the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co. and the St. Louis Rose Co., who has been away for the last ten days, returned July 8 from a most enjoyable eastern trip, which included New York, Philadelphia and Atlantic City.

July 4 was a real florists' holiday; no extra business was done for that day, as on other holidays. Most of the retailers closed for a half day and all the wholesale houses closed at noon.

There will be a large party of growers leaving here Sunday morning, July 16, to attend the midsummer meeting of the St. Louis district of the National Flower Growers' Association, at Rock Island, Ill. The railroad fare one way from St. Louis is $9.36. This delegation will leave via the Chicago & Alton at 8:45 a. m., passing through Alton, Ill., and Springfield, Ill., and arriving at Peoria at 1:45 p. m. The party will leave Peoria on the C., R. I. & P. at 4:25 p. m. James Cole promises to make the few hours' stay at Peoria pleasant. Growers at Alton, Springfield and Peoria will join the party, which will arrive at Rock Island at 7:55 p. m.

Workmen put in a busy week preparing for the opening of the new wholesale cut flower market of the George E. Pieser Wholesale Floral Co. July 15 is set for the opening. J. J. B.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

Dorothy Perkins, Dorothy dear!
June has been calling and you are here.
Flower of girlhood, pink and sweet,
All a-tiptoe the sun to greet!
Dorothy Perkins! We see you now,
With your waving hair and candid brow,
Bringing us happiness year by year.
Blushing Dorothy, Dorothy dear!

Thus exclaimed W. W. Hannell, Watervliet, N. Y., in response to a toast to the climbing rose in which his firm specializes. "As a suitable companion to this rose, let me suggest Paul's Scarlet Climber," added Fred A. Danker, of Albany, N. Y. The occasion was the annual gathering of the Albany Florists' Club at the Fred Goldring homestead, Slingerlands, N. Y., charmingly located a few miles from the capital city. Some thirty of the craft made the pilgrimage and, after the usual routine of club matters, they were escorted by the host through the establishment, where stock was found in fine shape, especially when the long dull period of growing weather so essential at this season is considered. The social spirit prevailed and the hour of midnight arrived all too quickly. When the parting guests were speeding homeward, they determined to allow no ordinary happening to interfere with the visit next month to the establishment of James Snyder, the violet king, at Rhinebeck, N. Y.

"Imagine my surprise," commented Benjamin Hammond, of Beacon, N. Y., referring to the presentation at a recent meeting of the school board, of which our veteran confrere is president, when a beautiful silver cup, suitably engraved, was handed him by one of the loveliest pupils, accompanied by

The Market.

Flowers last week were more plentiful than they have been for a long time and some good roses came in at prices which were considered by the retailers to be more reasonable. They ran from a low price of $4 per hundred for the short-stemmed and rather inferior stock to $25 per hundred for the finest Russell. Other good roses include Columbia and Premier. Few white Kaiserin are to be had. The latter are fair in quality. Some extra-fine Mock roses were also offered. The demand for roses was not heavy, because the retailers were buying from hand to mouth. They do not order any more than they can reasonably dispose of, because of the loss that is entailed during the hot weather.

There has been no improvement in the Easter lily situation. These flowers are still scarce and are bringing $20 per hundred. Carnations are small, but sell at $2 per hundred and there is a considerable demand for white carnations for funeral work. Gladioli are increasing in quantity and are good as to quality. The stock is offered at an average of $8 per hundred. Some few special varieties, such as Panama, Peace and a few others, sell well at $10 per hundred.

Lily of the valley is not good just now and the demand for it has slackened. A quantity of stephanotis was offered at $4 per hundred. This represents something of a reduction in price. There is a large quantity of outdoor stock being offered, but its sale is slow.

They left Washington in their new Hudson automobile for Philadelphia, where they viewed the boat races, in which Granville Gude participated as a member of the Potomac Boat Club.

Arrangements are being made for the annual outing of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., to be held at Great Falls, Va., July 27. At a meeting of the membership of the club, called by President Oehmler July 7, George C. Shaffer was made chairman of the outing committee. the visitors. What the committee is planning will be announced in a week or two. All committee chairmen are working on the drive for S. A. F. members, instead of having one committee for this purpose. W. M. McKeown, of A. L. Randall Co., is making a canvass for members in Chicago.

John Klaus, Greenwood, Mo., is chairman of the sports committee for the convention. All outside florists who intend to take part in any of the sports should get in touch immediately with Mr. Klaus. All contests in the sports line will be under the direction of Mr. Klaus.

One important feature of the convention will be a golf tournament, which is being arranged by William L. Rock. Mr. Rock is the golf enthusiast of the Florists' Club and he would not consider the S. A. F. meeting a complete success without this feature being sandwiched in somewhere. In order not to interfere with any business session of the meeting, the tournament will be held early one morning of the convention dates. Players will be taken to the Meadow Lake Country Club in motor cars. After the contest, breakfast will be served at the club and the guests will be driven back to the city in time for the meeting. Mr. Rock is eager to hear from all other golf enthusiasts who desire to take part in the tournament.

was considerable discussion of the purpose of making the members of the

The Market.

Weather conditions last week were ideal for the outdoor stock and there was a considerable quantity of larkspur, feverfew, snapdragons, candytuft, gypsophila, daisies and other stock coming in, all in good shape, and most of it found a ready market.

Carnations are still holding out quite well for this season of the year. Roses also are in sufficient supply to meet the demand, and the heavy call is principally for Columbia and Premier at this time. Easter lilies are also selling well, and gladioli are beginning to come in.

The early ones are finding a ready sale.
There is an abundance of green goods in all varieties on the market.

Various Notes.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. is now planting three large new rose houses, which have just been completed, with Premier roses. This firm expects also to put up additional plant houses before the fall.

Most of the trade are now taking their vacations and many of the florists are more or less enthusiastic fishermen.

Gus. Rusch spent most of his vacation at his summer home on Little Cedar lake.

H. Staeps Co. is busy erecting additional greenhouses, which will be planted to carnations, sweet peas and roses.

C. C. Pollworth and wife have returned from a trip to one of the northern lakes. Mr. Pollworth reports fishing and mosquito biting good.

F. H. Holton and H. V. Hunkel are also spending their vacations in motoring to the various lakes.

was employed by the C. C. Pollworth

The Market.

The demand for flowers was rather small last week. The sale on roses and gladioli constituted most of the business. With ideal weather, outside flowers have been too plentiful to bring the buyers to the stores, especially since the commencement exercises are over and there are few social functions going on.

While weddings have been rather numerous, yet there have been no really large ones. Funeral work and hospital bouquets have been the long end of the business. In roses the local market finds some Premier and Russell. Some growers are commencing to cut their young stock. Gladioli are selling well, and the quality is good. The best gladioli are demanding $8 to $10 per hundred. With the coming week, there will appear several new growers of gladioli, and, unless business is extra good, there is going to be a slump.

Carnations are about done, although there are a few to be had at $4 per hundred. Easter lilies are obtainable at a few of the stores, although they are nothing extra and do not move fast. Unlimited numbers of rubrum lilies are coming in. Lily of the valley is in large enough supply to meet the demand, at $6 per hundred. Unlimited numbers of strawflowers, feverfew, delphiniums, statice, gaillardias, coreopsis, cornflowers and snapdragons are on the market every day, at almost one's own price.

Various Notes.

By agreement of all the local flower shops, they are to keep closed all day Sunday during July and August. This will hold good in all cases, unless otherwise agreed upon by all the stores.

The Market.

We are in the midst of a summer condition which is similar to that of last season. The quality of stock is better than the usual summer flowers offered at this date. This is probably due to some cool weather and extraordinary care exercised by some growers. It is found that the summer production is a paying investment, if proper care is exercised.

Roses cover all requirements. While some mildew is in evidence, this is on stock that is being dried off and the new plantings will provide stock of A-1 quality. The market is being supplied with a fine quality of carnations, which are still greenhouse-grown stock, but coming from growers who have their glass off. This seems to be a paying investment. American Beauty, still considered by some as the rose, is meeting with good demand. Prices are good for the quality offered. Easter lilies are plentiful enough and of good quality. Indoor gladioli are over, but the outdoor varieties are arriving in quantity shipments and reaching this market in good condition. The demand is fair. Quantities of outdoor flowers are on the market, but meet with only ordinary demand. The supply houses report summer activity that is worthy of comment, due to many of the florists using this opportunity to work up many of their articles that will save them time when the holiday season arrives.

Various Notes.

Flower Show.

The Denver annual flower show will be held, as usual, in the municipal auditorium, during the week of November 12 to 18. Nine silver cups and some special prizes will be awarded.

This big show is supported by florists and public-spirited people, under the auspices of the Society of Ornamental Horticulture and the Denver Garden Club.

There will be no charge to exhibitors nor any admission fee; this is made possible by the city of Denver giving free use of the big auditorium.

Over $10,000 worth of stock was displayed in last year's show. There will be still more this season, since many exhibitors from out of the state are planning to show new varieties of mums, roses and carnations.

This show does much for public education in flowers, which means indirect profit to growers, believes C. R. Root, who is chairman of the publicity com-

in charge of C. W. Espy & Son, of Brookville, Pa. About 100 persons were present, representing the Kane Greenhouse Co., Kane, Pa.; V. E. Carr, Punxsutawney, Pa.; William Graham, Bradford, Pa.; W. G. Jones, Duboise, Pa.; Crissman Greenhouse Co., Punxsutawney, Pa., and the Tarentum Floral Co., Tarentum, Pa.

A cafeteria dinner was served from a table decorated with Maine Sunshine carnations from the Espy greenhouses, at Brookville. Games and swimming were enjoyed by many. Due to the picnicking location being near that portion of Cook's tract famous for its virgin pines—the only virgin timber in the state—everyone hiked up the hill to see the natural beauty of the tall timbers. To finish the day's outing, William Graham, of Bradford, landed a turtle which weighed about fifty pounds.

MEMPHIS, TENN.

Business is now at a standstill, as there is little or no demand for cut flowers and plants. The reason, of course, is that there are too many outdoor flowers at the present time.

The Idlewild Greenhouses report a fair trade.

Nell's Flower Shop has had a good business.

The Cartwright Floral Co. is cutting some fancy gladioli and shipping them north and east.

The Memphis Plant Co. has planted out over 8,000 dahlias of 400 varieties. The firm is trying to get a selection for this section of the country.

The municipal greenhouses have completed the planting of the beds and sunken gardens around the entire speedway. This planting required over 1,000,000 plants, but in spite of this, the greenhouses still have a large supply of plants left on hand.

TORONTO, ONT.

Business is at the usual slow summer pace and florists are departing to the leafy woods or to the anglers' lakes and rivers. George Geraghty is opening his cottage for a month. S. A. McFadden's family is at Otter lake and he will follow shortly. J. A. Neal is turning his eyes towards Stony lake, while several florists, including Mrs. Barber and J. Carter, are established at Ward's island for the summer. Mrs. Warren is enjoying Lake Simcoe, while J. J. Higgins is enjoying Lake Ontario breezes at Long Branch.

George Yavner is at Boston.

There will be a good representation from Toronto at the Montreal convention of the Canadian Florists' and Gardeners' Association. Among the florists who are planning to attend are: S. A. McFadden, George Hatcher, J. A. Neal, George Yavner, William Shilliter and others. It is possible that a party will travel by boat from Toronto through the Thousand islands and will "shoot" the Lachine rapids. The dates are August 8 to 11.

Gardeners' and Florists' Club will be held at Eversley, August 15. Special cars will leave on the Metropolitan at 10 a. m.

The annual picnic of the Retail Florists' Club was a big success, with an attendance of nearly 300. The growers started by defeating the retailers at baseball by a score of 21 to 15. Then followed well contested games, including many novelty races with balloons, kites, soap, etc. S. A. Frost, dressed as a constable, directed the sports with an able bodyguard of judges. Supper was served within the building and on the lawns of the Transportation building.

WORCESTER, MASS.

After about twenty-one days of rain, the growers feel more encouraged, now that they have had a few days of sunshine. Even the shading on the greenhouses which was not washed off by the rains was scrubbed off to let the light in.

Trade continues good. The growers have not a great deal to offer in the way of surplus flowers. We are between the seasons and nothing goes to waste. Candytuft outdoors never looked better. The first crop of gypsophila has passed. Sweet peas are scarce.

The Randall Flower Shop has been so busy during the rainy spell that the CINCINNATI GROWERS MEET.

The meeting of the Cincinnati district of the National Flower Growers' Association, held July 5 at Nicholas Weron's place, was an interesting one and considerable enthusiasm was shown. Three new members were added to the list: Edward Schumann, Newport, Ky.; A. J. Horning, Cincinnati, O., and Frank L. Deller, Cincinnati, O. The matter of advertising was discussed and it seemed to be the general opinion that the most feasible means of collecting for the advertising fund would be to assess each grower one-half of one per cent of his gross receipts. We hope eventually to be able to convince each grower of the value of advertising and have each do his part. Out of a total of twenty-three members there were only three absent and we feel that these were busily engaged.

Committees were appointed to find the cost of production on various pot plants and cut flowers. The committee is expected to render a thorough report in the near future. While it was thought by some that it would be advisable to discontinue our meetings for the month of August, it was decided that in view of the enthusiastic crowd present at this meeting, we should not discontinue our August meetings, but, if anything, have two meetings a month.

Preceding the meeting we made a tour of Mr. Weron's place and those who have never seen the place would have considered their time well spent, had they taken off a half day to attend this meeting. The fact that there is little level ground in that neighborhood did not hinder the firm from building

CLEVELAND, O.

The Market.

Business has settled down to the slow humdrum of summer vacations, with just an occasional spurt now and then to liven things up. Roses here are off crop, there being only a few Sunburst, Ward, White Killarney, Columbia, Premier and Ophelia. Carnations are still arriving, but the quality becomes poorer daily. Delphiniums are arriving and are moving nicely. Sweet peas are coming in from all sources, with the result that the market is flooded and prices are low.

Exceptionally fine Halley gladioli are arriving now in considerable quantity and to date have moved nicely. Outdoor garden stock of all kinds is coming in regularly, with now and then a newcomer making its appearance. Some good centaureas have put in an appearance and have cleaned up well. Gypsophila is still on the market, but has been moving only in spurts.

Various Notes.

E. J. King, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, was a visitor last week.

J. Fratus, of the retail store of the J. M. Gasser Co., is away on a vacation.

William J. Kramer, well known grower of Rocky River, O., has been cutting asters since June 15, and his average now is 5,000 cut blooms per day. He has several special varieties

EXTERMINATING GRUBS.

We are troubled with grubworms in our soil. Is there any spray or watering solution by which we can kill them? They eat the roots off the stems of the plants. Our carnation and chrysanthemum plants are bothered especially.

R. W. U.—Mich.

By sterilizing the soil with steam before plants are placed in it you can destroy all grubs. They can also be suffocated by the use of carbon bisulphide. Punch holes in the soil with a stick, ten or fifteen inches apart each way, pour a little carbon bisulphide in the hole and immediately close the opening. Carbon bisulphide generates a gas which destroys pests in the soil. Keep naked lights away when applying carbon bisulphide, as it is explosive.

Remedies suggested for the destruction of grubworms seem not practical after the plants are in full growth. The safety of the plants prevents their use. A close watch and digging around the base of any plant that has shown signs of wilting will enable you to locate the grubs before irreparable damage is done. Few benches are so badly infested that this method will fail to get them before serious damage is done.

"JIGGERS" ARE FLEAS.

I should like to know if you can give me any information as to how I can get rid of an insect which is in the workroom next to my greenhouse. It is some kind of jumping insect. Its color is black or brown, and it has long hind legs. It likes to get on one's pants leg and it is hard to get off. Some have told me that it is a flea, others that it is a "jigger" or "chigger." I have tried air-slaked lime and an insect powder, but neither did any good. The insects hunt for the coolest place and, therefore, take to the workroom, since there is no spot comfortable for them in the greenhouse. If they get on a person's body they will suck blood.

A. J. L.—Mo.

Those who told you that the insect which is bothering you is a flea were correct. The surest way to get rid of this insect is by fumigating with hydrocyanic acid gas. The method of using this gas has been described in The Review. Much care should be used because of the extremely poisonous nature of the gas. A full breath will render a man unconscious and might prove fatal.

In structures which cannot be made tight, so that gas may be employed, fleas may be killed by spreading a layer of flaked naphthalene over the floor, care being taken that the entire surface is covered. This should be allowed to remain for at least a week. Crude naphthalene is just as effective as the refined and is cheaper. It is well to wash floors thoroughly with strong soap suds immediately after such treatment.

Sheds which have earth floors may be rid of the pest by covering the ground

ASHES AS FERTILIZER.

Is it advisable to mix wood ashes in my carnation soil? I am sending you a box of wood ashes to analyze. Kindly determine what per cent of potash is present. S. F. & S.—O.

The wood ashes received contain largely potash and lime, and because of the presence of the latter, the ashes have a favorable physical effect upon the soil. Wood ashes are not a complete fertilizer and, unless the soil is in need of potash, little is gained by using the ashes. The phosphoric acid they contain is inadequate. You should, therefore, supplement the ashes with either acid phosphate or steamed bone and, of course, nitrogen-containing fertilizers, such as stable manure or blood.
It would be advisable to use about five pounds of the ashes for each 100 square feet of bench surface.

Schuylerville, N. Y.—C. A. Hall is erecting a large greenhouse at Fort Edward. It will be opened in October.

West Plains, Mo.—C. W. Harold, of the Ozark Pansy Gardens, has purchased a tract of land about three blocks from the business center and only half a block from the main street of the town. He is building a new 6-room bungalow and is tearing down all that is left of the old greenhouses, which were badly damaged by fire March 1. He will build a thoroughly modern range at the new location.

LINDLEY FLORIST BOX CO., Marion, Indiana

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The stock situation, on the whole, remains unchanged, with business generally quiet. Except for a few good weddings and the usual run of funeral work, little business has been noticed. There has been a great increase in the supply of outdoor stock, which is quite plentiful. This includes good single and double hardy gypsophila, delphiniums, pink and red ramblers, coreopsis, Shasta daisies, gaillardia, Japanese iris, sweet williams and some early candytuft.

Carnations, which are becoming small, are in fair supply, and the demand is not brisk. Roses are in good supply, with a shortage in white. These, considering the cool weather of the last two weeks, are reaching us in good condition. Summer prices prevail on all stock. Well flowered gladioli reach us in seedlings, America and Schwaben, and there is a good demand for them. There is a large quantity of candidum lilies this season.

An added novelty appeared last week in well formed stems of old English lavender, and sold quite readily.

Potted stock does not move well, and there is no particular demand for either ferns or palms.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Bourne and daughter, Florence, of Syracuse, N. Y., made an automobile trip to this city Sunday, July 9, and visited the various points of interest here. They then proceeded to Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Theodore T. Fryer, of the Taiyo Importing Co., New York, called on trade here the latter part of last week.

Several of the men of the staffs of George B. Hart and George T. Boucher are meeting each Sunday for baseball games.

David McGregor and a party of friends have gone on a week's fishing trip to the Thousand islands. Miss

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Considering that the glorious Fourth has come and gone and that vacations and summer dullness are in order, business has been and is fairly good. There is, of course, no great rush in the market, and funeral work is the mainstay. Gladioli and dahlias are the biggest sellers. Asters are poor, while small flowers generally are away below the average. Roses are more or less infested with thrips. The outdoor flowers are little better than those grown inside, while carnations are still poor. Anything choice is picked up quickly, but there is a good deal of trashy stock not worth bringing in. Greens are still scarcer.

Various Notes.

Ernest Flohr visited the city and renewed old friendships last week. Mr. Flohr is well known in Denver, Colo., as the proprietor of the Columbine Floral Co. He was being piloted around by his old friend, E. J. Reynolds, manager of the retail department of George J. Hall & Co.

S. Murata & Co. report business far better than usual in July. Some extra fine gladioli are being handled here.

Howard Gates, of Anaheim, Cal., tells of an enjoyable trip to old Mexico, and says that business is good with him.

Albert Knight, of Whittier, Cal., has bought out the business of Mrs. Bodenhauser at that city and added it to his own. He is thinking of starting out for the Yosemite shortly.

Polder Bros. are showing splendid spikes of Delphinium Belladonna and Buddleia magnifica at the American Florists' Exchange.

Harold Amling, of the E. C. Amling Co., is passing the cigars, the occasion being the arrival at his home of a 10½-pound girl, July 3.

Albert Goldenson says that business at his new stand on Sixth street is away beyond his expectations.

G. A. Lindquist, of Logan, Utah, has been taking in the sights here, after a pleasant motor trip down the coast from Portland and Seattle. Mr. Lindquist was in good hands when seen, he and his family being with F. Royston, of W. Armacost & Co., and Mr. Williamson.

T. Shewbrook, of Wright's Flower Shop, and Mrs. Shewbrook, head bookkeeper for S. Murata & Co., are going north for their vacation. They will drive both ways. H. R. R.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

The market last week was glutted with stock and the fact that many people took the holiday from July 1 to 4 caused the demand for flowers to be lighter than usual. Fine gladioli were abundant and there were quantities of other summer stock. Baby roses were plentiful and there were large supplies of other roses, though the fancy roses were somewhat short, as many of the growers had begun to transplant their stock. A shortage of carnations can also be looked for in the near future, as the plants are generally being transplanted. The first pompon dahlias were in the market July 1. The first asters are expected about the middle of the month. Strawflowers are now in their prime and many of the growers and jobbers are drying them for future use. Some 36-inch poppies were seen.

Various Notes.

Crow's Flower Shop was opened in the new Radtke building, Martin street, Gilroy, Cal., July 1. This shop is catering to all branches of the florists' business by carrying stocks of cut and potted flowers, baskets, jardinières, etc., in addition to seeds and bulbs. As Gilroy is the center of a rich farming district in the Santa Clara valley, Crow's Flower Shop is also carrying seeds for the vegetable garden and the field.

The entire staff of Darbee's enjoyed a picnic July 4. Mrs. A. J. Gooch was the organizer. The employees drove to the new resort, Pacific City, and then motored to Burlingame, to inspect the new home which General and Mrs. Gooch are building. Everyone agreed that the contractor is carrying out Mrs. Gooch's one request: "Make it snappy."

Ten members of the staff of Brown & Kennedy went in a body to the recent florists' picnic. W. D. Kennedy stated that in spite of the many people being out of town July 4, they have been busy.

J. A. Axell has been fortunate in having the rose stock of Ferrari Bros. to draw upon. "Good roses have not been scarce with me," he said, "partly because most of the roses I am handling are grown near enough to San Francisco to enjoy the cool fogs, which prevent them from being burned. The Russells are especially good. It is astonishing what a difference a few miles make in San Francisco and the vicinity."

During the numerous national conventions that have been held in San Francisco, the Charles C. Navlet Co. has met with much success by displaying boxes of California strawflowers ready to ship east. The several varieties of these immortelles are attractively combined in the boxes and L. Picetti, the manager, states that there has been a ready sale for them.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is transplanting its roses. G. W. McLellan said: "We are keeping enough stock in bloom to take care of our shipping trade, so that we do not have to buy much in the way of roses." This firm is drying many strawflowers, which it is handling for shipment.

Angelo Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., is enjoying a two weeks' vacation, motoring with his family. Frank D. Pelicano expects to be in the thick of the dahlia season in a few weeks. This firm is using many Iceland poppies for baskets, decorative work, etc., with striking results. Pelicano, Rossi & Co. have had a good many funerals recently.

Podesta & Baldoecchi have been puzzling an admiring public by showing a window of a little known variety of water lily that grows wild in certain swampy places in this section of California. The flower is orange, shaded to red, and the center is orange on a background of red. Members of the staff are taking their vacations in rotation.

Joseph's is helping to initiate the public into adding flowers to prizes for card parties, games, etc. This is done by showing baskets and boxes containing little individual glass jars of different kinds of jam, preserved fruit, candy, etc. Outside each is a spray of tiny oranges, cherries, etc., made of candy and covered with transparent glazed paper, the oranges being for

L. Capurro, of Avansino Bros. & Co., said of June weddings: "There were so many that I am surprised to find any unmarried girls left in July."

Y. Takahashi, strawflower nurseryman, of Montara, Cal., has signed a contract with the United Flower & Supply Co. to let the latter firm handle his output. The store of the latter firm on Bush street is featuring helichrysum, statice and other products of the Montara nurseries. This firm has been cutting a few dozen early chrysanthemums daily, chiefly October Frost. According to J. Okumura, it will be a long time before the mums are good for anything but the local trade, as it is far too early in the season.

W. S. Harmon, of the H. M. Sanborn Co., left July 1 for a month in the Santa Cruz mountains.

G. Rossi, of G. Rossi & Co., has also gone on a vacation.

F. S. Clarke says that at no time in Oakland during the last fifteen years have flowers been so plentiful as they are now. Mr. Clarke adds that the prices are so reasonable that florists are tempted to overbuy. Funeral work seems to be the most important thing here, as local June weddings were not up to those of former years. Mr. Clarke supplied two $25 pieces for two Chinese funerals last week. He also attended the Pacific coast florists' picnic at Fairfax, where he enjoyed meeting a great many other old-timers in the trade.

George E. Hogan, of Hogan & Evers, says that, while the number of weddings during June was up to normal, most of them were quiet and inexpensive and there have been no big weddings such as have taken place in former years. Another reason for the lack of trade at present, according to Mr. Hogan, is the quantity of flowers in the private gardens this year. The season has been abnormally late and unusually good, with the result that gardens are in full bloom at the present time.

The business of the Oakland Flower Shop has not been affected by local conditions, as this firm carries on a shipping business to the interior towns. Garden flowers have long since vanished in those cities and there is a good demand for flowers. The demand for wedding flowers, white roses, valley, etc., was the greatest ever experienced by the Oakland Flower Shop for June. All of this trade, however, came from outside of Oakland. Cliff Wagenet, one of the proprietors, will spend a three weeks' vacation fishing in the high Sierras beyond Yosemite valley. He will return the latter part of July.

W. I. Macdonald is another florist who was struck by the vacation fever, returning to town the last of June.

The demand for garden seeds has lasted much longer this year than is usually the case, owing to the lateness of the spring. Most Oakland florists carry good stocks of seed. The principal demand at present is for grass seeds, this being the best season of the year to plant lawns.

vegetable seed dealer is loss of vitality in the carry-over of expensive seeds—a necessary carry-over to protect against possible crop failures and the like.

The seedsman's problem is, how can this stock be carried safely and the germination controlled? In the first place, care must be taken to buy the best possible stock, checking the germination of each bag of seeds, and then, with fair storage conditions, stock on the whole will carry fairly well. But the germination problem is always present. To be accurate and to take no chances, the whole vegetable stock should be tested twice a year; the first time in the fall and again four months later, just before the selling season. The fall tests are an absolute necessity to intelligent buying. If certain carry-over stock gives out unexpectedly, the dealer must know in time to buy the amount over and above what he may have contracted for, and which should have been enough to cover. This makes it necessary to do the testing rather early in the fall, which means that several months may elapse between the time of some of the testing and the actual selling of that stock. These months are the most favorable to seed storage, of course; nevertheless, seeds may lose more or less in germination during that time, and occasionally freakish and sudden drops are noted in the germination. This seems impossible to control. Onions are most likely to drop suddenly. Storage of onion seeds is important and the retention of vitality depends directly on storage conditions and the climate. In the south onion seeds can be carried only six months, and kept in tin containers at that. In the Chicago region they will normally carry three years, while in California and other western states they will safely carry four years. All these facts must be known and guarded against in a successful business.

The ideal way, then, would be to test the seeds twice a year, but can a seed house afford to test twice a year? On the present basis it cannot. The trained help, the laboratory overhead, the records necessary to handle the volume of tests, and a large stock make testing twice a year prohibitive. The minute records kept of all stocks are considerable labor items in themselves, without considering the actual retesting.

Taking these things into consideration, a reasonable leeway should be given in checking up on stocks sold several months after the tests have been made. The sane and honest vegetable seed dealer takes all possible precautions to insure a high germination on his stock. There is a middle road that he must aim to follow. He cannot be purely idealistic and not consider the financial end at all; neither can he be only a money-maker. He must sacrifice to idealism and accuracy, not only for the sake of doing things right, but for his reputation and his future.

Storage Requirements.

The vegetable seed work needs more experimentation. We must have a correct germination in the shortest possible time. The soil test is, no doubt, the fairest test, but blotter tests are much more efficient and we must have methods that will give results in a short time without a loss of accuracy. Chemicals may supply this need. There also should be a close checking up on abnormal sprouts, by physiological investigation, backed by soil tests. This should result in a cutting down of the variation in personal judgment in passing on abnormal sprouts. The crux of the situation rests on the harvesting and storage of the seeds, and our biggest needs are more scientific methods of harvesting, together with a really scientific control of storage conditions. If we work this out, the majority of our problems will be solved. We have made a start in this direction by running storage experiments, and hope there will be many more to check with ours.

Parallel to the vegetable germination is another group, not so universal and not so important to as great a number, but extremely and painfully important to those who have it; namely, flower seed germination. This is a large field, which covers many times as much ground as the vegetable seed germination, and on which little experimental work has been done so far. It is up to the commercial house to develop its own methods of germination and to struggle with its problems to the best of its ability.

A part of each year is set aside for our experimental work on flower seed germination. We try not only differences of temperature and moisture, but also try various chemicals, oxygen treatment and the like. At present we are running experiments with an imported chemical combination, which is to act as a disinfectant as well as a stimulant to the seed. The work at present is not at a stage where we can draw definite conclusions.

The flower seed problems are still in such elementary stages that people who have not been confronted by this situation cannot begin to appreciate its complexity. There are many kinds of hard-coatedness and many kinds of dormancy. Some seeds can be helped by soaking; others have so hard a seed coat that they must be nicked. Ipomœa, for instance, cannot be treated like okra; that is, the seeds cannot be nicked after they have been in the germinator a few days and a part of them germinated, because the bad seeds mold so quickly that they ruin the good sprouts which come on with later nicking. The whole test, then, must be nicked before it is put in, which, of course, means considerable labor. Another problem is the extremely small seed. We find that on exceedingly fine seed, like digitalis, lobelia, etc., we must put the test in broadcast. This is a deplorable inaccuracy, but there is a limit to the amount of labor to be put on any one test, and a limit to the eyestrain. Few people are willing to subject themselves to much of this severe eyestrain.

This is merely a suggestion of the countless flower seed problems and the amount of work still to be done.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

A JOINT meeting of the Maryland State Horticultural Society and the Peninsula Horticultural Society is to be held at Berlin, Md., Friday, July 14, when the Harrison Nurseries will act as host at their orchards.

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made that a nursery, to be known as the Taylor Nursery, is to be opened near Greer, S. C., this fall. R. B. Taylor, the manager-to-be, plans to devote fifteen or twenty acres to his nursery.

ACCORDING to Secretary F. Cranefield, of the Wisconsin Horticultural Society, the dates of the annual summer meeting have been changed from August 9 and 10 to August 16 and 17. The meeting this year is to be held at Sturgeon Bay, Wis.

EXPORTS of nursery stock from Holland to the United States fell off nearly one-quarter last year, as compared with the year previous. In 1920 they were valued at $113,707 and last year at $87,468, according to the statistics of the United States Department of Commerce.

At the fourth annual meeting of the Retail Nurserymen's Association of the United States, held in Detroit, Mich., June 29, all the directors of last year were reelected, as follows: George Marshall and L. J. Tucker, Madison, Wis.; E. M. Sherman and J. W. Pitkin, Rochester, N. Y., and Earl Needham, Highland, Mich. E. M. Sherman was reelected president; Earl Needham, vice-president, and L. J. Tucker, secretary-treasurer.

FIVE were elected to membership when the Baby Ramblers' Club of the American Association of Nurserymen met June 27 at Detroit, Mich. They are Joseph Ilgenfritz, Monroe, Mich.; T. H. Cobb, Chase, Ala.; R. Perkins, Newark, N. J.; Frank R. Rajon, Geneva, N. Y. and Donald Wyman, North Abington, Mass. Officers were elected as follows: President, C. H. Mastin, Newburgh, N. Y.; vice-president, Robert Essig, Detroit, Mich., and secretary-treasurer, E. H. Bowden, Geneva, N. Y.

MUCH of the success of the "Plan to Plant Another Tree" campaign of the Illinois nurserymen is due to the ability of Secretary J. A. Young, in his clip sheet material, to hitch botanical information to items of current popular interest. For instance, he says in the latest sheet that periwinkle, "the color our girls are wearing," is taken from the tamarix, and he proceeds to recommend Tamarix hispida aestivalis, also called T. pentandra, for planting in Illinois, describing its habits and pleasing characteristics.

JAPAN QUINCE.

Will you kindly identify the shrub of which I am enclosing leaf and fruit?
C. D. S.—Wis.

The specimen sent is Chaenomeles japonica, also called Pyrus japonica. Its common title is Japan, or flowering quince. This is a hardy shrub, growing to a height of three to five feet. It has red flowers, which come before the leaves appear. The fruit is similar to our quinces and is suitable for use with apples and other fruits in jellies.

STOCK INVESTIGATIONS.

Scott Tells Government's Work.

Two years ago an appropriation of $20,000 for nursery stock investigations was secured for the United States Department of Agriculture. The project is administered by the bureau of plant industry through the offices of horticultural and pomological investigations.

I was brought back into the department the fore part of February, 1921, after a year's absence in commercial work, and placed in charge of the nursery stock investigations. Associated with me in the nursery stock work is G. E. Yerkes, a graduate of the Kansas Agricultural College, who has had a number of years' nursery experience in Kansas and Oklahoma and who is in direct charge of all our propagation. Charles Swingle, who is also a graduate of the Kansas Agricultural College and has had several years' nursery experience in California, is another member of our staff, and with us this year, in a temporary capacity, is M. L. Hancock, who has also had several years' nursery experience and, when he leaves us, expects to take charge of the propagation work for the college of agriculture of the University of Nanking, Nanking, China. Stanley Johnston, a graduate of the Michigan Agricultural College, who is superintendent of the branch station of the Michigan agricultural experiment station, at South Haven, has charge of the nursery stock work at that place.

The appropriation of $20,000 secured two years ago was repeated in the bill for the present fiscal year and also for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Where Work Is in Progress.

Our experimental work this year has been carried on at three places: Bell, Md.; South Haven, Mich., and Diamond Springs, Va. At Bell, where this year the bulk of our work has been developed, we have six and one-half acres leased for nursery stock work. About four acres this year are actually planted. At South Haven, our work is carried on cooperatively with the Michigan agricultural experiment station. We are only using a half-acre of ground at South Haven this year, but hope another season to extend our work there. At Diamond Springs, our work is carried on on land belonging to the Virginia truck experiment station.

With work being carried on in at least three locations where soil conditions and climatic conditions are different, we are able to secure a good check on our work and also to find out whether methods which seem applicable in one section can be utilized more or less generally.

Three Main Projects.

Our three main sub-projects can be grouped as follows: (1) The raising of fruit tree seedlings; (2) the vegetative propagation of fruit tree stocks; (3) a comprehensive study of a number of common and several promising new rose stocks.

While apple and pear seedlings have been grown in the Kaw valley of Kansas for many years, and while several millions of seedlings are annually shipped from that locality, in talking with nurserymen in different parts of the country, it was found that there was a wide range of opinion regarding Kansas-grown seedlings. Some preferred the Kansas-grown, while others preferred the imported.

In order to secure some definite information for ourselves, we purchased 1-year-old apple seedlings a year ago from a number of different sources and lined them out in our nursery at Bell. As a result of one year's observation, it was our opinion that the seedlings which made the best growth were: (1) American-grown seedlings from American seed; (2) imported French seedlings; (3) American-grown seedlings from French seed.

We are continuing our observations include seedlings from Vermont seeds, seedlings from Minnesota seeds and seedlings from French seeds. These seedlings were in the general study block at Bell in 1921 and were lined out again this year for further study and budded the last of May to the following varieties: Northern Spy, Baldwin, Staymen, Jonathan and Winesap. The behavior of these trees from year to year will be noted.

From our work up to date, we believe that good apple seedlings can be grown in this country, but we also believe a better seedling can be grown from American seed than from imported French seed.

Variations in Seedlings.

Is there any difference in seedlings raised from our named American apple varieties? The answer is, there is a marked difference. For two years we have had an absolute failure in getting a stand of seedlings from seeds of Baldwin. Seeds of McIntosh, on the other hand, produce strong, vigorous seedlings. Seedlings of Tolman were particularly outstanding last year and gave us a high percentage of clean, straight roots.

Should we find that the seedlings of some one variety seem particularly outstanding, after a series of years, and seem desirable to use as stocks, will it be practicable for the American apple seedling grower to secure that seed in sufficient quantities and at a price so that he can handle his seedlings at a fair profit? I am exceedingly frank in saying that we are quite skeptical on this point. In addition to this fact, I believe it is commonly recognized that there is a great variation in individual seedling root stocks. This is particularly emphasized in the work of Prof. F. C. Reimer, of the southern Oregon experiment station, at Talent, Ore., with Pyrus ussuriensis and P. Calleryana, two Chinese species which seem to offer unusual possibilities as blight-resistant stocks for pears. He has found, however, a marked variation in the resistance of individual seedlings of these species to blight. Because of this variation in individual seedlings, which might be manifested either in the disease resistance, difference in development of root systems, or in some other character, it seemed advisable for us to give serious attention to the possibility of propagating fruit tree stocks vegetatively.

Before I discuss this part of our work, which is one of the most interesting phases of our nursery stock investigations, I want to emphasize that this work is still in the experimental stage, but that the results we are obtaining are promising.

The propagation of apple varieties by hardwood cuttings has been attempted a number of times with indifferent success. The propagation of many fruit stocks by soft-wood cuttings is for some classes of plants not only possible, but probably commercially practical, the objection being that it requires some special equipment and more or less controlled conditions.

Layering is another possibility, but offers the objection of being a rather slow way and more or less expensive. In all of these operations the method of attack has been to start with a part of the plant which normally grows above the ground and induce it to send out roots. We have simply reversed this method and taken the part which is below the ground—that is, a root cutting—and allowed it to send out shoots from adventitious buds and at the same time develop roots. Our method is probably best described as a combination of root cuttings and mound layering. It was first tried by us last year at Bell, Md., and in a much more intensive way at Bell, South Haven and Diamond Springs this year.

Handling Root Cuttings.

A brief description of the way we handled a lot of 5,000 Yakima seedlings may serve to illustrate just what I mean. From these 5,000 seedlings about 50,000 plants have been secured from root cuttings and the 5,000 seedlings were also retained with sufficient roots so that they could be planted out. Cuttings were made of the tap roots and also from the side roots. These cuttings were graded according to position. First the side roots were stripped and tied into bundles, probably 100 roots to a bundle. The tap roots were tied into bundles of twenty-five to fifty. The root cuttings were made with pruning shears, on the tap roots, using large two-handled shears. One man held the bundles while a second man did the cutting. The cuttings were made about three inches in length and were stored separately. The following sizes were made: First cut tap root; second cut tap root and third cut tap root, and first, second and third cut side roots. Each cut was kept separate and stored in flats, covered with moist sawdust and buried in the ground to a depth of about three feet. The cuttings were made the last part of January and the first part of February and were planted in the open at Diamond Springs about March 25; at Bell, from March 20 to April 15, and at South Haven, as late as April 21. They were planted in a vertical position in nursery rows, four feet apart, spaced at a distance of one to two inches in the row and buried to a depth of about one inch. Buds started to form and shoots appeared above the ground in three weeks. In most cases two to three shoots formed in each cutting and in some cases as many as ten. As the shoots developed, earth was hilled up around the plants and roots furnishing the new growth.

At Diamond Springs these shoots have made a growth large enough so that they can be budded now, while at Bell and South Haven they can be budded later. From one row of apple root cuttings of first cut tap roots fifty feet in length I counted 789 shoots. Many of these shoots had started to develop roots and the rooted plants could be taken off this fall. From a similar row of second cut tap roots I counted 619 shoots; from a row of third cuts, 316, and from a row of first cut side, 295 shoots. The latter may not be large enough to bud this season, but will give rooted plants which can be lined out next spring.

The original root cuttings are allowed to remain in the ground, as we find the second year they send out even stronger shoots than they did the first year. Just how many years this process can go on without renewing the original stock is something we still have to find out. One great advantage of this method of raising stocks is that hand work is practically over by the middle of June, and after that only horse cultivation is necessary. With seedlings, however, several hand weedings, as well as hand cultivation, will be made during July and August. By allowing the original root cuttings to remain in place, no planting is necessary the second and probably the third or fourth season.

Judged from the financial angle, stocks can be raised in this way at relatively little expense, but the important significance of this method is that it offers a practical way of multiplying any individual tree that has outstanding characteristics that make it of value for stock purposes. The method applies not only to apple stocks, but also has proven an equally efficient means of propagating Pyrus ussuriensis, P. Calleryana, Myrobalan, St. Julien, Maz-zard, almond and sour orange. The only common fruit-tree stocks which we have not been able to handle in a satisfactory way by this method are peach and Mahaleb. With Mahaleb we get a satisfactory growth from the first cut on the tap root, but the other cuts did not start well.

Direct Propagation.

Our next thought was, if stocks can be propagated in this way, why not direct propagation of the varieties themselves! With apples, we are now experimenting with the possibility of propagating more than sixty varieties by root cuttings. We have found that with practically all varieties roots develop above the graft union. With many of our common varieties, like Northern Spy, Baldwin, Gano, Smokehouse, and a number of others, about fifty per cent of the trees develop their own roots above the union. Cuttings can be made from these roots and varieties actually propagated by root cuttings. We are giving a great deal of time and study to this method of direct propagation and it is probable that our report another year may be devoted almost exclusively to this phase of our work.

Rose Stocks.

The subproject which deals with roses probably takes as much time and thought as any part of our work. As with every other phase of nursery activity, there are almost as many ideas regarding the best stocks for roses as there are men handling them. In our rose stock experiment we are using stocks now in use commercially; namely, Manetti, canina, Seven Sisters, Mme. Plantier, Wax Rose, Ragged Robin, cinnamomea, multiflora japonica and rugosa. In addition to these commonly grown stocks, we are using a setigera Wichuraiana, multiflora cathayensis and polyantha, Soulieana, setigera, rubrifolia and several others. Soulieana, setigera and rubrifolia come readily from seed, the rest of our stocks from soft-wood and hard-wood cuttings. With all our newer stocks, our seedlings and cuttings trace back to individual mother plants. One hundred thousand soft-wood cuttings will be put in this summer for our stock work. About ten or twelve hybrid teas will be budded on these stocks. A supply of bud wood of each variety is being worked up this year, the buds all tracing back to one mother plant. As all our bud wood of each variety will trace back to one mother plant, and as our newer stocks all trace back to one plant, we believe that the possibility of variation, due to the individual plant, has been reduced to a minimum. We cannot give you any definite information regarding rose stocks, but we believe that in the rose stock test which is now under way at Bell, and which we hope later to repeat in different localities, we have laid the basis for real definite information.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

SIZE OF BOILER NEEDED.

Kindly state the capacity of a hot water boiler required to heat a house, 25x100 feet, when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero. The house runs east and west and the boiler room is located at the northwest corner of the house. I am running two 3-inch mains and twelve 2-inch flows and returns. The house has three feet of glass in both of the side walls. It is fourteen feet from the ground to the ridge and six feet to the gutter. J. S.—Ind.

The size of heater required for a given greenhouse depends to a considerable extent upon the temperature to be maintained. Nothing is stated above on this point, but, judging from the radiation used, it is inferred that it is from 55 degrees to 60 degrees, although, if 60 degrees is to be supplied at the lowest temperatures in central Indiana, it will be necessary to give careful attention to the firing. A boiler with a large grate surface will be needed.

For 60 degrees, about 1,300 square feet of radiation will be desirable and it would be advisable to use a boiler with a grate twenty-eight inches in diameter, if a good grade of soft coal is to be used. For the ordinary run-of-mine coal it would be well to have a grate thirty inches in diameter, or about six square feet of grate area. For 50 degrees the area of the grate should be about five square feet. There should not be more than three sections above the fire pot, if a horizontal boiler is to be used.

RADIATION TOO LOW.

Kindly suggest a heating arrangement for a range of two greenhouses, 20x50 feet, with three feet of glass in the side walls. We ran the one house last winter with a 2-inch flow near the ridge and three 1½-inch returns under each bench. Each house is to contain two side benches two and one-half feet wide and two solid beds, each four and one-half feet wide and eighteen inches deep. Would one 2-inch flow pipe on each gutter, with three 1½-inch returns under each bench, give us a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather? We should like to carry the present house at 60 degrees and the new house at 50 degrees. The return is to be level with or just above the top of the boiler, which is an upright tubular, with a 36-inch grate. Hot water is to be used. A. F. S.—Ky.

In estimating the radiation for a greenhouse, a good deal depends upon the frequency with which the minimum outside temperature prevails, and the extent to which, economy of fuel and BUSY!

Who said busy? Come around to our factory if you want to see industrial action. Come near it any day and you will hear a humming that can come from only a busy boiler works, and in the evening after the sun goes down you will find a light in every window, and the same activities go on all night long with all the earmarks of enormous demand.

We have got a big spindle full of orders to take care of and more orders are coming in every day. It keeps us moving, but we can handle them and a good many more.

Every year more florists become acquainted with the high efficiency of Kroeschell Boilers for greenhouse heating and, consequently, every year brings an increased demand for them.

This year the increase in demand for Kroeschell Boilers has been greater than at any other time. Orders are arriving in every mail from all parts of the country.

labor is to be sacrificed in order to effect a saving in the first cost of a heating plant. Sometimes, too, it may be feasible to allow the temperature of a greenhouse to drop several degrees below the minimum mentioned, and thus materially reduce the amount of radiation required in a greenhouse.

However, the amount of radiation suggested is considerably below what should be used, if more than 40 degrees is to be provided under the most severe conditions, and the use of two 2½-inch flows is suggested in each house, with eight 1½-inch returns for 50 degrees and ten returns for 60 degrees. The returns should be carried as high as possible, and it would be preferable to have the flows on the purlins rather than on the gutters.

PIPING NEW HOUSES.

I have two greenhouses, 32x50 feet, which I should like to pipe for hot water. I wish to maintain 60 degrees in zero weather. There are four feet of glass in the side walls, while the ends are of glass. It is six feet to the gutter and fourteen feet to the ridge. I thought of using a 5-inch main and two 3-inch flows, together with twelve 1½-inch returns in each house. Will this piping be sufficient? As the top of my boiler will be level with the ground, will it be advisable for me to run the main flow along the ground to the point where the four 3-inch flows connect with it? If I pipe the greenhouses in this manner, it will not be necessary for me to run any pipe outdoors. M. B.—O.

While it is preferable to carry the flow pipes as high as possible, under the conditions mentioned we would carry a 5-inch main underground, but would have it either level or running slightly uphill and reduce it to 4-inch after taking off the supply pipes for the first house. These may be 3-inch, as planned, but our choice would be to run five 2½-inch pipes overhead in each house, dropping them one inch in fifteen feet.

While 1½-inch pipes may be used for the returns, it would be preferable to use 2-inch pipes for this purpose. It would require careful firing and a boiler with a large grate to maintain even 50 degrees in zero weather with two 3-inch flows and twelve 1½-inch returns. Not less than twenty 1½-inch returns will be needed for 60 degrees, and twenty-four should be used for the highest economy in fuel and labor. Better results can be obtained with five 2½-inch flow pipes and fifteen 2-inch returns in each house.

CHANGES IN QUARANTINE.

teen towns in Maine, two in New Hampshire, eleven in Vermont and sixty-seven in Connecticut are added to the territory in those states already under quarantine. Seven towns are removed from the quarantine—Argyle, Roxbury and Riley, in Maine; Lancaster and Northumberland, in New Hampshire; and Plainfield and Barnard, in Vermont.

The towns now added to the area quarantined against the gipsy moth are:

In Maine: Steuben, Unionville, Cherryfield, Franklin, Deblois, Dover, Foxcroft, Brighton, Madrid, VIII, 9, 10 and 16.

In New Hampshire: Carroll and Jefferson.

In Vermont: Washington, Tunbridge, Plymouth, Reading, Stratton, Guilford, Halifax, Whitingham, Readsboro, Stamford and Pownal.

In Connecticut: Salisbury, North Canaan, Canaan, Norfolk, Colebrook, Winchester, Torrington, Harwinton, Thomaston, Waterbury, Plymouth, Wolcott, Hartland, Barkhamsted, New Hartford, Burlington, Bristol, Southington, Plainfield, Farmington, Avon, Canton, Granby, Simsbury, Suffield, East Granby, Windsor Locks, Windsor, Bloomfield, Hartford, West Hartford, Newington, Wetherfield, Rocky Hill, New Britain, Berlin, Cromwell, Middletown, Enfield, East Windsor, South Windsor, Ellington, Tolland, Willington, Ashford, Vernon, East Hartford, Manchester, Bolton, Coventry, Glastonbury, Andover, Columbia, Hebron, Marlboro, Portland, Chatham, Colchester, Lebanon, Franklin, Sprague, Lisbon, Salem, Montville, East Lyme, Waterford and New London.

In Massachusetts: All towns not hitherto quarantined.

Under the federal regulations, Christmas greens, nursery stock, forest products and stone and quarry products are required to be inspected before shipment to places outside the area.

During the last year careful scouting of the territory immediately outside the area known to be infested by the gipsy moth showed that only a slight spread of the pest took place in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. In Massachusetts and Connecticut the westward spread of the insect has been greater than heretofore. Indications are that favorable winds were responsible for this.

A limited amount of work was done during the last year to determine the area infested by the brown-tail moth. As a result it was possible to reduce the size of the area. Conditions during the winter unfavorable to the pest, together with the effective work of imported parasites, combined in some sections with thorough hand methods of control, were responsible for holding the insect in check.

RAIN WHEN YOU WANT IT

It Pays To Pay For It Because It Pays For Itself

By jimminy, if I don't believe we make a mistake in telling you that the Skinner System of watering pays for itself the first year!

If we said in two or three years, you would believe us.

As it is now, you kind of rub your head and declare it sounds like a fish story.

Furthermore, we don't blame you one little bit for feeling that way.

The thing does sound almost too good to be true.

Still, you can hardly blame us for telling you that it does it, when it really does do it.

There are three growing months still ahead to use the Skinner System.

Tell you what we'll do; we'll divide the payments up in three equal parts, making the last one come due November first. What do you say?

When a man repeats

He's satisfied that your article is the best that can be had for the money, that your service is second to none, regardless of whether the article is a pair of shoes or a greenhouse.

A group of thirty-five consecutive orders received recently show that

One grower placed his fourth order;
Five growers placed their third orders;
Ten growers placed their second orders;
Nineteen growers placed their first orders.

Sixteen growers or 43% have purchased from two to four times, a criterion that King houses and service are right.

Nineteen growers or 57% have purchased their first house only after a thorough investigation of King construction and methods.

It's all very well to discuss a greenhouse before it's constructed, but—ask the man who had some other make of house before he had a King and listen to his story of why he repeats with a King.

We'll be glad to tell you about our types of construction and to co-operate with you in planning your next house.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Pay Up!

The national publicity campaign continues to hold the interest of the trade generally, and the publicity committee is busy in the preparation for late summer and fall activities. Rather more than should be necessary of their time is taken up with financial matters. It is easy enough to map out procedure, but financing is a different proposition. As has frequently been mentioned of late, the great handicap in the committee's work is scarcity of funds, mainly caused by the remissness of subscribers in taking up their pledges. Just why a florist treats such a matter with indifference is beyond understanding. He is not asked to contribute more than he can afford and usually is considered as well able to discharge his pledges, but he is tardy in doing so and thus contributes to the concern which it seems the lot of the committee to experience. It is not fair to this small body of men who take the brunt of the campaign and do their best to carry out the plans which they are expected to formulate. Did they fall down in their work as some of the subscribers do in their pledges, a howl would be heard through the length and breadth of the land. The responsibilities they are obliged to assume are onerous enough without also having to form themselves into a collection agency to get in the funds which, properly, should be placed at their disposal without difficulty. Business has been good in the florists' trade for some months, and it is hard to account for the tardiness in taking up pledges, which is the chief complaint of the publicity committee. Without doubt, delinquents become such through thoughtlessness or because they have not filed their memoranda received from the secretary as statement of account. If they will only now consider them seriously and reflect for a moment that this money is needed by the committee to defray advertising bills, they may be stirred to action and send in their checks, so that the members of the committee may not be placed in a dilemma which few of those making pledges would care to encounter.

Flowers in general are scarce and the quality is not good. Roses are extremely scarce and high, bringing from $6 per hundred up, according to quality.

Carnations are almost over. A few stragglers are seen, at $3 and $4 per hundred, but these are of inferior quality. Gladioli are becoming more plentiful and bring from $4 to $10 per hundred. The quality is good and they find a ready sale. Lilies are scarce and bring $20 per hundred. A few asters are appearing. Other summer stock includes gaillardias, snapdragons, daisies, delphiniums and buddleias. The last has been in unusually heavy demand, because of the high price of plumbago, the buddleia being used as a substitute. A meager supply of baby's breath and some statice is now coming in.

AJAX BLACK GLAZING CEMENT

A PRACTICAL glazing material made for application in a practical manner. No clumsy, slow-working tools necessary—simply a putty bulber or two and a filling gun to load them—furnished free to users.

Ajax Black Glazing Cement has been used throughout the country for several years with excellent results.

CONTAINS NO COAL TAR

Our product is a cement-like composition of Asbestos Fibres and heavy, semi-drying hydro-carbon oils. Its exceptionally long life is due to the fact that it never thoroughly hardens like old-fashioned white putty. The outside surface (which is exposed to the oxygen of the air) forms a resilient, tough skin, below which the material remains soft and plastic. Because of this we guarantee that the coldest weather will not cause it to become brittle or pull away. On the other hand our product is warranted not to sag or run in extremely hot weather, due to its being interlaced with the Asbestos Fibres.

As Ajax Black Glazing Cement never thoroughly hardens, glass glazed with it can be shifted when desired without the loss of breakage that so often results when hard-drying white putties are used.

LOW COST

Compared with the old-fashioned White, Lead putties, Ajax Black Glazing Cement not only lasts years longer, but is a great deal lower in initial cost.

One gallon is sufficient to glaze 500 lineal feet of sash.

M. S. CHAPIN & COMPANY

While primarily made to stop water leaks, so thoroughly does Ajax Black Glazing Cement hermetically seal up the sash, that it will soon pay for itself in the saving of heat that is otherwise lost through air voids. This fact has been demonstrated time and again, and we can prove it.

Springfield Carnation Food

FOREWORD

In offering this carnation food to the wholesale growers and amateur floriculturists, we do so with the conviction that you will find in its use the same gratifying results obtaining in our own greenhouses.

Co-operating with the American Chemical Specialties Co., Inc., of Elizabeth, N. J., we combined the thorough scientific knowledge of the exacting chemists with our own wide practical experience in perfecting a food that would meet the requirements of carnations in every detail. After exhaustive experiments we offer this carnation food to you, not as the usual fertilizer, but rather as the ultra finished plant food adapted essentially for carnations.

Springfield carnation food is a compound in which the elements of fertility are so blended that a portion of the plant foods are presented to the roots in soluble form, ready for immediate assimilation; others are less quickly available, the various organic constituents becoming gradually available as the soil bacteria convert them to an available condition.

This carnation food is not a chemical stimulant, but rather an evenly balanced, ideal organic diet. It invigorates the root action, and produces a natural growth, not a soft, fleshy one; hence the stem and calyx are strengthened in all seasons, the lasting quality of the flowers lengthened and the color intensified.

It is essentially a food of health, vitality and productivity.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Horticultural Society Meets.

The Newport Horticultural Society at its meeting last week began plans for the annual ball, that will be held in September, and the executive committee was directed to make the necessary arrangements. The society will make a special effort to have the ball as much of a success as possible, since the receipts from the affair are used for defraying the expenses of free horticultural lectures, which are given from time to time.

The report of the committee on the June exhibition was received and accepted, and it was voted to pay the awards. There was a general discussion of the question of making medal awards to exhibits shown for the first time; the general opinion, however, was that no medal should be awarded until a second presentation of the plant or flower, and that, whenever possible, plants that flower should be seen growing.

William H. Arnold, of Peckham avenue, exhibited a vase of seedling iris and was awarded a certificate of merit.

William Gray was awarded a cultural certificate and a gratuity of $3 for a vase of Ophelia roses grown in the open from plants started a year ago.

Various Notes.

The local branch of J. G. Leikens, Inc., of New York, was opened the first of the month, with Robert Clifford in charge.

Wadley & Smythe, of New York, have opened up as usual at the Newport Casino entrance.

Mrs. Joseph Leikens came from New York last week to register for the fall elections. W. H. M.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Columbus, O.—The Conover Co., operating the Mission Inn and Mission Flower Shop, at 116 South High street, is temporarily under the control and protection of the Franklin County Court of Common Pleas, with Carl Tresemer acting as receiver. Mr. Tresemer expects to operate the business as heretofore and hopes to meet current obligations during the summer and after the dull months are past to dispose of the accrued obligations of the company.

LILIES FOR SEPTEMBER.

When should I plant in pots Liliun giganteum, magnificum or rubrum for blooms September 25. Under what growing conditions do they succeed?

M. P. G.—Ind.

Cold storage giganteums, if started about the end of July, should flower for September 25, but you should start speciosum, rubrum and magnificum at once in order to have them in flower at that time. Place the pots below the benches at first, watering only a little until root action develops. Then stand the pots on the bench. They do better if the glass is shaded somewhat. You do not, of course, get the strength of stem or number of flowers per stalk from cold storage bulbs that you do from fresh ones. Frequent light sprayings help along the plants, and if they come ahead too rapidly, owing to possible heat waves, hold them back by placing the pots on a cellar floor.

A PECULIAR BEETLE.

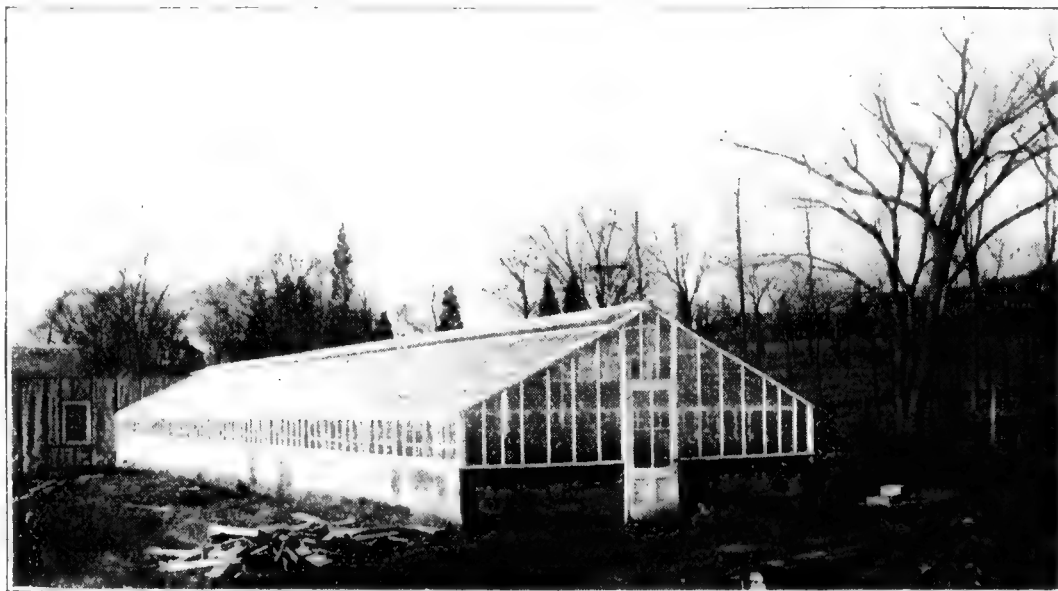

Hard-shelled beetles make their appearance in my houses about June 1. They are in color bright green and gold, and they are about three-fourths of an inch in length. They seem to come up out of the ground. They stay about three or four weeks and then disappear into the ground again, burrowing in about two or three inches. They are becoming quite destructive to lettuce, etc. Will you advise as to what can be done to get rid of them?

E. G. P.—O.

The beetles mentioned are new to me. If they are doing damage in the soil, use carbon bisulphide; bore holes four or five inches deep and twelve inches apart each way. Pour a scant tablespoonful into each hole and immediately cover the hole. The gas will suffocate all soil pests. While in flight, an occasional fumigation should kill most of them, using a strong nicotine extract or, better still, a weak dose of hydrocyanic acid gas. Steam sterilization, if practicable, would clean out both beetles and disease germs.

This Vitally Interests The Man Who Wants Only a Small House

No matter how small a house you can figure your way to build at first, we are interested. It isn't what you build today that counts. It's what you will build as your business grows. We can tell you of a dozen fellows right offhand, who started with just one little house, who today have ranges of glass.

There's Seavey & Son of Bangor, Maine, whose house we have shown in these talks. Just received a most enthusiastic letter from them, saying there was no way out of it, they simply must have another.

They started first with a few frames and a wee little old home-made house.

Practically 75% of our customers today, started not so long ago with small houses, and how they have grown!

We will give to your proposition, no matter how little or how big, the same careful consideration. Never mind how big we are, we want your business. Why don't we get together and have a good friendly talk and see what can be worked out? You know we go anywhere for business. Or to talk business.

IT TAKES

Experience as well as a lot of knowledge to design a greenhouse properly and AFTER THAT it takes a well equipped factory to turn out the material to build the greenhouse. There are a thousand and one little schemes and wrinkles which are used in manufacturing a greenhouse. The average greenhouse man does not know about these and is apt to be misled.

When you buy from us you get the result of years of experience added to some real brains.

CHICAGO

Here is a True Canadian's Idea of a Show House

R. L. Dunn is his name.
St. Catharines, Ontario, is his location.
Grower and florist, his vocation.
Joking his friends and getting himself generally liked is his pastime.
He is one of those fortunate chaps whose business and his home are right in the one spot.

At the back are the two pipe frame houses and connecting lean-to we first built for him, and then comes a wide iron framer.
This show house is really more like a big show window. But no matter what it is like, it sells flowers.

Mr. Dunn figured out that a show house looking show window, would attract a lot more interest than a show window that was just a show window.
His bank account shows that it shows up as he figured it would.
The idea is as new as it is novel.

Just to prove to you that he didn't make the mistake of having all the show on the front, we took a photo of this attractive little casement window, which catches your eye the minute you open the door. Besides being attractive, however, it sells not only flowers, but baskets and vases.
Sells them, because it looks so homey like, that the women folks just can't help wanting something of the same look in their home.

Sometimes wonder, if florists don't doll their shops up so much that the real purpose of their shops is not somewhat lost.

After all, simplicity—the right kind of simplicity—is always effective. Always satisfying.

Just naturally we would like to build for you either a show-house-show-window, or a show house.
Which shall it be?
Let's talk it over together.

Narcissus Paper White Grandiflora

Our PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVE now in FRANCE cables that growers do not expect to HARVEST MORE THAN 50% good flowering Bulbs of Paper White Narcissus as against the crop of 1921, which, as is well known, was FAR BELOW NORMAL. However, the fact of our man HAVING BEEN IN THE GROWING SECTION FOR THE PAST MONTH and with "SPOT CASH" PAYMENT we have been able to secure a large share of the output of same and which we believe will make it possible for us to

NARCISSUS PAPER WHITE GRANDIFLORA

Finished Product as they Grow in Water

MAINTAIN OUR LEADERSHIP FOR THE SUPPLY OF THIS IMPORTANT FRENCH BULB. The small crop of Paper Whites has enabled growers to dictate prices. Nevertheless we believe that even with the comparatively high selling values which must necessarily obtain on this side, Florists will still find PAPER WHITES a profitable adjunct to their business when same are properly grown. Buyers who have already favored us with their orders will get FIRST CALL AS TO PRICES AND DELIVERIES, but intending purchasers of PAPER WHITES will be taken care of to the best of our ability, and QUICK ACTION is, we believe, IMPERATIVE on your part if you contemplate laying in a supply of these bulbs for the coming season. Burpee's Sweet Peas

The Burpee Early Flowering Sweet Peas are recognized as leaders in their various colors and they are grown extensively by all florists who demand the very best.

The careful hybridization work carried on at Burpee's Fordhook Farms in Pennsylvania, the growing of the seed crops on Burpee's Floradale Farms in California, and our extensive indoor and outdoor trials give us a unique opportunity to supply the florists with the very best that can be had in Sweet Peas. Everything possible is done to insure the quality of Burpee's Sweet Peas.

Mrs. Warren G. Harding "The Harding Blue"

Mrs. Warren G. Harding is a deep shade of silvery blue. It is pure in color without any suspicion of mauve or rose. The flowers are immense in size with a broad and much frilled standard. It is a vigorous grower, bearing large, four-flowered sprays in great profusion. Awarded Certificate of Merit at the International Flower Show held in New York, March, 1921. Trade packet, 50 cts.; oz., $2.50; ¼ lb., $7.50; lb., $25.00, postpaid.

Burpee's Orange "A Pure Glistening Orange"

Burpee's Orange is in every way distinct, as there is no trace of pink or orange-pink in either standard or wings. It is a true glowing orange self, a shade that looks attractive under artificial light as well as in the day-time. The flowers are of immense size and beautifully waved and are borne in fours on long stems. Burpee's Orange was awarded a Certificate of Merit at the International Flower Show held in New York, March, 1921. Trade packet, $1.00; oz., $5.00; ¼ lb., $15.00; lb., $50.00, postpaid.

Cheerful "A Rich Shade of Rose"

A most appropriately named variety with large well waved flowers of a "cheerful" shade of begonia-rose. Few varieties make such an imposing bunch. A good strong grower and profuse bloomer. Awarded Certificate of Merit at the International Flower Show held in New York, March, 1921. Trade packet, $1.00; oz., $5.00; ¼ lb., $15.00; lb., $50.00, postpaid.

Sunburst Improved

The color is a pleasing and attractive shade of rich salmon-pink, intensified toward the margin with a cast of amber and salmon. Immense flowers borne in fours on long and stout stems. Oz., $1.00; ¼ lb., $3.00; lb., $10.00, postpaid.

Mrs. Kerr "The Best Early Flowering Salmon"

Mrs. Kerr has created a sensation whenever exhibited. The color is a pleasing shade of rich salmon overlaid with a soft tinge of orange. It is an indescribably beautiful flower of magnificent size and superb form. Awarded Certificate of Merit at the International Flower Show held in New York, March, 1920. Trade packet, 50 cts.; oz., $2.00; ¼ lb., $6.00; lb., $18.00, postpaid.

White Star

A first-class black-seeded white bearing elegant sprays. The flowers are artistically arranged in fours on long and strong stems. The plants are robust and branch freely. Awarded a Certificate of Merit at the International Flower Show held in New York, March, 1921. Trade packet, 50 cts.; oz., $2.00; ¼ lb., $6.00; lb., $18.00, postpaid.

No Value In Palms Like This Anywhere

We are taking down all our city greenhouses, which are stocked with decorative plants, and will improve this property with a large public garage 214 feet long and 109 feet wide and a 36-apartment court building. These building operations make it necessary to provide room at our Edgebrook greenhouses to accommodate plants that are now in the city greenhouses.

This Is Your Opportunity

To move quickly we offer Latania Palms in 7-inch pots at $1.50 each, and 9-inch at $3.50 each. These plants are very strong and are now ready for a shift. If these plants were established in larger sized pots they would be worth twice as much as we are asking. They are just the thing for hotel or home decoration.

Packing Charges—5% for shipment out of pots—10% when shipped in clay pots.

This McCray installation in the store of the Dahl Floral Company, Atlanta, Ga., shows what effective display the McCray enables

We carry various styles and sizes of florists' refrigerators in stock for prompt shipment. Besides, our Service Department will gladly prepare plans for specially built equipment if you will send a rough sketch of your requirements.

Craig Quality is Always High

AN APOLOGY Our headline of June 29 was an error. We thought that the express rates were to be lowered with the freight rates July 1. The reduction has not yet been made. We are willing to pay the difference between the present express rates and the 10% reduction that was expected on orders received between July 1 and July 8. C. O. D. charges guaranteed.

Never before have we offered to our customers such a complete line of stock and of such light quality, including both Flowering and Foliage Plants. We are booking heavily on orders and suggest to our many customers to either call at Norwood and make their selections, or mail order at once so that reservations can be made, to avoid disappointment. Prosperity is here and you should protect your best interests for bigger and better sales with Craig Quality Stock.

We cordially invite you to our new home at Norwood Station, Delaware County, Pa., easily reached by the Pennsylvania R. R. to Norwood Station, and Baltimore & Ohio R. R. to Holmes Station, or by trolley.

GULLETT & SONS, PLANT SPECIALISTS Lincoln, Illinois

Class of 1922, Davey Institute of Tree Surgery. Thorough scientific education, plus practical skill trained into them, makes these young athletes master Tree Surgeons

A Million Dollar Business in Saving Trees

By Martin L. Davey, General Manager

THE business of The Davey Tree Expert Company is now running at the rate of one million dollars for 1922. It has taken more than twenty years of steady building to reach this volume. The Davey Company sells nothing but service—the service of carefully selected, highly trained, scientifically educated Tree Surgeons, who save trees without guessing or experiment, when they can be saved. This service is available almost everywhere in the eastern half of the United States. Nearly fifteen thousand clients have been served up to this time, many of them regularly.

Lieut. Colonel Frank K. Hyatt, treasurer of the Pennsylvania Military Academy, in a letter written to The Davey Tree Expert Company, December 2, 1921, said:

"Three of your men are performing tree surgery at the college and while I had only engaged them for two days, their work was of such character that I was compelled to hold them longer. In fact, they will probably be with us four or five days.

"They seem to have thorough knowledge of their work and the foreman in charge is a very unusual man. It gives me pleasure to congratulate you on the character of work which your employees are doing."

This letter is typical of many hundreds of voluntary letters of commendation received by the Davey Company from its clients. They come regularly from every section served by Davey Tree Surgeons. It is significant that nearly every letter emphasizes the high-type men, their apparent skill and ability to do their work with accuracy and thoroughness and speed, but more particularly the fact that they are diligent and zealous workers.

The evolution of Davey Tree Surgery compared to the automobile

I do not presume to say that every last client is 100% satisfied. That would be too much to expect from a human organization. But more than 95% of the clients are fully pleased with both the work and the service. Nor would I claim that the Davey organization has always been as good as it is today, nor that the methods employed have always been as remarkably good and successful as they are now.

Davey Tree Surgery has been before the public nearly as long as the automobile, and its development has been almost parallel. You will easily recall the automobile of fifteen or twenty years ago. You recall how often it broke down, how many times it was laid up by the roadside? You remember its imperfect mechanism, its poor lighting, the hard job of cranking? Well, the fundamental principles of the automobile were the same then as now. The wonderful advance has been made in the refinements and the mechanical improvements. Then think of the really marvelous piece of machinery that you buy in the modern automobile!

Just so with Davey Tree Surgery. The fundamental principles were the same fifteen or twenty years ago as today. It was then relatively crude and imperfect. But honest effort and a determined purpose have produced refinements and mechanical improvements and scientific accuracy that are both marvelous and inspiring.

Only two or three men out of a hundred applicants are finally accepted

However, it is the human element of the Davey organization that I wish to describe. The high-type men, their surprising efficiency, their zeal and skill and knowledge are the result of something back behind. That something is a policy that could produce no other result.

From time to time we need additional men. We run advertisements in the cities within a reasonable distance of our headquarters, giving our specifications. Many replies are received. An information blank is sent to each applicant, in which he must give his life history. If a hundred information blanks are returned, our experience has shown that not more than fifty seem to meet our requirements. The others are cast aside.

We then send our representatives to these cities and notify the fifty to report at a certain hotel for personal interviews. Out of the fifty men thus interviewed, we select not more than five who seem to be the right kind.

A regular training field where practical training is given to every man

These five are brought in to Kent (Ohio) for practical training, where we maintain a regular training field. These five are put through a thorough course of practical training for several weeks, at the end of which we select not more than two or three as qualified and made of the right stuff.

Thus, out of an original hundred definite applicants, we get not more than two or three. The process of selection, though it is severe, works wonders and gives us unusual men for the very important work which we do.

Those who finally pass are sent out into the field, always under the direction of master Tree Surgeons. They simply grow into the work and acquire almost intuitive skill.

A chief expert travels regularly from squad to squad

Then, we have a chief expert who spends all of his time traveling from squad to squad to check up on all the details of the work and the merit of each individual—to see that our high standard is consistently maintained. Occasionally he tells us that a certain man is not our kind and should not be in the Davey organization. That man is promptly dismissed. Very often he tells us that certain men are doing especially fine work and recommends advancement. Such men are promptly advanced.

So the really good men remain with us—and they like their jobs mighty well. Naturally enough, they give superior service.

Constant supervision by local representatives

In addition to this, a number of squads are under the constant supervision of each local representative, of whom we have nearly thirty whose highest self-interest requires watchful care of the interests of each client, to see that he gets the maximum service.

More than this, we require periodic reports on every man in our field force. Our local representatives give detailed monthly reports on the foremen under their supervision. Each foreman gives a monthly report in great detail concerning each man in his squad. Every bit of information from every source about each individual goes into his personal service record. And every one knows that his service record is complete and strives to keep it good.

The only place in the world where the science of Tree Surgery is taught

When a man in the field force has reached a proper state of development, he is brought into Kent to attend our resident school. This course covers two years—four months each year. We maintain a regular school with complete library and laboratory equipment and a corps of instructors with fine scientific training from various colleges and universities, plus special training in the Davey organization. There is no other school in the world that teaches Tree Surgery, so we maintain the Davey Institute of Tree Surgery as a matter of practical necessity. In this school we teach only those things required to make real Tree Surgeons—nothing superfluous or unnecessary. The course includes Botany and Dendrology, Pathology and Entomology, Soils and the Feeding of Trees, Spraying and Fruit-growing, and above all the Theory and Practice of Tree Surgery.

Every man in the Davey organization is a trained man—Davey trained

When a man has been with us long enough, has had the necessary amount of complete training, and has demonstrated to us his ability and qualifications, he is entrusted with the handling of operations—then and only then.

"Do it right or not at all."—JOHN DAVEY

Every man in the Davey organization is a trained man—Davey trained. If a man should apply to us for employment and say that he is an expert and understands all phases of the work—recommends himself highly—we say to him, if we should happen to need men, "All right, you may start in at the bottom and show us." Very few of them ever come and we are just as well satisfied. Our experience has shown us that not more than one in ten of these so-called tree men from the outside is the right kind of man. None of them are real experts when they come to us. All of them have many things to unlearn.

The Davey Research Department does the experimenting—the client's trees are never experimented upon

In addition to all these other things, we maintain a Research Department in charge of scientists of practical experience. It is their duty to work out every scientific and practical problem of Tree Surgery, as fast as possible. They have done wonderful work. They gather data from every available source, particularly from the experience of the Davey organization, in addition to original experiments. Every experiment is conducted in Kent by our Research Department and never on the trees of a client.

For instance, our Research Department has worked out a list of "forbidden trees," those which experience has demonstrated are not worth complete treatment or do not respond properly to treatment. On these trees our experts are permitted to do only first-aid work.

A national organization that carries with it an assured protection to tree owners

There is no other national organization in our field. There are, of course, many local imitators. It is an unfortunate fact that there are mighty few good ones among them. We would be happy if they were all good and well qualified. But who will supervise them? Who will train them? Who will provide the discipline that will hold them to high-quality service? Who will pass judgment on the results of their work?

There are quite a number, who have never had any contact with the Davey organization, who claim falsely that they are Davey men. There are some, unfortunately, whom we have been obliged to let go for obvious faults, who attempt to capitalize on the prestige of the Davey name, to our detriment and to that of the profession we have built up and have endeavored to honor.

The unseen things that make quality are only possible because of large volume

In the Davey organization it is the unseen things (rigid selection of men, practical and thorough training, supervision of chief expert and local representatives, resident school, research department, standardization of methods and organization discipline) that make real quality and lasting merit. On a business of nearly three-quarters of a million dollars in 1920, we spent three times as much on these unseen things which make quality as we made in profit. In spite of the depression, we did a business of almost six hundred thousand in 1921 and spent four times as much on these hidden things that make quality as our profit amounted to. The business of the Davey Company is now running at the rate of one million dollars for 1922.

Davey methods have been standardized. Davey work is the same in Boston as it is in Chicago, the same in New York as in Kansas City, the same in Montreal as in New Orleans. Davey experts are of uniformly high type, all thoroughly trained, all carefully selected and developed. And best of all is organization discipline that requires and maintains a constant high standard down to the smallest details of work and service.

A tree-man may fool the public but he cannot fool us

It has seemed to me that the greatest thing the Davey organization does for its clients, over and above all these other things, is that of relieving the client of all worry and responsibility in the selection of the men who are to treat his priceless trees. A tree-man may fool the public, most of whom know little about trees. But he cannot fool us. A man must be right in every sense of the word or he cannot go very far in the Davey organization.

We, who know Tree Surgery values, select the men to whom this work of very great importance is to be entrusted. We know they are right and worthy of your confidence and our confidence or we would not send them to you. They come to you with our seal of approval.

They carry with them the most priceless possession we have—our reputation. We are as jealous of that reputation as a good woman is of her good name. Business and professional success are merely results. The causes are behind the scenes. And that is the reason for this little story of the Davey organization.

JOHN DAVEY
Father of Tree Surgery.
John Davey gave to the world the science of Tree Surgery. Before the publication of his first book, the original "Tree Doctor," not even the idea of the scientific treatment of trees existed. John Davey created the term "Tree Surgery." Every fundamental principle of it was the product of his genius and love. Every improvement and refinement has been worked out in the organization which he brought into being and inspired. But the greatest contribution which John Davey has made to the world, has been to translate into popular form the fact that the tree is a living, breathing organism.

MARTIN L. DAVEY
General Manager, who made of a father's dream a business reality and built the Davey organization.
"And yet the tree lives—it breathes. It has a real circulation. The tree digests its food and assimilates it. It has sexual processes that are just as real and beautiful as in any other form of life. It has the power to adapt itself to its environment. To be sure, it lacks intelligence and a nervous system and the power of locomotion. But in all the other elemental processes the tree functions just as truly as man himself."
"This question of reforestation is of monumental importance. America can not continue to exist as a virile, forward-moving Nation unless we protect what we have and start to build up that which we have so ruthlessly destroyed. We can not afford to be a Nation of vandals much longer. America must reforest, or America must drink the bitter dregs of national decline and impotency."—Excerpts from a speech in Congress, March 3, 1921, by Martin L. Davey, of Ohio.

DAVEY TREE SURGEONS

Every real Davey Tree Surgeon is in the employ of The Davey Tree Expert Co., Inc., and the public is cautioned against those falsely representing themselves. An agreement made with the Davey Company and not with an individual is certain evidence of genuineness. Protect yourself from impostors. If anyone solicits the care of your trees who is not directly in our employ, and claims to be a Davey man, write Headquarters for his record. Save yourself from loss and your trees from harm.

A Million Dollar Business in Saving Trees

By Martin L. Davey, General Manager

THE business of The Davey Tree Expert Company is now running at the rate of one million dollars for 1922. It has taken more than twenty years of steady building to reach this volume. The Davey Company sells nothing but service—the service of carefully selected, highly trained, scientifically educated Tree Surgeons, who save trees without guessing or experiment, when they can be saved. This service is available almost everywhere in the eastern half of the United States. Nearly fifteen thousand clients have been served up to this time, many of them regularly.

Lieut. Colonel Frank K. Hyatt, treasurer of the Pennsylvania Military Academy, in a letter written to The Davey Tree Expert Company, December 2, 1921, said:

"Three of your men are performing tree surgery at the college and while I had only engaged them for two days, their work was of such character that I was compelled to hold them longer. In fact, they will probably be with us four or five days."

"They seem to have thorough knowledge of their work and the foreman in charge is a very unusual man. It gives me pleasure to congratulate you on the character of work which your employees are doing."

This letter is typical of many hundreds of voluntary letters of commendation received by the Davey Company from its clients. They come regularly from every section served by Davey Tree Surgeons. It is significant that nearly every letter emphasizes the high-type men, their apparent skill and ability to do their work with accuracy and thoroughness and speed, but more particularly the fact that they are diligent and zealous workers.

The evolution of Davey Tree Surgery compared to the automobile

I do not presume to say that every last client is 100% satisfied. That would be too much to expect from a human organization. But more than 95% of the clients are fully pleased with both the work and the service. Nor would I claim that the Davey organization has always been as good as it is today, nor that the methods employed have always been as remarkably good and successful as they are now.

Davey Tree Surgery has been before the public nearly as long as the automobile, and its development has been almost parallel. You will easily recall the automobile of fifteen or twenty years ago. You recall how often it broke down, how many times it was laid up by the roadside? You remember its imperfect mechanism, its poor lighting, the hard job of cranking? Well, the fundamental principles of the automobile were the same then as now. The wonderful advance has been made in the refinements and the mechanical improvements. Then think of the really marvelous piece of machinery that you buy in the modern automobile!

Just so with Davey Tree Surgery. The fundamental principles were the same fifteen or twenty years ago as today. It was then relatively crude and imperfect. But honest effort and a determined purpose have produced refinements and mechanical improvements and scientific accuracy that are both marvelous and inspiring.

Only two or three men out of a hundred applicants are finally accepted

However, it is the human element of the Davey organization that I wish to describe. The high-type men, their surprising efficiency, their zeal and skill and knowledge are the result of something back behind. That something is a policy that could produce no other result.

From time to time we need additional men. We run advertisements in the cities within a reasonable distance of our headquarters, giving our specifications. Many replies are received. An information blank is sent to each applicant, in which he must give his life history. If a hundred information blanks are returned, our experience has shown that not more than fifty seem to meet our requirements. The others are cast aside.

We then send our representatives to these cities and notify the fifty to report at a certain hotel for personal interviews. Out of the fifty men thus interviewed, we select not more than five who seem to be the right kind.

A regular training field where practical training is given to every man

These five are brought in to Kent (Ohio) for practical training, where we maintain a regular training field. These five are put through a thorough course of practical training for several weeks, at the end of which we select not more than two or three as qualified and made of the right stuff.

Thus, out of an original hundred definite applicants, we get not more than two or three. The process of selection, though it is severe, works wonders and gives us unusual men for the very important work which we do.

Those who finally pass are sent out into the field, always under the direction of master Tree Surgeons. They simply grow into the work and acquire almost intuitive skill.

A chief expert travels regularly from squad to squad

Then, we have a chief expert who spends all of his time traveling from squad to squad to check up on all the details of the work and the merit of each individual—to see that our high standard is consistently maintained. Occasionally he tells us that a certain man is not our kind and should not be in the Davey organization. That man is promptly dismissed. Very often he tells us that certain men are doing especially fine work and recommends advancement. Such men are promptly advanced.

So the really good men remain with us—and they like their jobs mighty well. Naturally enough, they give superior service.

Constant supervision by local representatives

In addition to this, a number of squads are under the constant supervision of each local representative, of whom we have nearly thirty whose highest self-interest requires watchful care of the interests of each client, to see that he gets the maximum service.

More than this, we require periodic reports on every man in our field force. Our local representatives give detailed monthly reports on the foremen under their supervision. Each foreman gives a monthly report in great detail concerning each man in his squad. Every bit of information from every source about each individual goes into his personal service record. And every one knows that his service record is complete and strives to keep it good.

The only place in the world where the science of Tree Surgery is taught

When a man in the field force has reached a proper state of development, he is brought into Kent to attend our resident school. This course covers two years—four months each year. We maintain a regular school with complete library and laboratory equipment and a corps of instructors with fine scientific training from various colleges and universities, plus special training in the Davey organization. There is no other school in the world that teaches Tree Surgery, so we maintain the Davey Institute of Tree Surgery as a matter of practical necessity. In this school we teach only those things required to make real Tree Surgeons—nothing superfluous or unnecessary. The course includes Botany and Dendrology, Pathology and Entomology, Soils and the Feeding of Trees, Spraying and Fruit-growing, and above all the Theory and Practice of Tree Surgery.

Every man in the Davey organization is a trained man—Davey trained

When a man has been with us long enough, has had the necessary amount of complete training, and has demonstrated to us his ability and qualifications, he is entrusted with the handling of operations—then and only then.

"Do it right or not at all."—JOHN DAVEY

Every man in the Davey organization is a trained man—Davey trained. If a man should apply to us for employment and say that he is an expert and understands all phases of the work—recommends himself highly—we say to him, if we should happen to need men, "All right, you may start in at the bottom and show us." Very few of them ever come and we are just as well satisfied. Our experience has shown us that not more than one in ten of these so-called tree men from the outside is the right kind of man. None of them are real experts when they come to us. All of them have many things to unlearn.

The Davey Research Department does the experimenting—the client's trees are never experimented upon

In addition to all these other things, we maintain a Research Department in charge of scientists of practical experience. It is their duty to work out every scientific and practical problem of Tree Surgery, as fast as possible. They have done wonderful work. They gather data from every available source, particularly from the experience of the Davey organization, in addition to original experiments. Every experiment is conducted in Kent by our Research Department and never on the trees of a client.

For instance, our Research Department has worked out a list of "forbidden trees," those which experience has demonstrated are not worth complete treatment or do not respond properly to treatment. On these trees our experts are permitted to do only first-aid work.

A national organization that carries with it an assured protection to tree owners

There is no other national organization in our field. There are, of course, many local imitators. It is an unfortunate fact that there are mighty few good ones among them. We would be happy if they were all good and well qualified. But who will supervise them? Who will train them? Who will provide the discipline that will hold them to high-quality service? Who will pass judgment on the results of their work?

There are quite a number, who have never had any contact with the Davey organization, who claim falsely that they are Davey men. There are some, unfortunately, whom we have been obliged to let go for obvious faults, who attempt to capitalize on the prestige of the Davey name, to our detriment and to that of the profession we have built up and have endeavored to honor.

The unseen things that make quality are only possible because of large volume

In the Davey organization it is the unseen things (rigid selection of men, practical and thorough training, supervision of chief expert and local representatives, resident school, research department, standardization of methods and organization discipline) that make real quality and lasting merit. On a business of nearly three-quarters of a million dollars in 1920, we spent three times as much on these unseen things which make quality as we made in profit. In spite of the depression, we did a business of almost six hundred thousand in 1921 and spent four times as much on these hidden things that make quality as our profit amounted to. The business of the Davey Company is now running at the rate of one million dollars for 1922.

Davey methods have been standardized. Davey work is the same in Boston as it is in Chicago, the same in New York as in Kansas City, the same in Montreal as in New Orleans. Davey experts are of uniformly high type, all thoroughly trained, all carefully selected and developed. And best of all is organization discipline that requires and maintains a constant high standard down to the smallest details of work and service.

A tree-man may fool the public but he cannot fool us

It has seemed to me that the greatest thing the Davey organization does for its clients, over and above all these other things, is that of relieving the client of all worry and responsibility in the selection of the men who are to treat his priceless trees. A tree-man may fool the public, most of whom know little about trees. But he cannot fool us. A man must be right in every sense of the word or he cannot go very far in the Davey organization.

We, who know Tree Surgery values, select the men to whom this work of very great importance is to be entrusted. We know they are right and worthy of your confidence and our confidence or we would not send them to you. They come to you with our seal of approval.

They carry with them the most priceless possession we have—our reputation. We are as jealous of that reputation as a good woman is of her good name. Business and professional success are merely results. The causes are behind the scenes. And that is the reason for this little story of the Davey organization.

JOHN DAVEY
Father of Tree Surgery.
John Davey gave to the world the science of Tree Surgery. Before the publication of his first book, the original "Tree Doctor," not even the idea of the scientific treatment of trees existed. John Davey created the term "Tree Surgery." Every fundamental principle of it was the product of his genius and love. Every improvement and refinement has been worked out in the organization which he brought into being and inspired. But the greatest contribution which John Davey has made to the world, has been to translate into popular form the fact that the tree is a living, breathing organism.

MARTIN L. DAVEY
General Manager, who made of a father's dream a business reality and built the Davey organization.

"And yet the tree lives—it breathes. It has a real circulation. The tree digests its food and assimilates it. It has sexual processes that are just as real and beautiful as in any other form of life. It has the power to adapt itself to its environment. To be sure, it lacks intelligence and a nervous system and the power of locomotion. But in all the other elemental processes the tree functions just as truly as man himself."

"This question of reforestation is of monumental importance. America can not continue to exist as a virile, forward-moving Nation unless we protect what we have and start to build up that which we have so ruthlessly destroyed. We can not afford to be a Nation of vandals much longer. America must reforest, or America must drink the bitter dregs of national decline and impotency."—Excerpts from a speech in Congress, March 3, 1921, by Martin L. Davey, of Ohio.

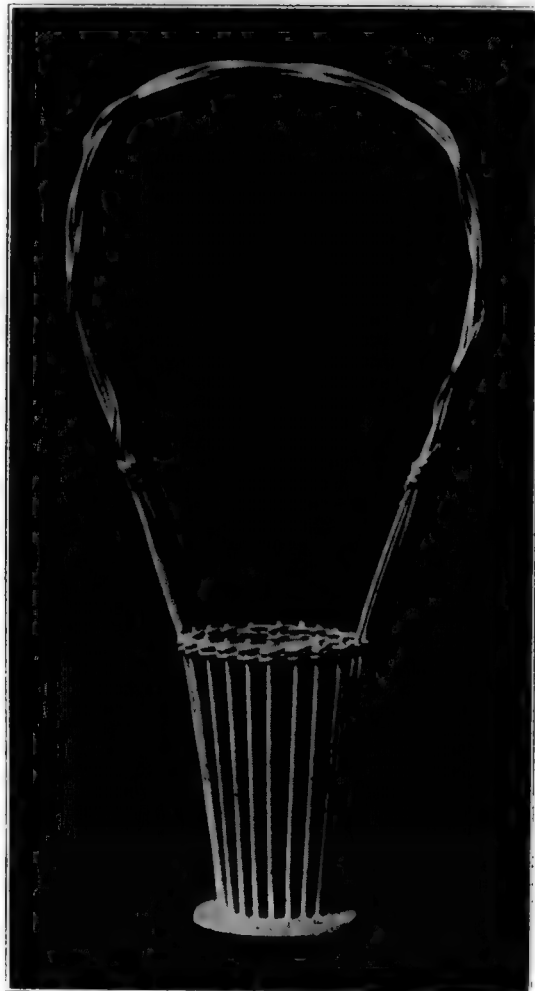

DAVEY TREE SURGEONS

Every real Davey Tree Surgeon is in the employ of The Davey Tree Expert Co., Inc., and the public is cautioned against those falsely representing themselves. An agreement made with the Davey Company and not with an individual is certain evidence of genuineness. Protect yourself from impostors. If anyone solicits the care of your trees who is not directly in our employ, and claims to be a Davey man, write Headquarters for his record. Save yourself from loss and your trees from harm.

OIL AS FUEL FOR FLORISTS

Greenhouse owners make constant inquiry as to the progress made in heating greenhouses with oil. What has been accomplished to this end at a large rose range near Chicago, and at a small place on the outskirts of the city, will be instructive to those interested.

PROXIMITY to the Chicago market and fertility of the soil in that locality make Niles Center, Ill., an excellent site for greenhouse ranges. A number of them are found in this little village and among them one of the foremost is the range of Stielow Bros. This range consists of about 150,000 square feet of ground covered with glass, having been doubled this summer by the erection of seven houses by the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co. It is devoted to the growing of Columbia and Premier roses exclusively, with the exception of two houses of carnations. The outstanding feature of interest at this range is its heating system, which is one of the forerunners in the departure from the old way of heating with coal. This range uses oil entirely for heating purposes. The system, the Crane, has been in operation for over a year and has proved itself so satisfactory that Fred Stielow goes so far as to say that he would never care to go back to the use of coal.

Boilers Converted.

The boilers at the Stielow range were formerly used with coal as fuel, but they were easily converted to the use of oil. The only changes necessary were the removing of the grates and the building up of the ash pit with brick, allowing enough space in the ash pit for the draft, and the relining of the fire boxes with fire brick, which was then coated with Plibrico. The oil lines are led into the burners inside the boilers through holes in the fire doors, with the oil and steam adjusting valves just outside these doors. Compressed air may be used, as well as steam, for mixing the oil. By using the steam from the boilers, it is found that a small saving is effected in the use of fuel. If steam is used as an atomizer on hot water boilers, a small boiler must be provided to generate the steam. There are, however, other ways of getting around this difficulty, referred to later in this article.

The equipment necessary to convert a system which is already in use, so that it may burn oil instead of coal, is, first, a tank in which to store the fuel, preferably under ground, as this eliminates the necessity of pumping the fuel from the cars—gravity doing the work. Fuel tanks may be constructed of steel or concrete; the cost of either will depend upon the cost of the materials and labor at the place of construction. At the Stielow range there are two fuel tanks, a short distance from the greenhouses. One of these tanks is made of concrete buried under ground, with a capacity of 120,000 gallons of oil. The system, when in full operation, requires approximately 1,200 gallons of oil a day. From this it will be seen that the concrete tank's capacity is equal to a 100 days' supply. But a 100 days' supply of fuel does not allow the owner much choice as a buyer of oil; that is, he will not always be able to bide his time and make his fuel purchases when oil has reached its rock-bottom price. It was, therefore, deemed a wise investment by the owners of this range to purchase an additional and larger tank. This second tank is of steel construction, cylindrical in shape, above ground, and has a capacity of 500,000 gallons of oil. Although the capacity of the steel tank is a little more than four times as great as that of the concrete tank, there is not a great deal of difference in the cost of the construction of the two—due, of course, to the fact that the price of steel dropped greatly just before the latter tank was purchased. It will readily be seen that the combined capacity of the two tanks is 620,000 gallons. At the rate per day mentioned above, these would give the owner a supply of oil equal to 516 days, or approximately a year and a half, which would permit him to buy fuel at his own pleasure and also insure himself against a shortage. The problem of tank construction is an economic one, and reduces itself to the range of the cost of materials and labor at the particular time it is desired to build.

Fuel Tank.

There are certain practical features in the construction of these tanks which must be taken into consideration. In the case of the steel tank above ground, when the oil has reached the level of the car from which the tank is being filled, it will have to be pumped into the tank as more cars are unloaded; then, too, the steel tank must be painted every year or so, in order to prevent oxidation getting in its nefarious work, while, with the concrete tank once in the ground, there is no more to be done.

Steam coils are necessary near the openings of the tanks through which the pump draws its supply of fuel. No additional steam is required for this purpose, however, as the exhaust from the pump which draws the oil can be turned into these coils when needed. At the Stielow range the cars of oil are switched onto the premises by the railroad company and are unloaded immediately into the tanks from the cars, doing away with the necessity of providing a tank wagon or truck. This, of course, would not be possible where the range is located any distance from the railroad.

The amount of pipe required to transfer the oil from the supply tank to the boilers will depend upon the distance between the two points. Two lines of pipe will be needed, one for the steam with which to heat the coils in cold weather and one for the fuel supply line. It is also important to remember in constructing a tank that a vent should be provided in the top (in the case of the underground tank it should protrude high enough in the air to prevent dust and dirt from entering) to allow any gases which might possibly arise from the oil to escape into the air, thus avoiding danger of an explosion.

Atomizing the Oil.

In the boiler room or the receiving end of the fuel line, the apparatus necessary consists of two steam pumps (one for use and the other as an auxiliary), an oil cleaner, with a strainer in the pipes on either side of it, a steam pressure reducer, and the burners inside the fire box of the boiler. The oil is pumped from the fuel tank in the yard to the water filterer, where it passes first through one of the strainers, then through the water in the filterer and out into the line leading to the burner in the boiler, while the surplus oil is returned to the tank through an overflow provided for this purpose. The oil lines and pumps are shown in the illustrations of the Stielow boiler room accompanying this article. The oil is put under the pressure of the steam just before it enters the boiler. The steam pressure reducer spoken of above is necessary, because the steam pressure ordinarily carried on the boilers is about eighty pounds and the pressure of the oil when it enters the boiler should be between thirty and thirty-five. The reducer, as well as the other parts of the equipment, are exceedingly simple in construction and require little or no attention after being once properly adjusted to suit requirements.

Air as an Atomizer.

A similar oil heating system is in operation at the range of the Grant Floral Co., 1401 Austin avenue, Cicero, Ill., on the southwest border of Chicago. It works on the same principle as that at the Stielow range, but it is set up for the purpose of heating a range of about 7,000 feet of glass. The installation here was made by the Combustion Co., manufacturers of combustion fuel oil burners, Chicago. In this system the fuel tank has a capacity of 3,000 gallons of oil, and the owner finds it necessary to refill this tank approximately four times a year. In addition to the fuel tank, there is a second tank in the basement of the boiler room into which the oil is pumped from the storage tank. This tank is known as the pressure tank and it is here that the oil is put under pressure. In this system air is used instead of steam as the atomizing agent, and the pressure on the tank is maintained by means of an air pump driven by an electric motor. This system is controlled automatically, being equipped with a thermostatic control. The pilot light on the boiler is fed by a connection to the city gas main. Mr. Grant finds that the great advantage of the oil heating system over coal is that with oil a more even heat can be maintained, to say nothing of the saving of labor and the freedom from dirt. He says that, as far as a saving in fuel is concerned, there is little, if any, over coal, but he would not care to go back to the use of coal again.

Steam as Atomizer.

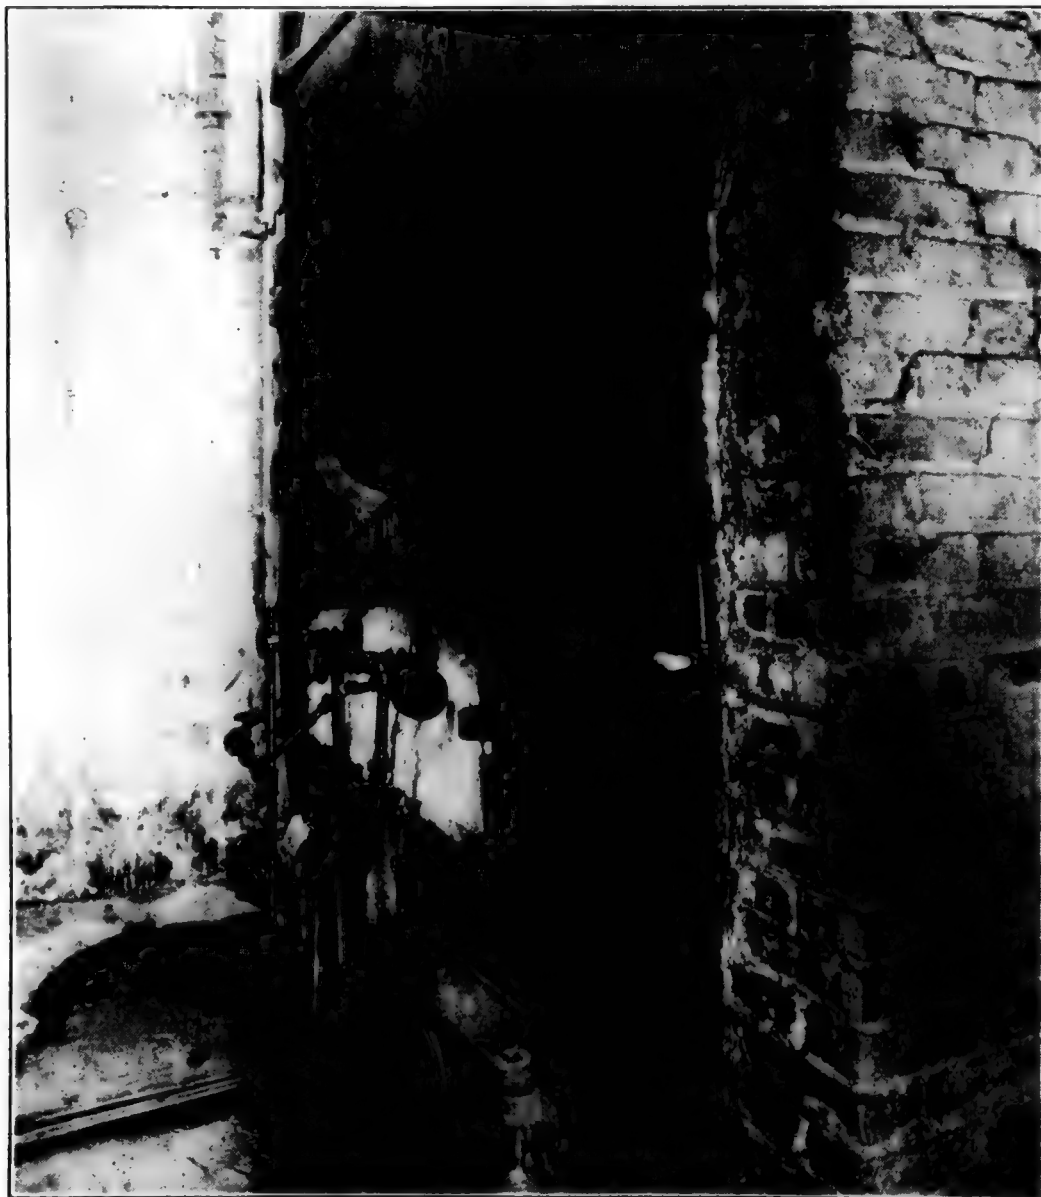

Where steam is used as the atomizing agent, the oil is heated by the steam before it reaches the fire box, thus producing not only a more complete, but also a more rapid combustion, and creating a greater intensity of heat in the fire box. For this reason, where it is possible, it would be preferable to use steam, as at the Stielow range.

The amount of steam and oil required can easily be determined by a glance into the fire box when the fire is started. The oil, with some steam, is first turned on and the vapor thus produced is ignited. More steam is then turned on until the flame ceases to smoke. If thick, black clouds of smoke issue from the flame, this is an indication that combustion is only partial and the amount of oil should be reduced or the amount of steam increased. About one hour is required to get up steam when the boiler is cold, according to the experience of both Mr. Stielow and Mr. Grant.

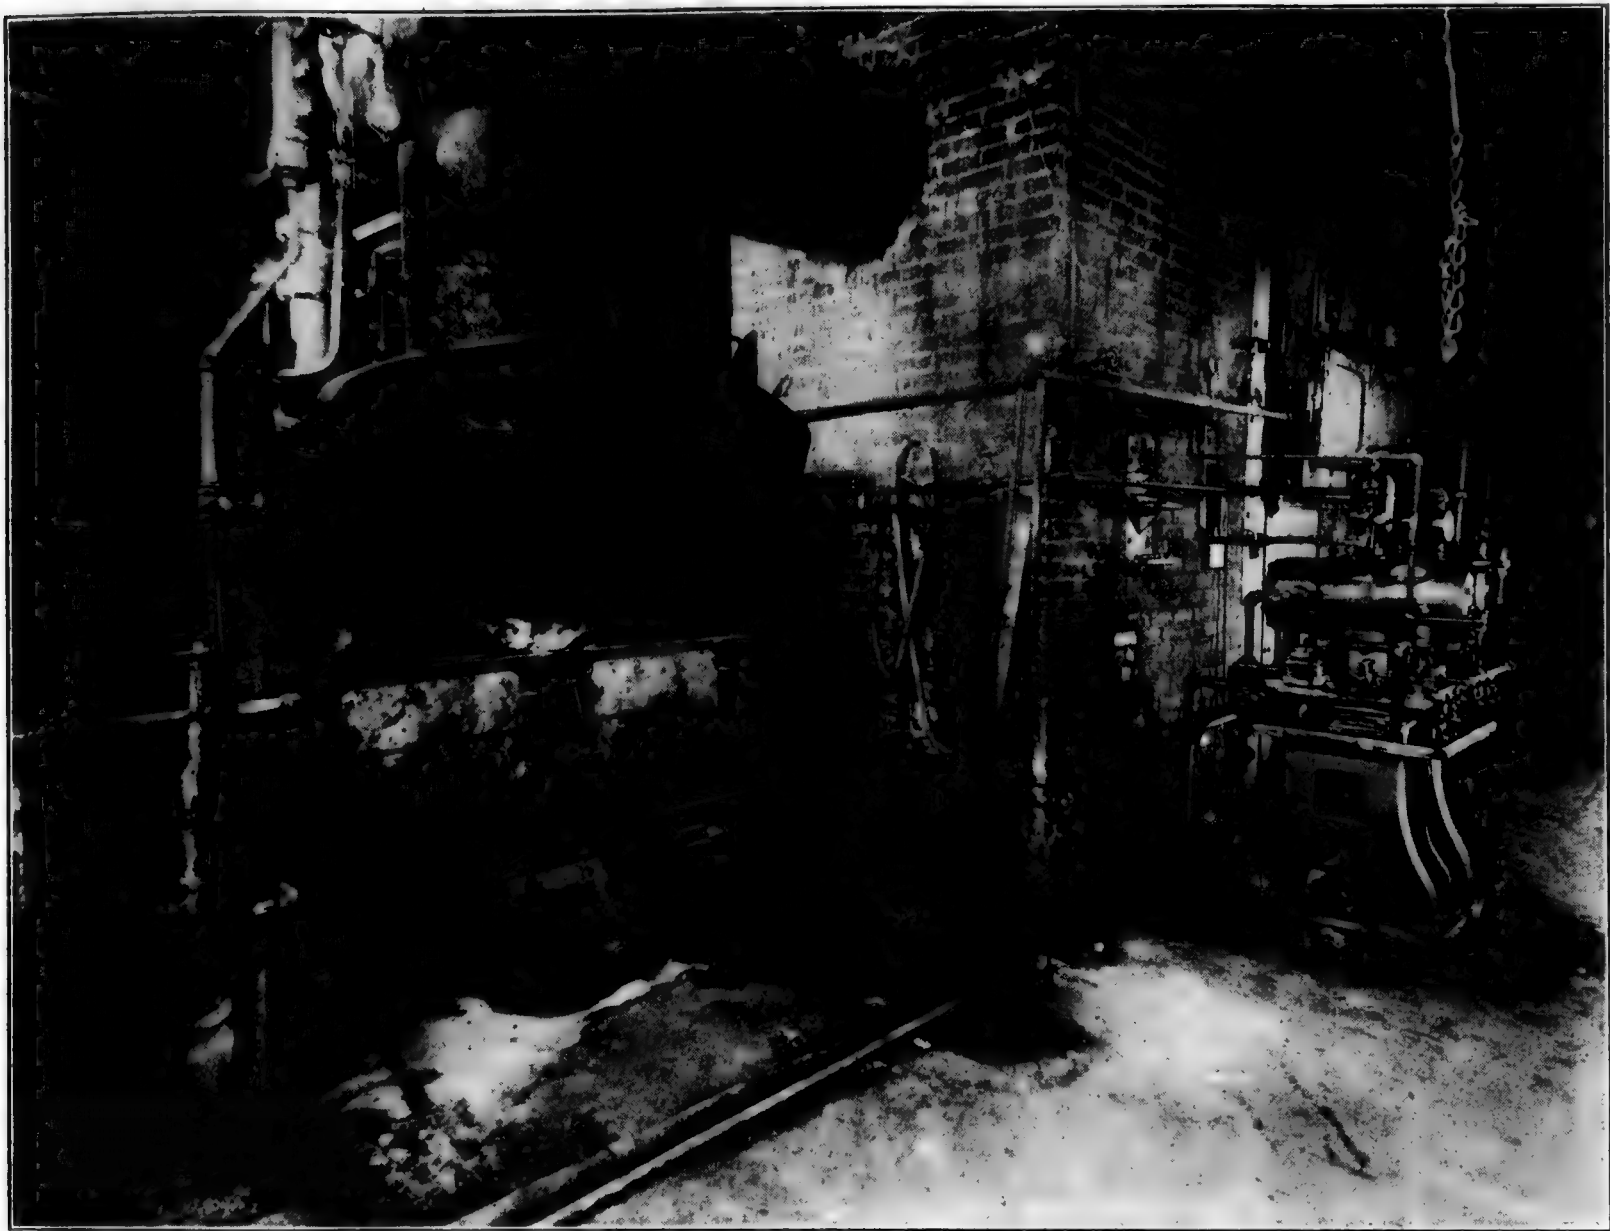

Oil vs. Coal.

The advantages of burning oil instead of coal for a heating plant, aside from cost, outweigh the disadvantages. In the first place, a more even heat is obtained with oil and there is no dirt or soot around the place. There is no coal to shovel from the cars and to wheel into the boiler room. There are no ashes to remove, which was a considerable item in itself at the Stielow range. Mr. Stielow stated that it had been necessary formerly to employ a team one week each month to haul away the ashes from the boilers.

The actual cost of operating an oil burning system, and whether or not it will be cheaper than coal, will depend upon the location of the range to be heated and also the price at which oil can be secured. If a range is in the proximity of soft coal mines, where the freight becomes negligible, it will undoubtedly be cheaper to heat with coal. The item of freight is the biggest factor in determining the comparative cost. One may be able to purchase oil in Oklahoma or Texas at the rate of 1 cent per gallon and then be required to pay a freight rate of almost 3 cents per gallon to get it where he wants it. On the other hand, if storage space is ample, oil can be purchased in the open market and advantage taken of price fluctuations. This cannot be done so well with coal, because the quantity that can be stored with safety is limited.

Oil Burners Installed in Old Boiler at Range of Grant Floral Co.

The fluctuations in the price of oil are not seasonal. They are governed entirely by the supply and demand. For instance, a great deal of crude oil may be produced at the wells and the demand may be such that much of this oil has to be stored. In this way there would be a large supply created and the price would go down in consequence. On the other hand, however, the fact that crude oil is being stored would indicate a supply on hand, which in turn would induce purchases. Under these circumstances the price of the crude oil would go up in consequence of the increased demand.

Weighing Advantages.

It must be borne in mind, in discussing the relative advantages of coal and oil heating systems, that the former is established and fully tried, while the latter requires some experimenting before fullest satisfaction is reached. For this reason greenhouse owners, who cannot afford risking their crops in winter, are slow to adopt oil heating. But in the instances where the experiment has been undertaken, as in the cases of Stielow Bros. and the Grant Floral Co., the owners appear strongly against returning to coal.

CHIFFONS NOT AFFECTED.

William F. Gude, Washington representative of the S. A. F., has been looking into the matter of the tariff rates on florists' chiffon.

"I have been given to understand," states Mr. Gude, "that the rates provided in the McCumber-Fordney tariff bill on cotton goods will not be reflected at all in the price of chiffons for use in the florists' stores. As a general thing prices on domestic goods advanced to the extent of the tariff protection given them by Congress. That means higher prices must be paid by the consumers for these goods. However, I have been assured by experts attached to the Senate finance committee that in the case of florists' chiffon, cotton goods rates will have no effect on prices.

"A revolt has made its appearance in the Senate among the Republicans, who have felt that the tariff rates in many instances are far too high. There is the complaint that the rates adopted on metal goods, for instance, are indefensible. Scissors, shears, lawn mowers, knives, corsage pins and wire all come under the metals schedule of the tariff bill, and in each case the rates of duty of the present Underwood-Simmons law are advanced away beyond recognition. These are matters of direct interest to the florists, because they are commodities which they use in large quantities. I have an idea that before the tariff bill is enacted into law, however, many of the rates of duty on the commodities that the florists use will be cut materially. The Senate leaders expect that the bill will be passed by the Senate about August 15." T. N. S.

NEW YORK GLADIOLUS SHOW.

The annual gladiolus exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York, in cooperation with the New York Botanical Garden, will be held in the Museum building, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx park, New York, August 19 and 20, 1922.

The prize list for this year has been much enlarged and will include prizes for almost any variety of exhibits. Special prizes have been offered for both the ordinary and the primulinus types; for displays arranged for effect, for dinner table decorations, vases, baskets, etc. Garden clubs are especially invited to compete and will have classes open only to them.

Luncheon will be served to all exhibitors, and every facility placed at their disposal. Those who are unable to come in person may send their exhibits by express prepaid to the museum, where they will be taken care of and staged. The schedule of prizes is now ready, and may be had on application to the secretary of the exhibition committee, Mrs. George V. Nash, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx park, New York city.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Portland, Ore.—L. Strauss, who has been in business in one of the public markets during the last year, has filed papers in bankruptcy.

Kansas City, Mo.—The Pinehurst Floral Co., Pleasant Hill, Mo., was adjudged bankrupt in the United States District court for western Missouri July 8, and George A. Neal, referee, has given notice to creditors of a meeting to be held July 31, at 10 a. m., at room 300, Fidelity Trust building, in this city, when claims may be proved, a trustee appointed, the bankrupt examined and other business transacted.

Des Moines, Ia.—Lorenz T. Chrisman, who has been operating as Chrisman the Florist, was adjudicated bankrupt, July 13, in the United States District court of the southern district of Iowa. Creditors have been notified that their first meeting will be held at the office of Frank J. Comfort, referee in bankruptcy, at the Federal building, Des Moines, July 27, at 2 p. m. At that time the creditors may prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt and transact other business.

LONDON FIRM'S OUTING.

The annual summer outing of the West Floral Co., London, Ont., on Dominion day, was held this year at Port Talbot, Ont., this being the second time this place has been selected. Port Talbot is situated on the northern shore of Lake Erie, a dozen miles west of Port Stanley. Though quite picturesque and offering many natural advantages for a long or short visit, it is not well known and, not being served by a railway, is seldom crowded.

Promptly at 9 a. m. the picnickers crowded into the automobiles provided by their hosts. A pleasant 2-hour run through a beautiful countryside brought them to their destination; the cars were parked on what was formerly the parade ground of the fort. The buildings formerly used as officers' quarters and offices are still standing and brought to the imagination the times at which they were built, when deer and bears roamed the dense forests, which still crown the hills, and when the Indians ranged far and free, hunting and fishing and fighting.

Dinner, lavishly supplied by the hosts, was served alfresco at noon and thoroughly enjoyed by all. The afternoon was spent in doing as nearly absolutely nothing as could be accomplished, and in this even the ladies more than excelled all former records.

The day was delightful, quite hot but with a lavish breeze and enough clouds to temper the sun's rays, and no rain fell, although heavy showers were noted close by. After supper, the drive home was leisurely made in the cool of the evening.

NAMING A FUCHSIA.

For four years I have been growing a fuchsia. It is a trailing fuchsia; its stem and veins are red; its flowers are red and the bell is a purplish red, as is shown by the specimen I have sent. It flowers more freely than any other fuchsia I have ever seen. Will you inform me as to whether there is any such fuchsia on the market?

F. C. A.—Mich.

The flowers came badly burned, but they seem to resemble closely a trailing fuchsia named Trailing Queen. This makes a splendid basket plant for use on piazzas, porches or pergolas, where the plants can have a moderate amount of shade. Baskets of wire are best. They should be lined with moss and filled with rich soil. Plenty of water is necessary; if properly cared for, fuchsias will flower continuously from early June until frost.

BEGONIA SOCOTRANA.

Several subscribers having asked where they can obtain plants of Begonia socotrana, the following, from J. A. Peterson, Westwood, Cincinnati, O., is published as a matter of general information:

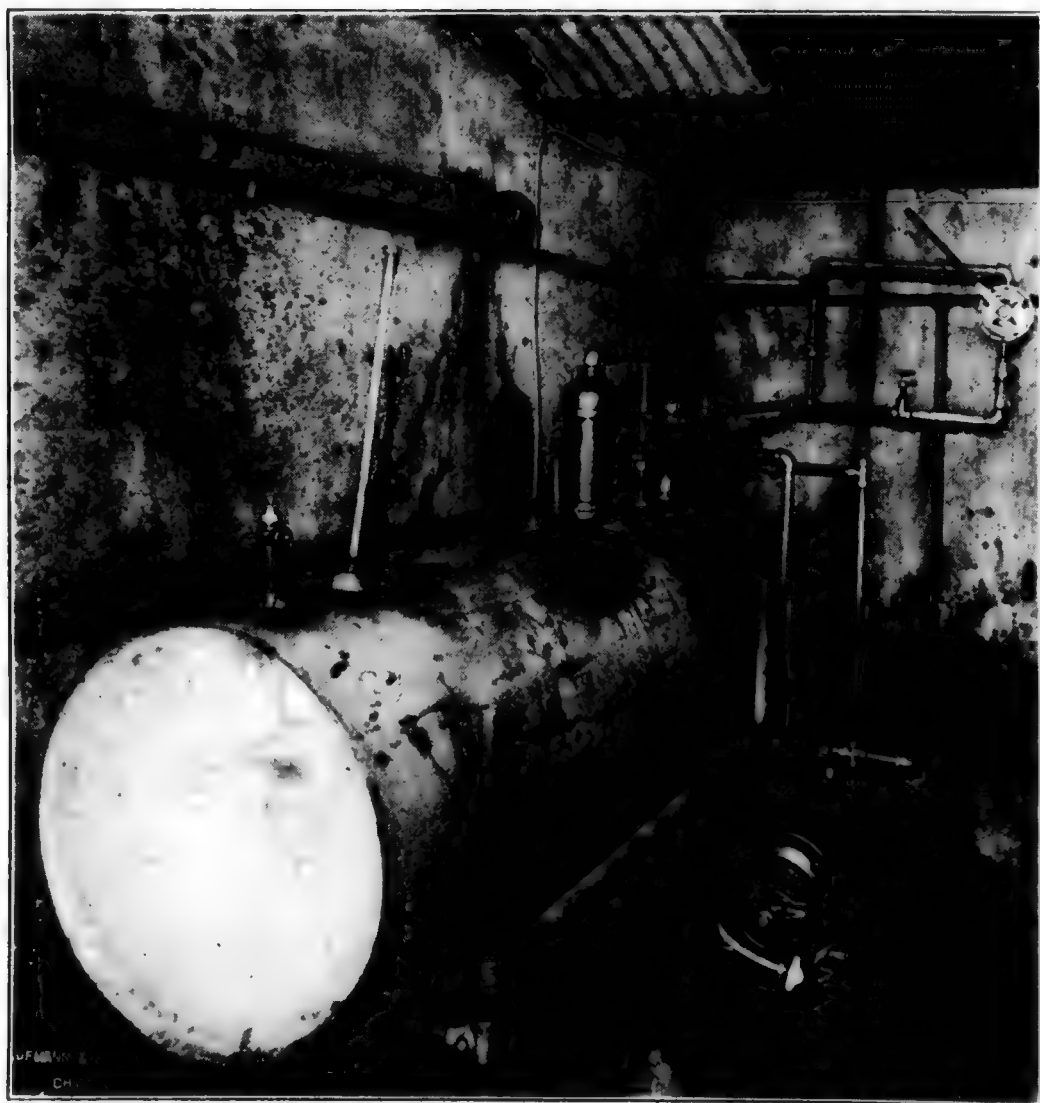

"I do not know of anyone having the species except ourselves. We can supply, next November or December, 4-inch plants, at $2 each. We have only a limited quantity. This begonia will not grow except late in the autumn. It will bloom in January."

THE LIST ISN'T LONG ENOUGH.

"Where do the florists come in?" Paul Weiss inquires, apropos of the list of fifty leading advertisers in thirty-six publications in 1921, compiled by the Curtis Publishing Co. and spread on the records by Printers' Ink. Here they are, together with the amounts of their investment:

ROSE CHAFERS.

I am sending you a few bugs that are destroying the rose foliage and other shrubbery in the cemetery. Would like to know of some remedy as soon as possible.
E. A. B.—Mich.

The box contained a number of rose chafers, commonly called rose bugs. A special article on these appeared on page 89 of The Review for June 15, which please peruse carefully. These destructive insects have a marked partiality for white flowers and are especially harmful to white roses, white peonies, hydrangeas, tree lilac, Syringa japonica and grape vine foliage, but also attacks some other plants. While they can be killed by poison sprays, the use of arsenate of lead makes foliage white for a long period, and the rose bugs will leave the poisoned part and attack any of the new, unsprayed portion or opening flowers, rendering additional spraying necessary. I should suggest that you get a can of Melrosine, a comparatively new preparation on the market, which I find kills all rose bugs which it hits and disfigures foliage hardly at all. If you cannot readily procure this, I would spray with arsenate of lead, although it will somewhat disfigure foliage more or less.

TEMPERATURES FOR ROSES.

Can roses be made to bloom in a night perature of 50 degrees at night and 65 grees during the day? Will the garden varieties be more apt to do so than the varieties generally used for forcing?
M. P. F. C.—Wash.

Roses can be made to bloom in a temperature of 50 degrees at nights and 65 degrees during the day, but the plants will not throw nearly so many flowers, though what flowers are produced will be of a much finer quality than those produced in a higher temperature. The reason that the average rose grower holds his house at 58 degrees to 60 degrees at night and 75 degrees during the day is to keep the plants alive and active and producing at all times to their utmost capacity. Whether the superior crop produced will bring a sufficiently enhanced price to offset the difference, I am not in a position to determine. Of course the overhead charges on growing the plants in this cooler atmosphere will be considerably less, as every degree over 50 degrees means additional coal. Varieties that should do well under the cooler conditions would be Ophelia, flesh color; Columbia, bright pink; Hoosier Beauty, red, and Angelus, white. Some of the finest roses I have ever seen were Hoosier Beauty grown in a cool house, somewhat on the order of your idea.

ON OUTDOOR ROSES.

What is the best remedy for red spider and mildew on outdoor roses?
M. P. G.—Ind.

For red spider, a force of water well directed through a spray nozzle from the hose is the best remedy.

PLANTING FOR NEXT SEASON.

Time to Transfer.

July and August are the months favored by most carnation growers for transferring their carnations from the field to the benches. In fact, the earlier they are transferred in that period the better, think the expert growers of the divine flower. Occasionally we hear of a case of unusual success with plants lifted as late as September. That success, however, is along the line of small loss in reestablishment and in heavy crops, but seldom in superfine quality. We have never, to our knowledge, seen blooms cut from September-planted stock exhibited at our American Carnation Society exhibition in January. The argument that you do not need top-grade carnations in your trade, that the shorter-stemmed blooms will answer your purpose and that if you can save a month's care inside and cut a lot of blooms you are better off, does not hold good. You need the best carnation blooms you are able to grow. Furthermore, you owe it to the carnation to grow it to the top grade and thereby increase the public's estimation of the flower. A great deal of injury has been done the carnation in recent years by the marketing of inferior stock, the result of careless growing and marketing. The same is true of keeping the old plants in the benches and cutting inferior, sleepy blooms from them. There is no beauty and little value in them. It would be better to get the beds cleared

For mildew, flowers of sulphur blown on the affected parts, preferably early in the morning when there is a little dew on the plants, will act as a deterrent. You can also spray with Bordeaux mixture, Sulco V. B. and other proprietary fungoid remedies. Cold nights following hot days will cause mildew, as will also artificial watering at night.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Registration.

The following rose has been offered for registration by the Stuppy Floral Co., St. Joseph, Mo., and passed upon by the registration committee of the American Rose Society.

Annie Laurie: Class, hybrid tea; parentage, sport of Ophelia, grown under close observation since 1918; habit, vigorous and good; character of foliage, good and not susceptible to spot or mildew; freedom of growth, branching erect with good stem; flower, almost perfectly erect and on a good neck; color, flesh pink with gold base, looks good in bud as well as open flower; petalage, firm and lasting, nearly double Ophelia, runs from forty-one to fifty-six. It is a free bloomer with lasting qualities and a wonderful keeper, with practically no blind wood. It develops well in the winter, making a large rose.

If no objection to such registration is filed with the secretary of the society within three weeks after this publication, the registration will become permanent.
John C. Wister, Sec'y.

at once and get the young plants benched early enough to give them a chance to produce blooms that will be a credit to you.

Beds or Benches?

It makes little difference whether carnations are grown on raised benches or solid beds. High-grade stock can be and is grown on both. We grow all our carnations on solid beds, but I would not tear out a good raised bench to replace it with one of the other type. At the time when the bench needs rebuilding will be the proper time to do that. Each season we see growers changing from one type to the other, thinking to eliminate the trouble or failure they have experienced with the type in use. In most instances a proper diagnosis would disclose the fact that the type of bench was not at all responsible for the failure. We growers are pretty much like sheep. We are prone to imitate and to follow the methods of those who have shown unusual success. To adopt the methods of those who are achieving success is good policy, provided we inform ourselves thoroughly on the real causes of the success. Frequently we find these causes are not in the more noticeable differences between their methods and ours, but rather in the apparently minor matters in culture. The grower who is able to anticipate the wants of his plants will always fare better than the grower who does not see the need until the plants begin to show suffering. The grower who can see trouble in the offing has a chance to ward it off, which brings us to the old saw, "An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure."

Proper Soil.

Did you prepare the soil you intend to use for filling your carnation beds? If you did not, you have eliminated one of the chief factors in the production of high-grade stock. Do not make the mistake of using the old soil over again. Many growers made that mistake to their sorrow during the war period, when help was scarce and it seemed impossible to get the beds re-filled with new soil. We have heard of a few instances where it seems to have been done successfully, but in each case it was done by an expert, who knew how to handle the situation in such a manner as to avoid the dangers involved.

Before filling your benches, be sure they are in good repair to last through the coming season. Spread an inch of long stable manure on the bottom and fill in four inches of soil. When handling the soil be sure to break up all the lumps. If the soil is deficient in humus and you have some well rotted cattle or stable manure, run it through dry in spots, wet it with the hose and allow it to stand until it is right for planting. We prefer to have the soil in the same state of moisture as we use for potting and we do not hesitate to delay a day or two to get it into that condition.

Of course you gave the whole house a good cleaning while it was empty. If the benches are raised, you cleaned out from under them everything in the way of weeds, trash or old soil that may have gathered during the last season. A liberal sprinkling of slaked lime will help to sweeten things and prevent a foul atmosphere later on, when you spray frequently to maintain a moist atmosphere. Leaf-spot and fairy ring are not so apt to start in a house that was thoroughly cleaned. A. F. J. Baur.

cago, and the Gilson Mfg. Co., Port Washington, Wis.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., made a stirring talk about the F. T. D. A temporary district association of the F. T. D. was organized and officers were elected—the first instance of this kind in the United States. C. O. Boston was elected president of the temporary association.

Interesting Papers.

Robert Behle, of Muskogee, Okla., read a paper on his experience in growing greenhouse roses in Oklahoma, and Eugene Woerz, Ardmore, Okla., read one on carnations. Both of these papers drew much discussion.

A lively discussion came about concerning whether or not it is right for wholesale dealers to sell at cut prices to department stores.

When the ballots for officers had been counted, it was found that A. S. Gray, of Chickasha, was re-elected president. Percy Cowan, of Enid, will be vice-president for the ensuing year and Lon Foster, of Oklahoma City, will be secretary and treasurer another term.

The next meeting of the association will be held at Enid, Okla.

CAMELLIA SEED WANTED.

Please inform me where I can get seed of Camellia japonica. Can it be grown without heat, outdoors or in coldframes? What is the best method and time of sowing? N. R.—Del.

Possibly some southern readers of The Review can advise where camellia seed may be secured. Will someone do so?

In your state it is doubtful if they can be grown outdoors at all. A cold greenhouse would be necessary. Coldframes would be valuable in which to plant out young stock under lath screens. Winter or early spring is the best time to sow camellia seed. C. W.

PLANTING GYPSOPHILA.

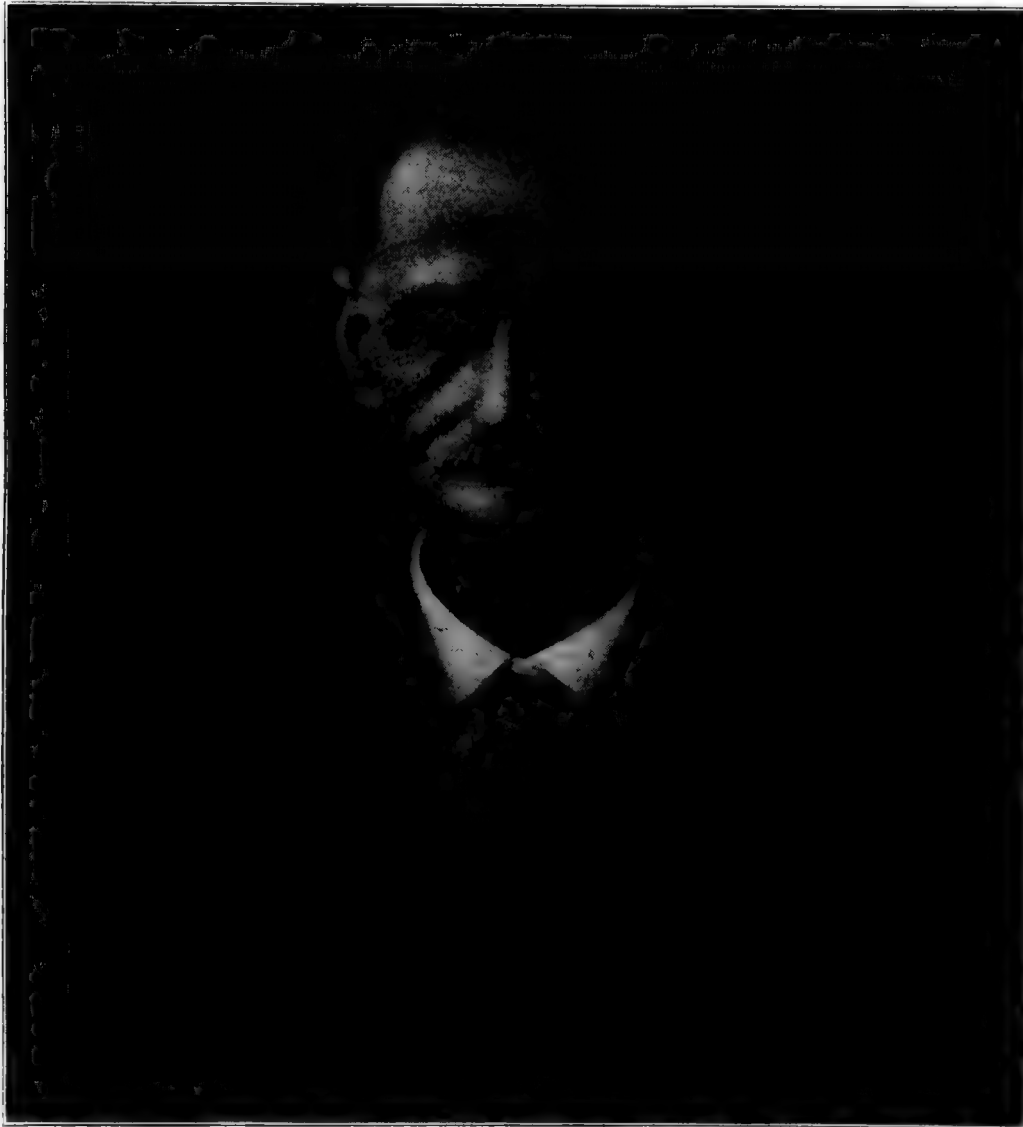

Will you tell us when to plant seed of gypsophila, Shasta daisies, etc.?

D. B.—Ind.

Seeds of Gypsophila paniculata, the hardy baby's breath, can be started indoors in February or March and planted out early in May. Seed can be sown now and the seedlings will be of a fair size before fall, but they would be better if carried over winter in a coldframe. If you had sown even as late as the end of May, you could have had good-sized clumps before winter. By purchasing seed of so-called double gypsophila, you can secure a fair proportion of double flowers and double gypsophila sells much better than single in the wholesale markets. The annual baby's breath, G. elegans, can still be sown outdoors for a late batch.

Shasta daisies can be sown now, preferably in a coldframe. They germinate quickly and should be pricked off as soon as they are large enough to handle; if they are again set out in a bed or in nursery rows, there is still time to get fair-sized plants this season; these will bloom next year.

You can at present sow foxgloves, Canterbury bells, delphinium in all varieties, lupines, lychnis, sweet williams and wallflowers, and toward the end of the month, pansies, bedding violets, myosotis and double daisies. C. W.

a shredder and spread half an inch over the soil, chopping it in with a rake. This will prevent the soil from baking and forming a crust after watering and will help the plants to get off to a good start. The shredded cattle manure offered by the fertilizer companies will answer the same purpose. If the soil is too dry for planting or is

ESSENTIALS IN SOILS

PREPARING GREENHOUSE SOILS.

Physical Condition Tells.

In preparing our greenhouse soils we must keep in mind the fact that both the physical structure and the chemical composition of the soil are important. I have pointed out on former occasions that good results cannot be obtained from a soil abundantly supplied with plant food materials, but faulty in physical structure; and, likewise, that we cannot hope for the best growth of plants in a soil in good physical condition, but deficient in those materials which the plant requires for food. The latter fact is evident to every grower, for, whenever he finds that his plants respond indifferently, he resorts to the application of materials which increase the food supply of the plant. The importance of the former, however—the proper physical structure of soil—is less evident and frequently this is not emphasized as it should be. We must keep in mind that it is only on soils which possess the proper physical conditions that the greatest benefit from the application of fertilizers is obtained. The best use of a fertilizer—that is, the largest proportionate return—is obtained when it is applied to a soil that is well managed from the standpoint of its physical condition.

When Is Soil Healthy?

What, then, are the proper physical conditions of soils for the growth of plants? Unfortunately, we cannot be definite on this point, because of the great variations of soils and the variations of the different types of plants in their requirements. When we classify a soil as a sandy soil we have in mind a soil consisting of coarse individual particles and, consequently, porous in character, but the so-called sandy soils vary much in their mechanical and physical properties. Clay soils also are classified as a group, but again clay soils differ widely in their physical qualities. Some of them possess a reasonably good texture; others, although they were abundantly supplied with all the necessary mineral constituents, will not produce profitable crops, because certain other necessary conditions do not prevail.

When we consider carefully the essentials of a soil from the standpoint of its physical make-up, we find that a number of fundamental conditions must be fulfilled. Briefly expressed, the roots of the growing plant require, first, a continuous supply of water; second, a continuous supply of air, and third, an available supply of chemical substances. I consider these three the fundamental conditions of greenhouse soils. What must be the physical character of the soil to obtain them?

Water a Requisite.

In order that the plant may have a continuous supply of water, the soil, because of its physical character, must not only completely absorb and retain the water, but at the same time deliver this water to the roots as needed. The small roots take up water continuously, for there is a continuous stream of water passing through the plant. A break in Paper on "Preparing Greenhouse Soils," read before the meeting of the St. Louis district of the National Flower Growers' Association at Rock Island, Ill., July 18, by Dr. P. A. Lehenbauer, of the University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill.

this continuous stream of water in all probability results in a break of the growth processes and, therefore, is a check to the plant. If this is true, then the question may be asked: Why not keep the soil wet at all times? The answer is, because the roots also require a continuous supply of air. Oxygen is as essential for respiration in the cells of the roots, as it is for the cells of the leaf. If the soil is full of water, or if the soil is clayey and compact, air cannot penetrate freely and, consequently, the roots cannot function properly. There are, of course, other unfavorable conditions which obtain in a soil which is of such a character that it remains wet. The formation of the essential soluble nitrates

Many florists, no doubt, have learned by years of practice how to improve their greenhouse soils by proper mixture of compost and addition of fertilizers, without knowing just why they achieved their results. This paper regarding the fundamental conditions of greenhouse soils and how they are obtained explains the principles which guide good practice, helpful knowledge to experienced and inexperienced growers alike.

by means of bacteria will not result and instead substances quite probably are formed which are harmful.

A good soil, then, as to physical character, is one which is sufficiently open and porous so that water and air can move through it freely, yet compact enough to retard undue drying out. Mechanically it should be such that roots can readily penetrate it and it should have a texture which will permit the absorption of food materials applied as well as the gradual distribution of the latter throughout its mass by the diffusion of the water through it. How are we, then, to treat the soil in order that it will meet these physical requirements? I appreciate the fact that the grower is limited as a rule to the use of a certain type of soil; namely, that which exists on his holdings. This soil may be faulty physically; if it is, the grower must find a method of treatment which will make the soil a better soil from the standpoint of its physical qualities.

If the soil is too compact, which may be the case if much clay is present, the incorporation of natural manures will improve this physical defect. The vegetable matter contained in natural manures has a tendency to separate the fine particles, thus making the soil more open and porous. Adding sand to a soil which is too compact will serve in a similar way. A number of other materials as substitutes for the natural manures have been tested and some of them, no doubt, are useful in this respect, if the natural manures are not available. Sphagnum moss and clover hay cut to a degree of fineness have been tried and, although on the whole less valuable than the natural manures, these and other similar substances have a desirable effect on the physical structure of soils. One of the best means to improve soils physically is the method of plowing under green crops. Any form of crop may be used for this purpose, the kind of crop depending largely upon the habit of growth of the crop and also upon the time most convenient for turning it under. The crop should be plowed under while it is still in the green, succulent stage.

Manures and Substitutes.

If the soil is too light and porous, as is often the case with sandy soils, a similar treatment will improve the soil physically. The natural manures will change a soil too porous to one more compact and more retentive of moisture. This is one of the important functions of both the natural manures and the green manures. Aside from their value in furnishing plant food materials or in aiding in the improvement of those already contained in the soil, their value in making the soil better physically for the growth of plants cannot be too greatly emphasized. The farmer is beginning to appreciate this fact and the practice of growing the clovers and the various types of beans and other forms of plants and plowing them under is becoming more and more evident as we travel through our state. This practice improves the soil from the standpoint of its nitrogen content, it is true, but I wish to emphasize the fact that it also improves its physical qualities. If general farming requires this practice, the growing of crops by intensive culture under glass requires it to a greater degree. When we grow plants for cut flowers we must get the maximum results from food materials applied to the soil and we can succeed in this only when the soil has been properly prepared and the best attention has been given to its physical qualities.

What Fertilizers and Why?

The problem of what fertilizers to apply to our soils, in what form to apply them, and when to apply them also is one which can be answered only in a general way. However, we have some facts and a good deal of data which should serve as a guide in working out this problem.

I have emphasized a liberal use of the natural manures and green manures to improve the soil physically. These materials also improve the soil chemically; that is, they supply chemical substances which the plant requires as food mate-

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS.

A number of amendments to the by-laws of the Society of American Florists have been proposed, to be voted upon at the convention of the organization at Kansas City, August 17. These have chiefly to do with the mechanism of the society, accommodating its official make-up to caring for the increased duties involved in the now large membership and activities.

It is proposed to amend Article II, Section 3, on "Duties of Officers," by adding the following new paragraphs:

The President shall be an ex-officio member of all committees, and he shall have the right to attend and be heard at all meetings of such committees, but, at all such meetings, except in the case of the Executive and Finance Committees, he shall vote only in the case of a tie.

The President shall appoint four Reserve Fund Trustees, consisting of the Treasurer and three Past-presidents, one for one year, one for two years, and one for three years; this Committee shall elect their own Chairman.

This Committee shall, in the intervals between the meetings of the Directors and subject to the general and specific direction of the Society and Directors, have the care and management of the Society's Reserve Funds, and the power to sell, exchange, invest and reinvest the same.

To Article II, Section 3, on "Duties of Officers," will be added a new paragraph:

The President on taking office January 1 shall appoint an Executive Committee, consisting of the President, Vice-president, Ex-president and two Directors, to serve one year. In the intervals between the meetings of the Society and the Board of Directors, this committee shall have charge of the business of the Society, subject to the general and specific directions of the Society and Board of Directors.

Article II, Section 3, "Duties of Officers," will also be changed, as regards paragraph (b) by deleting the lines, "He shall be a resident of the State in which the Annual Meeting is held during his term of office, and shall be the official representative of the Society under the direction of the Executive Board in all preparations for said meeting."

To Article II, Section 1, "Election and Appointment of Officers, Directors, Sub-committees, and Their Duties," will be added:

(c) The Chairman of the Tariff and Legislation Committee shall act and serve as director for and during his term of office as the same appears upon the records of the Society; but if such Chairman shall be already a director, then the Committee of which he is Chairman shall have no further or separate representation upon the Board.

(c) The National Councillor in the Chamber of Commerce of the United States shall act and serve as director for and during his term of office.

In Article II, Section 3, "Duties of Officers," paragraph (d), on "Treasurer's Duties and Powers," will be changed to read:

The Treasurer shall have charge of the funds of the Society and shall deposit same in the name of the Society in such banks or trust companies as the Board of Directors shall direct. He shall pay all bills by check, when same have been approved by the president and secretary, and by the chairman of the committee when committee disbursements are authorized. He shall have in his safekeeping the bonds, deeds, notes and other evidence of property. He shall make all transfers under the direction of the Board of Directors and of the Reserve Fund Trustees, and shall keep a correct record of receipts and disbursements, rendering an account annually to the Society, the same having been duly audited at the preceding meeting of the Board of Directors. He shall give bonds in such amounts as may be directed by the Board of Directors, but in no case less than the amount of funds in his possession at any one time, the expense of furnishing such bond to be assumed by the Society, and he shall receive for his services such salary as may from time to time be allowed by the Society. In the absence or disability of the Treasurer the Directors may appoint a temporary Treasurer, who shall have all the powers and duties of the Treasurer.

PROGRAM, PLANS, HOTELS

It is proposed to change Article VII, "Reserve Funds," to read:

Money accruing from Life Membership Payments shall form a Reserve Fund, together with any other sums which may be voted into it by the Society, the interest of which may be appropriated annually for general or specific purposes.

This fund or any part of it not to be used for any purpose whatever without the approval of a two-thirds vote of the entire Board of Directors and to receive a majority of all votes cast by ballot at the same time as the Annual Election of Officers.

In Article II, Section 4, "Standing Committees and Their Duties," paragraph (d) will be changed in heading from "Finance Committee" to "Budget Committee" and altered in substance to read:

The President assuming office January 1, 1923, shall appoint three members selected from among the elected directors on the Board of Directors, one for one year, one for two years and one for three years, and each next elected president upon taking office shall appoint one such director for three years. The duties of this Committee will be to prepare a budget of annual expenses to be presented to the Board of Directors at its Annual Meeting for approval.

It is proposed to amend Article II, Section 2, "Election and Appointment of Officers, Directors, Etc.," paragraph (a), by removing the word "Secretary" whenever it appears in this paragraph and by adding to Article III, "Government Executive Board," the following:

At this meeting the Secretary for the ensuing year shall be elected. A majority vote of all members present shall be necessary for such election, and a majority vote of all directors shall be required for removal.

The following amendment is offered to Article IV, "Membership," by adding to Section 2:

Any such member dropped from the rolls for non-payment of dues and applying for new membership shall be considered in arrears to the Society for an amount of $10, and no such application shall be considered until such arrearage has been paid.

Article X, "Amendments," shall, it is proposed, be made to read:

The amendments so submitted shall be acted upon by ballot at the annual meeting at the time appointed for the election of officers.

PREPARE FOR S. A. F. VISITORS.

Reports from various committees on S. A. F. convention arrangements were submitted by the chairmen at a noon-day luncheon at the Mid-day Club, Wednesday, July 12. All told of progress and interest on the part of workers. Each chairman is faced squarely with the necessity of carrying out his particular work, as such is held responsible for the task to which he has been assigned. The two noonday meetings held thus far have brought the workers into closer touch with one another. There is a fine spirit of coöperation in planning for the convention. W. L. Rock, general chairman of S. A. F. arrangements, is well pleased with the way work is being handled. Subscriptions were called for at the meeting and more than $1,000 was pledged in less than thirty minutes. This will be used in defraying expenses of the convention. Besides the committee's meeting July 19, there was a meeting of the Florists' Club that night.

John Klaus is preparing a good prize list for the bowling teams which will compete for honors at the convention.

A. Newell, chairman of the hotel reservations committee, is receiving letters from all parts of the country, indicating that there will be a good attendance at the August convention. Mr. Newell is anxious to hear from all prospective delegates and their friends at the earliest possible time, in order to secure reservations.

Mrs. T. A. Moseley, chairman, called a meeting of the women's entertainment committee Saturday, July 15, at the Women's City Club. Plans for the entertainment of women visitors for the S. A. F. convention were discussed. It was decided to give a luncheon and musicale at one of the country clubs at 11:30 the morning of August 15, the opening day of the convention. In order to know how many guests to prepare for, it is requested that all women who intend to be here the first day of the convention send their acceptances for the luncheon as soon as possible to Mrs. T. A. Moseley, 724 Minnesota avenue, Kansas City, Kan. This is necessary in order to make reservations for the luncheon. J. E. K.

Titusville, Pa.—L. J. Rowe has had an exceedingly busy spring. In addition to a heavy run of business in both the wholesale and retail departments, employing fifteen men at the greenhouses besides some help at the store, he has been building two steel-frame greenhouses, one 37x300 and one 39x300. He is looking forward to adding three more such houses as soon as he gets his business organized, as there seems to be no limit to the possible expansion.

Sioux Falls, S. D.—Three new greenhouses will be erected at the range of M. M. Strong, West Sixth street. The range now consists of approximately 20,000 feet of glass, and the three new houses going up will be fifty feet long and will be located on the west of the present property. The addition will give the range about 400 feet more of bench space. It is the intention of the owners to tear out the old greenhouses, substituting new ones as fast as they can.

KANSAS CITY HOTEL RATES.

Here is a list of hotels in Kansas City, Mo., most convenient for visitors who will attend the S. A. F. convention, August 15 to 17. Convention hall is at the corner of Thirteenth and Central streets, the latter just two blocks from Baltimore avenue, on which are a number of leading hotels. Reservations should be sent at once to A. Newell, chairman of the local hotel committee, Eleventh and McGee streets, Kansas City, Mo.

SELF-JUSTIFIED

F. H. B. RECORDS ENDORSEMENTS.

How far the federal horticultural board is from altering its course with regard to quarantine 37 is indicated by a mimeographed statement, occupying forty-two well filled pages, sent out by the chairman, Dr. C. L. Marlatt, under date of June 30, as the "Record of the Endorsement of Quarantine 37." The statements of Dr. Marlatt at Washington, May 15, which led some to believe that minor changes might be made, permitting additional items to be imported, find no echo in the lengthy document just made public. It seems, indeed, that the statement of the chairman of the board before an S. A. F. convention, to the effect that the lid was on to stay until a certain place freezes over, adequately expressed the attitude of the board now as well as then.

The document just issued does not undertake to be an unbiased consideration of the discussion for and against quarantine 37 and regulations enforcing it. Its title indicates as much. The reason for the 42-page manuscript is given in the opening paragraph: "The critics of plant quarantine 37 have given wide publicity to their opposition. The public support of quarantine 37 normally does not appear in evidence, but the misrepresentation that characterizes much of the opposition has stimulated a very emphatic endorsement of the quarantine. It seems only just that this country's wide support should be made a matter of record."

Dr. Marlatt has found in such endorsement a volume and "unanimity" which he believes point plainly to the general approval of this quarantine "by the mass of our people, as well as by the horticultural and other interests directly concerned." He says endorsement has been made "by duly constituted officials of thirty-eight states, with none in opposition; by fourteen national and regional agricultural and horticultural associations; by thirty-six similar state and local associations; and by nearly 200 nurserymen, florists and others."

Fourteen pages of the statement are filled with letters and telegrams from state entomologists and similar officials, giving their views in favor of the quarantine. Eight pages are devoted to excerpts of communications from officers of agricultural organizations, horticultural societies and nurserymen's associations favoring the quarantine. Twelve pages contain a list of individuals whose letters are on file at Washington endorsing quarantine 37. It is ironic that in this list is the name of an eastern publication in this trade which has consistently fought the quarantine, this name being included upon the strength of an extract from an article by a contributor whose identity has never been discovered. An additional list, occupying five pages more, includes others who have written in favor of or otherwise endorsed the quarantine.

The document closes with the text of the report of the "jury" appointed by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to listen to the discussion at the conference held May 15 and to present their judgment as to the quarantine. The text of the report of these three men was published in The Review July 6.

Dr. Marlatt might win for himself more valuable endorsements than those he cites in favor of the quarantine if he gave evidence of a greater attempt at fairness, a quality to be expected in the executive head of a governmental board. He says that "the support of quarantine 37 by horticultural associations is indicated in the record of such action" which he gives and in which he states, "With respect to the florists of the country, J. A. McHutchison, of New York, an importer and broker, representing that he spoke for this group, objected to quarantine 37," etc. The fact that the statement read by Mr. McHutchison was signed by the members of the tariff and legislative committee of the Society of American Florists does not prevent Dr. Marlatt from referring to Mr. McHutchison as "representing that he spoke for this group."

In view of the widespread quotation of the remark, it may be well to give here the exact words of E. G. Hill in the hearing as cited by Dr. Marlatt in rebuttal of Mr. McHutchison: "Let me tell you that seventy per cent of the florists west of the Allegheny mountains are in favor of this quarantine and appreciate its benefits."

While not likely to change the conviction of those opposed to quarantine 37, this 42-page document of Dr. Marlatt will be illuminating to them, showing as it does the steadfast determination of the federal horticultural board to keep the lid on tight and to listen with a more attentive ear to those who speak in its favor than to those who criticize it. Those who have reason to support the quarantine will be assured, by the tone of this document, of its continuance without important modifications, though they may wish, perhaps, that a fairer action was displayed than is evidenced by such a document and by the packing of the "jury" at the recent conference.

RALEIGH, N. C.

NEW TEXAS PRESIDENT.

The membership list of the Texas State Florists' Association has indicated for several years that it was more than a state organization. The convention each July has been a gathering of florists from many states south of the Mason and Dixon line. The efforts of members outside the state of Texas to promote the interests of the organization were given full recognition at this year's meeting, July 7, when James W. Begbie, of Shreveport, La., was elected to the office of president. In that capacity he succeeds a line of distinguished and able Texans. Those who know Mr. Begbie, however, are not doubtful as to his ability to maintain the record set by them.

After traveling for a number of years for one of the biggest seed houses in the country, a New York state firm now no more, Mr. Begbie opened a retail store at Shreveport, a matter of fifteen years or more ago. At 614 Market street he has an exceedingly attractive store, and he has built up an excellent clientele. Mr. Begbie is married and has a son in his early teens. Mr. Begbie's face you may see in the illustration on this page.

LIME-SULPHUR FOR RED SPIDER.

In supplying information about an insecticide for white fly, W. H. Schulz, Jr., an asparagus grower of Auburndale, Fla., wrote in The Review a short time ago: "We use a lime-sulphur spray material here for combating red spider and I have often wondered why it has not been brought into use in greenhouses, as my experience in its use, both on Asparagus plumosus and citrus trees, has proved it more effective than any methods I have seen tried in greenhouses. It can be diluted to such an extent that it will not injure tender foliage. It is quite inexpensive, and one gallon will suffice for two complete sprayings of one acre of ground and clean out a heavy infestation of spider. The basis of the effectiveness of lime-sulphur solution is not as a direct poison, but in drying, it leaves a residue that readily oxidizes and produces sulphurous acid fumes, which destroy the spiders even when these are secluded in protected places."

In answer to a subscriber's inquiry where to obtain the lime-sulphur for use in such a spray with which to kill red spider, Mr. Schulz further writes: "I have inquired of J. Schnarr & Co., Orlando, Fla., which firm has a branch at Winterhaven, Fla., regarding the manner in which the firm puts up this insecticide and the manager of the firm informed me that they can supply this lime-sulphur solution in 1-gallon cans, packed for express shipment, at 50 cents per gallon.

"I use the ordinary 3-gallon spray tank for applying it and find that in using about two-thirds of a cup of the lime-sulphur solution with a tank of water there is but slight danger of injuring the foliage. It is advisable to keep a good pressure on the tank and hold the nozzle up well, so as to let the mist settle on the plants rather than to spray direct. If it is necessary to spray directly into the plants, it will be advisable to weaken the solution, but the solution will still be almost as effective, as it seems to require only a little to destroy the spiders. The plants should be inspected the morning following the spraying, to determine whether or not the spraying was effective. The dead spiders can be seen clinging to the stems and more commonly to the webs.

"I generally use one tank of spray to 3,000 square feet of space and repeat the spraying in ten days, in order to destroy any of the pests that may have hatched since the spraying. I have cleaned up, with two applications of the spray, infestations of red spider which have been much more severe than any I have ever seen in the greenhouses."

LEAF-SPOT ON MUMS.

The leaves of my chrysanthemums dry up without apparent cause. They are free from insects, but some of the leaves are spotted. The soil in which the plants are growing contains a little chicken manure. Can you explain this peculiar circumstance and also prescribe a remedy? K. G.—Ill.

The usual cause of the lower leaves of mum plants dropping is septoria, commonly known as leaf-spot. This is aggravated by weather conditions, such as have prevailed for the last few months—moist, humid weather accompanied by a high temperature. Weather of this kind furnishes an ideal condition for leaf-spot and causes it to increase. The disease usually starts in the center of the bench, where the foliage is crowded, and spreads from there all over the bed. Remove the affected leaves; then use a bellows and dust lime over the beds. This is one of the best methods of checking the spread of leaf-spot.

If the soil has been overenriched, as you seem to think, I would suggest that the plants be kept somewhat on the dry side rather than soaked heavily at any one time. Be sure when dusting the plants with lime that the lime gets on the under side of the foliage; see that the house is dry by nightfall, and that the plants have sufficient air at all times. Given these conditions, there is no reason why the septoria should be troublesome. C. H. T.

OBITUARY

Seitaro Arai.

Cable advice was received July 13 of the death of Seitaro Arai, which occurred on the island of Erabu, Japan, where lily bulbs are produced. Mr. Seitaro, about 65 years of age, was the founder of the well known exporting firm of this name, the offices of which are located in Yokohama, Japan. In addition to large exports to America of Lilium giganteum and other bulbs, the firm likewise carries on a most extensive business along general commercial lines.

Seitaro Arai visited America for the first time in 1917 to urge at Washington modifications of the war regulations which closed America to Japan as a market for lily bulbs. He made many friends during his sojourn in this country. When Mr. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago, visited Japan in 1919, Mr. Arai expressed his kindest recollections of his American trip and a strong desire to pay a visit again to his many friends in this country.

For the last ten years, the business has been carried on by his son, Inoski Arai, Mr. Arai, Sr., devoting his time to his stable of famous horses. Mr. Arai, Jr., has made a signal success of this important business since becoming manager, having extended it from a comparatively small export concern to one of the largest in Japan, the total volume during the war amounting to some ten million dollars per year.

The sympathy of Mr. Arai's many friends here and the American trade in general is extended to the family of this esteemed gentleman.

Peter Clausen.

The founder of the Lake Shore Greenhouses, Albert Lea, Minn., Peter Clausen, passed away Monday evening, July 10, at Selma, Cal., whither he had gone with the hope of finding a climate that would improve his physical condition. Paralysis of a creeping nature, coupled with a general breakdown, are said to be the immediate cause of his death.

The deceased was born in Denmark, April 5, 1850, and came to America in 1869. For a time he followed farming at Rochester, Minn., and then practiced as a carpenter and cabinetmaker at Grand Meadow, Minn. Later he followed the same occupation at Austin, Minn., but returned to Grand Meadow and engaged in the furniture business. In 1878 he went to Albert Lea, where he followed the furniture business and the undertaking profession, until 1884, when he established a greenhouse business on a small scale. The business grew and in 1897 a son, G. A. Clausen, was admitted as a partner.

Mr. Clausen was always foremost in civic improvement. He was a member of the Albert Lea Building & Loan Association and at one time was a member of the city park board of Albert Lea. He had traveled and lectured successfully in the interests of the Danish Lutheran church body. He was widely known as a horticulturist and was president of the Southern Minnesota Horticultural Society. Annually he exhibited at the state horticultural meetings.

The deceased was married in April, 1873, at Grand Meadow, to Mary Christensen, who died in December, 1895, leaving three children: G. A. Clausen, the partner of the deceased; Emma Clausen, the wife of Walter Heegard, of Albert Lea, and Mrs. H. E. Wilkins, of Duluth, Minn. In August, 1897, Mr. Clausen married Mary Jorgensen, and this union resulted in seven children: Agnes, Gerhard, Arthur, Richard, Margaret, Harold and Esther, all of Albert Lea.

Frank J. Ayres.

Frank J. Ayres, a prominent florist and landscape gardener of David City, Neb., died July 9, from heart trouble. Mr. Ayres was born at Galva, Ill., in 1857, but had been a resident of David City, Neb., for forty-two years, operating a greenhouse business for the last sixteen years. He is survived by his widow and three children: John Ayres, of Lincoln, Neb.; Miss Helen Ayres, of Omaha, Neb.; Mrs. R. C. Roper, of David City. Three brothers also survive the deceased: E. A. Ayres, of HAIL AGAIN HITS NEBRASKA.

It is estimated that between five and six thousand dollars' worth of damage was done when a terrific hail storm swept over Pierce county, Nebraska, Saturday, July 15. Hail fell for more than an hour and a half and formed drifts; this was followed by rain storms. Between seventy and eighty acres of the richest farm land in Pierce county was right in the path of the storm. Hundreds of acres of grain were carried away in the swollen creeks. T. E. E.

SELLING WELL.

Young stock of chrysanthemums is selling well this season. Like this:

Please cancel our chrysanthemum ad in The Review at once, as we are completely sold out.—F. W. Heckenkamp, Jr., Quincy, Ill.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

A PAGE OF TIMELY AID AND ADVICE TO GROWERS

VIOLETS IN THE FIELD.

As a rule, violets in the field are looking well this season. It is too soon to whistle, however, as we are by no means clear of the woods. July and August, months of intense heat and often of drought, are hard on violets, and the dreaded red spider often gets in its work then. Keep the soil constantly stirred. Maintain a sharp watch for spider; reddening or yellowing of the leaves must be taken as a bad symptom, and as soon as the pest is discovered, it must be fought if the plants are to be saved. If you have hose connections, use a fine nozzle with an upward spray and give the plants a thorough watering. If you have not hose connections, use a force pump or barrel sprayer, and instead of clear water alone, add a little nicotine sulphate—one part to 600 of water will answer—and add some soap to make the spray more adhesive. This spray will be found equally effective for green or black aphids, lacewing fly, or any of the aphides family.

WINTER-FLOWERING BEGONIAS.

One or two varieties of the winter-flowering begonias are of such easy propagation and simple culture that no novice in the greenhouse business need be afraid to handle them. Chatelaine and Mrs. M. A. Patten, among the fibrous-rooted section of begonias, are most useful to the small grower, for not only are they excellent winter bloomers, but they are equally good used as summer bedding plants. They succeed in a lower temperature than Melior, Cincinnati, Peerless or Mrs. Peterson and need little shade even in the hottest weather. Nicely flowered plants in 5-inch or 6-inch pots or deep pans will sell for nearly as much as Melior and they stand the dry atmosphere of a home better than even that excellent variety. If you have not tried Chatelaine or Patten, buy some young stock now and grow them on for holiday plants.

They enjoy a light but fairly rich soil. Leaf-mold is especially good, and if your loam is heavy, there is all the more need for it. Some sand, also, should always be added. A bench in any greenhouse with just a light shade will suit these useful plants.

Melior has risen far above Glory of Cincinnati as a Thanksgiving and Christmas plant, and, while there is still a moderate call for Cincinnati, Lorraine, Mrs. Peterson and the newer Peerless, it is as nothing compared with the sales of Melior. It is not practicable for small growers to propagate these plants from leaf cuttings. It is far better to buy some young stock to grow on and now is the time to get it under way. Plants do not grow quite so rapidly during the moist, torrid part of the year, but they put on an accelerated rate of development as the nights grow longer and cooler. Plants in 2¼-inch pots are offered by a number of begonia specialists, and, if bought now and well cared for, they will give excellent stock for the holiday sales. Do not shade these begonias too heavily. You may get a deeper color on the leaves by so doing, but the growths will be softer. Do not make a practice of spraying them overhead, or they will soon resent it.

NEPHROLEPIS.

The calls for ferns grow stronger each year, and the varieties of nephrolepis prove to be such satisfactory house plants that but a limited number of other species are grown nowadays. If you want to increase your stock and you have a spare bench, plant it with runners at once. An old house in which carnations, mums or roses would languish will grow fine ferns, and, contrary to general opinion, these ferns do best with but little shade. Adiantums and other species are darker and better in every way with considerable shade, but it is otherwise with nephrolepis. These ferns will grow in ordinary loam, but if you can add a little leaf-mold or old rotted manure, so much the better. When they are growing in good shape, a mulch of fine old manure conserves moisture and improves the plants. The old Boston remains head and shoulders over all others today. The dwarf Boston grows in favor, and Verona, Macawii, Norwood, Whitmanii, Roosevelt, Teddy, Jr., Scottii and some others all have their admirers. Do not grow too many of the densely plumose varieties; they are softer and harder to handle, and a damp atmosphere affects them more quickly.

If they are benched at once, you will get nice plants to pot up for fall sales. You will find that pot-grown plants are much more work and do not make anything like the growth of those in the benches.

FREESIAS.

Freesia bulbs come to hand in July. They are somewhat sparse in crop this season, owing to frosts and unfavorable weather in California, where they are mainly produced. For that reason larger sizes are not abundant. Do not insist on a large, fat bulb when buying; thin bulbs are, on the whole, much better. While July seems early to start bulbs, if you want a batch for Christmas they must be started as soon as possible. Deep pans, sometimes called half pots, are good to use; 8-inch and 10-inch are good sizes. After the bulbs have been placed in soil, a good position for them is in a coldframe. After watering, lay some leaves or hay over them to prevent the soil from drying out and over this covering stand match-board shutters. Look at them occasionally and, as the spikes start to push their way out, remove the mulch and shutters in order to give the plants light. Later in the season these freesias should have a temperature of 50 degrees to 55 degrees at night. A shelf is an ideal place for them. Put saucers below them unless you have sand or coal ashes to stand them on. Purity is much the best freesia. The colored varieties are interesting and varied, but the retailers find the call for them limited as yet; so do not plunge on them too heavily.

JAPANESE AND GERMAN IRIS.

While the bulk of herbaceous perennials succeed best when planted in the early spring or fall, the showy Japanese iris, I. Kaempferi and I. germanica, can be successfully divided and replanted now and from these divisions a satisfactory lot of flowers may be had next season. While the Japanese irises are ordinarily believed to be semi-aquatic in their needs—and it is true that they succeed remarkably well if kept soaked until the flowering period—they make good border plants and give excellent results if planted in nursery rows in good soil. Do not give them a low, wet location; it may be all right in summer, but unless they have comparatively dry "feet" in winter, they will rot out.

The German irises must have well drained soil, and if it is somewhat sandy they will be far less troubled with the rot which destroys so many each year. It is a good plan to lime the land for irises in advance of the planting. Wood ashes are good, as also is burnt earth. These two important sections of the great iris family are showy as garden plants and both are good for cutting. Their ease of culture should recommend them to everyone handling garden plants. Another iris, one of the best for cutting and pure white in color, is I. orientalis Snow Queen; this also can be planted now.

CALCEOLARIAS.

A considerable number of the large, showy, spotted, herbaceous calceolarias are now grown for spring sales. They are not plants for the warmer states, but make an acceptable subject for spring sales, especially for a late Easter. Late July or early August is a suitable time to sow a pinch of seed in a pan in a well-shaded greenhouse. The seed is small and should not have any soil placed over it. A little fine sand may, however, be dusted over it. Careful watering is necessary in the early stages of growth. A plan sometimes adopted is to prepare a pan in the regulation manner and then scatter a little fine, dry sphagnum moss over the surface. Water this with a fine rose and then carefully sow the tiny seeds. Herbaceous calceolarias grow slowly in hot weather, but move apace when the cool nights come. They thrive best in a cool greenhouse in winter; a violet temperature is ample and some shade is necessary.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

It will pay to "doll up" the place. People do not prefer to buy flowers amid dingy surroundings.

WHAT has become of the old-fashioned florist who presented a flower to every visitor to his store?

THE quarantine has shut out some bulbs. Foreign growers will find their high prices will soon shut out more.

SUMMER is nearly gone; only a matter of five weeks and the autumn flower season will open with the schools. Will you be ready?

JULY 19 Albert M. Herr became a sexagenarian. J. A. Peterson, who also celebrates a birthday on that date, did it seven years ago.

LET your customers know you expect them to pay your bills at regular intervals and most of them will soon get the habit. In most cases it is as easy to get the money monthly as it is to collect it quarterly, semiannually or annually—and there must be a due date somewhere.

MOST people are disposed to be accommodating, but experience has taught them it is unwise to cash checks for strangers; and still it is easy for strangers to get money by making a purchase, offering a check in excess of the amount and asking for change in cash. It is perennial; don't fall for it.

WITH steadily increasing overhead expense, the average retail florist cannot afford to let business slump for two months in summer. Some sag may be inevitable while so many regular customers are away on vacation, but to relax in a high rent location means a loss it will take the florist many weeks to recover in the fall.

THE florists' trade has been growing rapidly of late through the large number of new people who have engaged in it and there are indications that this growth will continue. Some of the beginners are those who have served an apprenticeship and know the business, but many are men and women who simply "have flowers," while others, principally retailers, are persons engaged in other business who take on flowers as a side line.

IT is the general belief that half the flowers sold are for funerals, but if it's true it shouldn't be. We should find means of introducing flowers to the daily lives of our neighbors.

FORMER Kewites in this country will be interested to learn that William Watson has retired from the curatorship of Kew gardens, having been succeeded by W. J. Bean, assistant curator since 1900. The latter has a record of eminent service and was awarded the Victoria Medal of Horticulture in 1917.

IN last week's Review it was stated that the federal horticultural board is granting no further permits for the importation of stock of Gladiolus Maiden's Blush, but this is found to be a broader statement than the facts warrant. There are permits outstanding for this season's importation of Maiden's Blush and additional permits have been granted since last week's Review was printed.

REPRESENTATIVES of five insurance companies held an all-day conference in New York last week on the subject of insurance for loss by frost and freezing of citrus fruits in Florida. The matter was deferred for further consideration, but there was some sentiment in favor of such insurance, some of which was written last year by one of the companies. If others decide to write it, a field will be opened up which may ere long be extended to nurserymen, seed growers and florists with outdoor crops.

THE preliminary plant schedule of the tenth annual international flower show, to be held at the Grand Central Palace, New York, March 12 to 17, 1923, indicates that this exhibition will be on the same great scale as its predecessors. The gardens, covering 1,200 square feet, will be the prime feature of the show, and an appropriation of $7,500 has been apportioned for five exhibits in this class. Those planning to exhibit can obtain copies of the schedule from John Young, 43 West Eighteenth street, New York.

GO TO KANSAS CITY.

Reports from members of the trade in Kansas City forecast a large gathering and a decidedly worth-while time at the convention of the S. A. F., to be held there August 15 to 17. On a preceding page is given the program of the convention sessions, on which appear, in addition to the routine business of the society, a number of addresses which should be highly informative to those who hear them. Several are a continuance of discussions begun at preceding conventions. One new topic appears which should be of much interest, a standard system of accounting for florists, which will be the subject of an address by a New York accountant.

The trade display is likely to break records set at preceding conventions of the society, inasmuch as the supply houses and other firms catering to this trade look upon this occasion as an unparalleled opportunity to meet a large number of florists who have not usually attended S. A. F. conventions. The trade in the central west has grown rapidly in numbers in the last few years, and many florists who could not spare the time to travel to an eastern metropolis to a convention will make the short journey to Kansas City. Undoubtedly, many from states farther west will also make the trip, since it is a shorter one than it has been possible for them to make to an S. A. F. convention for several years.

Florists of Kansas City are making thorough preparations for an enjoyable occasion as well as a valuable convention. A large turnout of the trade should reward their efforts. If you haven't done so, plan to get away from home the third week in August and visit Kansas City.

CAN EXPRESS RATES GO DOWN?

There is a nation-wide demand, not only in this trade but in most others, for a reduction in express rates comparable to the recent reduction in freight charges. In this connection it is important to note that the express company's contract with the railroads expires March 1, 1923, and that a new contract has just been negotiated which will increase the railroads' share of the income and practically limit the profits of the express business.

The new contract which replaces the one expiring March 1, 1923, provides that the railroads shall receive eighty-five per cent of the revenue from express business and shall have more voice in determining the expenses to be incurred by the express company in handling this business. Moreover, if the profits of the express company exceed six per cent on its property investment, the excess up to eight per cent shall be divided equally between the company and the carriers, while if the profits exceed eight per cent, seventy-five per cent of the excess over that figure shall go to the railroads.

What effect will this have on express rates? Doesn't it look as though it would tend to keep rates up?

CHICAGO TO KANSAS CITY.

The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad has been chosen for the trip of the Chicago Florists' Club members and friends to the annual convention of the Society of American Florists, to be held at Kansas City, Mo., August 15 to 17. The party will leave the Union station, Canal and Adams streets, at 6 p. m., standard time (7 p. m., Chicago time), Monday, August 14, and will arrive in Kansas City the following morning at 8 o'clock.

The regular one-way fare is $16.54. Pullman fares are: Lower berth, $4.50; upper, $3.60; drawing room, $16.50; compartment, $12.75.

Make reservations early, as a special train will be provided, with all the splendid equipment for which this road is famous, if the size of the party warrants.

For reservations, address S. J. Owens, city passenger agent, C., B. & Q. railroad, 179 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago.

BRIEF ANSWERS.

Central Illinois.—Upon receipt of your name and address, your letter will receive attention. Anonymous communications are not considered.

BOSTON.The Market.

Extreme dullness rules in the flower markets these days. Of course, there is a moderate amount of buying and some shipping trade to holiday resorts, but markets present a more or less deserted appearance and the variety of flowers available is small and the quality only moderate. Fairly comfortable weather has prevailed of late and roses, for mid-July, are of good quality. Columbia is more in evidence than any other variety. Butterfly is coming into favor and Double White Killarney is a good third. The quantity of the varieties seen is not large; $8 to $10 per hundred is now top price for the best stock.

Carnations continue to dribble, but flowers are now getting poor and many have a sleepy appearance. Asters are as yet coming in small lots only and the quality, so far, is rather inferior. Gladioli continue to increase in numbers and are now more in evidence than all other flowers combined. America continues to be the best seller; the high colors, like Halley, are much less popular. Only a few primulinus hybrids are available as yet. Sweet peas are practically nil. Hardy gypsophila sells well, especially the double; much of it is used for drying. The annual variety has meanwhile to take a back seat.

Hardy larkspurs are fewer in numbers and poorer in quality. Candytuft is offered, with few takers. Few giganteum lilies are seen, but small lots of auratum, speciosum and regale are coming in. Bachelor's buttons are rather overdone. Cattleyas are mainly Gaskelliana, with good flowers worth $9 to $12 per dozen. There is a fair call for adiantum and asparagus.

Various Notes.

The principal local event of interest this week is the Gardeners' and Florists' Club picnic, at Cunningham park, East Milton, July 20. The following are the picnic officials: Ringmaster, W. J. Kennedy; starter, Peter M. Miller; handicapper, James Methven; clerk, William N. Craig; umpires for men's and ladies' baseball games, George W. Hamer and Fred E. Palmer; umpire for boys' baseball game, Peter Pederzini; judges, Arthur J. Brown, H. H. Bartsch, George W. Butterworth, Harry Cole, Kenneth Finlayson, Daniel Iliffe, William H. Judd, Thomas W. Little, John Morris, F. E. Palmer, W. C. Rust, Donald B. Sutherland, Gustave Thommen, Daniel Whyte and A. J. Wollrath; general picnic committee, W. H. Judd, George W. Butterworth, Patrick W. Burke, W. H. Golby, A. K. Rogers, H. A. Ryan and J. L. Russell.

On account of the high cost, all idea of securing the cyclorama site, near the Hotel Touraine, for the new flower market has been given up. A thirty days' option has been secured on a good site on Broadway, between Washington street and Harrison avenue. There are 13,000 square feet of space here and excellent parking facilities for automobiles. The cost of the land will be about $180,000 and a building will cost about $150,000 additional. About $120,000 in cash has been secured among growers, with excellent prospects of substantial additional amounts. The proposed site is about five minutes' walk from Park square and from the Essex street station of the Washington street tunnel. At a meeting of growers to be held soon, it is probable that some definite action on the purchase of this site will be taken. At least one other site is favorably thought of, the higher cost being the great stumbling block.

Penn's annual duck farm is now in full operation and seems to have lost none of its attractions for the crowds of passers-by on busy Tremont street. The hotter the day the greater and more interested are the crowds, to whom the babbling brook, waterfall and ducks, splashing to their hearts' delight, seem to make a strong appeal.

Martin Wax has been taking his vacation this year in short relays, owing to Mrs. Wax's sickness with neuritis. He has, however, managed to put in one or two days among the finny tribe in Maine. Wax Bros. have had an extra good season at 44 Temple place.

Misfortunes never come singly. Not long ago Chester Paine met with a painful accident when operating his tractor. He just recovered from that to fall a victim to whooping cough, which now keeps him awake nights.

John McFarland, of North Easton, has dropped poinsettia culture entirely and has his houses now devoted to chrysanthemums, lilies, Asparagus Sprengeri and adiantum. Regular shipments are made of the two latter specialties.

Neal E. Boyle, of Malden, is doing much overhauling and repairing on his greenhouses at present. He grows roses almost exclusively and Columbia, Butterfly and Double White Killarney are his three favorites. He formerly grew Lady Alice Stanley heavily, but has now dropped it, owing to its poor keeping qualities.

Dolansky & McDonald, in Winthrop square, are handling large numbers of Lilium regale, mostly in the bud stage.

The large, attractive store of Thomas F. Galvin, Jr., on Devonshire street, is much improved by numerous fine specimens of red cedars in tubs arranged along the sidewalk close to the windows. Gladioli in variety are the chief window features now.

C. Kerrigan, window decorator, and Fred Maxwell, outside decorator, at Penn's, left July 15 for vacations to be spent in Maine and Canada, each making the trip by automobile. Maurice Clancey, head shipper, is spending his vacation taking short tours through New England.

William J. Thurston, manager at the Boston Flower Exchange, leaves July 22 for a vacation to be spent on Cape Cod, where clams, oysters, cranberries and mosquitoes abound. George A. Hamer, assistant manager, finishes his vacation July 24. He is enjoying making short daily trips from his home in Everett.

Harold A. Ryan and George W. Butterworth will each plant some of the Marinelli carnations this season. Walter H. Golby has grown them for two seasons and will increase his planting of them.

There will be another meeting of the New England members of the National Association of Gardeners, at Horticultural hall, to make further arrangements for the convention, to be held in Boston, September 12 to 15.

Edward J. Rogean, a prominent salesman at the Flower Exchange, has gone down east on a vacation and will include New Brunswick in his itinerary.

In the windows of the stores of T. F. Galvin, Inc., large numbers of fancy caladiums are effectively used; tanks of aquatics look exceedingly cool and inviting these hot days.

Joseph B. Hall resigned all connection with the pottery firm of A. H. Hews & Co., Cambridge, Mass., July 1. New officers of the company are: President, Philip Cabot; vice-president, Lawrence Hemenway; treasurer, Dunbar Lockwood. The new officers are young men, full of virility and enthusiasm and eager to give the best and most courteous service to the florists' trade. Business has been good here of late.

Many growers are now busy housing carnations. Thanks to the abundant rains, the plants are of good size. Some who planted out their stock on low land are having much trouble with stem-rot. W. N. C.

CHICAGO.The Market.

Business last week was nothing requiring the use of superlatives in description. It was just a good, ordinary summer week. Some of the wholesale houses found it better than the corresponding week of last year, but others fell behind, the difference apparently being accounted for by whatever difference there was in the supply of stock in the several houses; the houses which had a good supply of stock last year did not pass last year's record this season.

The Chicago market probably never has had a better supply of summer flowers than is the case this year. A great many rose growers have increased their summer crops. Gladioli never were so plentiful or so fine at this time of year as they are this season. There still are good carnations, and asters, refreshed by last week's rains, are arriving in considerable quantity. There also are fine Easter lilies and rubrums; annual larkspur in a variety of colors is abundant and all garden flowers have been improved in quality and increased in quantity by the recent showers. The market is equipped for business; all that is needed is a little better demand.

The demand is of the usual summer character, a little better than last year if anything. The wholesale houses catering to the shipping trade say they are sending out more boxes this summer than ever before; more buyers are being heard from than in other years, but the average size of the orders is small. One house figured out last week that the average size of the orders had been only slightly more than $10, whereas in the busy season the average size is something like four times as much.

It is apparent that many retailers who practically shut up shop in previous summers are making a little effort to do business this season. They are meeting with success in accordance with the energy and intelligence put into the effort; some are doing much better than others. Most of the wholesalers say the Chicago retailers appear to have relaxed more than the out-of-town retailers have done, but the probability is that it only seems so, because any city buyer can satisfy his whole wants in the first house visited; he only shops for lower prices.

It is noted that the demand is spasmodic; some days there will be excellent business, with a slump right on its heels, and then a revival. It is a typical summer condition, but on the whole this market has nothing of which to complain.

The gladiolus is the dominating flower. There has been a great improvement in it in recent years. The old mixed stock has practically disappeared. The newer varieties are being offered in increased quantity, more carefully cut, carefully bunched and carefully handled. The public likes them. It has been noted that the best selling varieties are the dark pinks; light pink, such as America, just like Enchantress among the carnations, is distinctly slower sale. After the pinks, white is wanted, with red in less request. The novelty colors are popular for window decoration, etc. Probably the best selling variety is Myrtle.

Roses are slightly more plentiful each day, as recently replanted roses come into crop. Short roses are almost a drug on the market, while many houses say they could sell more of the special fancy long grade at the highest quoted prices.

The strikes are beginning to have an effect on the market. At least they are held responsible for the lack of orders from various localities, also for the irregularity in mail delivery which some of the wholesalers are beginning to note. Thus far nothing has been heard of industries closing, either for lack of transportation or for lack of fuel. Coal salesmen are industriously canvassing the trade soliciting orders for immediate delivery or for contracts for the season's supply. In the latter case some of them want to contract at the opening price when mining is resumed.

Everybody Pleased.

Flower Growers' Association held their annual meeting July 15, following the close of the eleventh year of the organization, which ended July 1. The annual report was considered so satisfactory that the directors whose 2-year terms expired were unanimously re-elected. They are George C. Weiland, Rudolph Ellsworth, Charles McCauley, Edward Meuret and Paul R. Klingsporn. The holdover directors are Joseph Schoos, Fred Stielow, Frank Schramm and Fred Schramm.

A meeting of directors was held immediately after the stockholders adjourned, officers being re-elected, as follows: President, George C. Weiland; vice-president, Fred Schramm; secretary, Rudolph Ellsworth; treasurer, Charles McCauley; manager, Paul R. Klingsporn.

Various Notes.

At last week's stockholders' meeting of the Premier Rose Gardens Frank Flasch, the well known chimney builder, took the place on the board of directors "Prosperity," says B. F. Ellis, "is the sum of our individual successes." Practically everybody in the trade in Chicago added something to the community's prosperity last season and nearly all are confident they will be able to do even better in the season of 1922-23.

The Chicago Rose Gardens tried an unusual move last week, advertising Maryland, Montrose and Dunlop roses in a 100-line space in the Daily News, telling the public "there is no need for your florist to substitute, as he can get all he wants at"—with the name of the commission house. J. J. Budlong, who now uses Chicago Rose Gardens as the name of his florists' department, is one of the class making for progress, as he is forever trying something different from the rest. Otto Benthey is the greenhouse superintendent and is turning out excellent summer roses.

That there is money in the florists' business for those who wish to accumulate it, is shown by the announcement that John Fuhrman, 3164 North Clark street, is investing $45,000 in another building project. He has secured a building permit and let contracts for 3-story stores and apartments 50x142 and 50x80 at 3223-25 North Clark street.

H. N. Bruns had an order for funeral flowers to the value of 6,000 marks to deliver in Berlin last week! He cabled at a cost of $21.

Eric Johnson is one of those well satisfied with the summer business. He reports the Randall cut flower sales have made a new high record for July to date. Mr. Johnson says that, while prices are moderate, it seems possible to move larger quantities of flowers than in any previous July.

That the building boom which is creating business activity in Chicago will be of short duration is the opinion of H. Van Gelder. Mr. Van Gelder operated successfully and rather extensively in real estate during the boom which followed the war.

The A. B. C. has formosums afloat on the Pacific and Paper Whites on the Atlantic.

A. J. Zech says he believes the supply of flowers this summer, especially of roses, exceeds all previous records for this market. He thinks growers may find they have increased the summer crops too fast.

Miss Agnes Swanson, of the office staff of A. T. Pyfer & Co., is vacationing at Ephraim, Wis.

John Poehlmann returned last week from a pleasant trip to Atlantic City and other points east. Next day he received delivery of his new Studebaker sedan and says it is the nicest plaything he ever has had.

The three Tonner sisters and their mother are driving to Aberdeen, S. D., where they have relatives, and will be absent for a month. In the interval the sales end of the Tonner business is being well looked after by Harry Arnold and the office is being looked after by Miss Augusta Harper.

After a highly enjoyable six weeks' vacation, C. A. Alles has joined the staff of Peter Reinberg, Inc. He was for many years in the office and store of Wietor Bros.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Herbert F. Youngquist, who conducts the North Shore Flower Shop, on Irving Park boulevard. The wedding took place July 8. His bride was Miss Lorraine Hall. They spent their honeymoon at Twin Lakes, Wis.

P. C. Schupp has returned from his trip to Atlantic City with the Elks. He had a highly enjoyable outing, but says that Chicago never looked better to him than it did on his return.

Mr. Parker and Miss Burkhart, chief assistants to Marshall N. Tyler, in the supplies department of Poehlmann Bros. Co., having returned from their vacations, Mr. Tyler has gone to Detroit, Cleveland, Akron and other places in his old stamping ground.

G. C. Weiland is adding another big house at his range at Niles Center. Asked what he intended to grow in it, he said: "Oh! I've got plenty of things to grow in it, but I'm going to move part of the carnations over from Visitors.

Among recent visitors were Gerald Warren and Mrs. Warren, of Herrin, Ill. They bought a new Randall display refrigerator and other store fixtures, bearing the union label, and were looking for a greenhouse man.

H. Gottshalk, of Milwaukee, was here last week to confer with W. Abrahamson, of the A. L. Randall Co., about the fixtures for the new store he is about to open at 3911 North avenue in that city.

If all Kansas City florists are as enthusiastic as is John Stevens, who was here last week, there is no question of the success of the approaching S. A. F. convention.

One of last week's visitors to Chicago was A. S. Horn, of the Horn Floral Co., Fremont, O. He was gathering information preparatory to starting a new place at Fremont, intending to have four houses ready for business by next spring.

Mr. Retailer,

U. S. A.

Dear Sir:

Subject of wholesalers selling flowers to the consumer has been discussed recently and we are writing you to explain our policy in the future.

We have, after due consideration, decided that we, the KANSAS CITY WHOLESALE CUT FLOWER COMPANY, positively will not accept any orders at any time from any consumer of cut flowers. This includes our FRIENDS and our FRIENDS' FRIENDS, RELATIVES, EMPLOYEES, EMPLOYEES' FRIENDS or RELATIVES, or even our IMMEDIATE FAMILY. This has always been our policy, although in the past we have served our immediate friends and relatives and employees. The practice of doing so has led many retailers to believe that we are catering to the public. We are doing this in order that at no time will we be in a position to sell or deliver flowers to any one excepting those who are purchasing them for resale. Any time in the future if circumstances would suggest that we are selling flowers to a consumer, I will appreciate it if you will bring this matter immediately to my attention and make a thorough investigation. If you will do this it will greatly help me in enforcing the rule that we are going to try and carry out to the letter.

Trusting that this ruling will meet with your approval; wishing to thank you for the patronage you have given me in the past and trusting that we will be able to serve you in the future, we are

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The market is overstocked with flowers. Gladioli and roses are abundant. A good many are sold, but there are entirely too many for the business. Prices are low. There is waste. To turn from these depressing facts to the condition of the supply, asters are more plentiful and some of them are exceedingly nice. Easter lilies are dependable as ever, even in summer. Orchids are cheaper and there is greater variety; to Cattleya Mossiae and C. gigas are added C. Gaskelliana and C. Mendelii. Valley has dropped back in price. There are pretty pink lilies. Everything is plentiful.

Conditions in Germany.

Bernard Eschner, president of the M. Rice Co., and Mrs. Eschner sailed for Europe April 15. They returned to their home, at Elkins Park, July 7. Mr. Eschner, who is looking splendid, talked of his trip in his company's handsome building July 15. He said: "There is nothing to fear from Germany. Those who expect cheap German goods will be disappointed. We can make baskets cheaper and much better here than they can make them over there. The incentive to work in Germany has gone and with it German efficiency. Formerly the Germans worked ten to twelve, even fourteen hours, a day; now they work eight. Their wages are going up, up, up and they make nothing, because they are so heavily taxed to pay the Allies and because the value of the German mark, in which they are paid, is steadily diminishing. They do not care to work. Added to this, raw material is getting more expensive. Their factories are busy, when there are no strikes, but South America and England get their products. Rates of exchange with those countries are more favorable than with us.

"The Germans are making just the same styles of baskets that they were making eight years ago. They are not made so well and they cost a lot more. We have improved vastly in that time.

"We went to see the Passion play, at Oberammergau. We were deeply impressed. It is given every ten years, to commemorate the disappearance of the pestilence there. I could not imagine anyone sitting still for eight solid hours and yet we did it and were thrilled. From 8 a. m. to noon and from 2 p. m. to 6 p. m. we sat with an immense silent throng, spellbound as we gazed over the mountains and listened to that play. It was sublime."

The standing of the baseball clubs is now as follows:

Bickmore	3	0
Bayersdorfer	2	1

Bickmore defeated the Independents, at Lansdowne, in an exceedingly interesting game, by a score of 16 to 8. The Retailers, painfully short-handed, were overwhelmed by Bayersdorfer, at Belmont, 15 to 0. The Craig team were unable to muster their forces and lost 9 to 0 to Niessen, at Belmont. seventh, the score stood at a tie, 8 to 8. By a gentlemen's agreement it was then decided to play one more full inning. Dreer scored four in the eighth, Pennock then declined to bat; score: Dreer, 12; Pennock, 8.

July 13, Thursday, all four games were played at Belmont. Clarence Alwine's victorious team was again triumphant, defeating Pennock, 17 to 7. Craig scored their first point, defeating the Retailers 17 to 5. Dreer went down before Bayersdorfer, 27 to 7. Niessen defeated the Independents, 18 to 17, in an awfully exciting contest that was noteworthy for three things: With a score of 7 to 0 against them at the end of the first inning, the Independents nearly won; not a single decision of the umpire, Martin J. Gannon, was questioned; there was a large attendance of notables. Arthur Peil made a single, a double and two triples.

The Market.

While, of course, summer conditions dominate the market, there are many ready to declare that business is not all to the bad. Arrivals, usually heavy at this season, are not too heavy to admit of clearances, and the ash barrel is not at all overloaded. Possibly this condition is due to the more enterprising florists who believe that there are enough stay-at-homes needing the cheering influence of flowers to make a little business. There are many among the New York trade who do not accept the idea, prevalent for many years, that July and August are dead months in the florists' trade, and many of these may be seen mornings carrying away from the markets bundles fully as big as those they carried during what might be called the affluent months. Much money is spent to boost the slogan,

"Say It with Flowers," and some in the trade show by their buying that they are not believers in a silent tongue during the summer months. And they are right. Much of the poor business complained of at this season is due to the florist's own inactivity.

Roses are not overplentiful, but the quality of arrivals is fairly good and Increase your sales

ONE important detail of your business has an important bearing on increased sales. It is the containers in which cut flowers are displayed. Discriminating florists now use "Fibrotta" Vases. They look like polished mahogany but are inexpensive. Water stays cool in them a long time. They do not chill the water when placed in your refrigerator, since they are non-conductors of heat and cold. Write Cordley & Hayes, 14 Leonard Street, New York, for details.

hybrid teas are in the same boat, with clearances anything but difficult at last week's quotations.

Carnations are, of course, on the short side, but some fairly good flowers are coming in, and the price range for creditable stock is $2 to $5 per hundred. Next week will probably put an end to the offerings, as carnation growers are getting busy with rebenching work.

as $75. A few cypripediums are seen, but, except for purposes more or less collective, they are not in demand.

White lilies are in good supply, and the general run of arrivals clears out at $12 to $15 per hundred. Lilies of the valley are in oversupply; that is, the demand for them is extremely light; consequently, the price range has fallen to 50 cents to $3 per hundred sprays, and a good deal of stock goes to waste. Rubrum lilies are plentiful and are in demand for store display and funeral work, shipments bringing from $2 to $8 per hundred flowers, the latter price for flowers on good stems.

A few sweet peas of good quality are coming in and bring $1 per hundred sprays. Asters are arriving in quantity, the best bringing 50 to 75 cents per bunch, and inferiors down to 10 cents per bunch. Gladiolus shipments are getting heavier, but the price range remains at about $35 to $65 per hundred, varieties such as America and Schwaben running into the top places. Other herbaceous material comprises gypsophila at 15 to 50 cents per bunch, delphiniums, dahlias, candytuft, feverfew, blue lace flowers, snapdragons, coreopsis, gaillardias, phlox, mignonette, myosotis, zinnias, sweet williams, calendulas, marigolds and hydrangeas.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Dallas, Ore.—Mrs. M. A. Conlee is starting in the florists' business here.

San Fernando, Cal.—Alois Frey, originator of the Rainbow freesias, says that the midst of the shipping season finds him completely sold out. The demand exceeds all previous records and in general the freesia crop is light. Mr. Frey says that considering the bad winter freesia growers went through, he thinks his crop turned out fairly well.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

There has been a decided turn for the better in prices on the market, when good stock is considered, and gladioli especially have recovered. Dahlias have not come up to expectations, but a change for the better can be confidently expected. An unusual run of funeral work has kept the retailers fairly busy; in fact, with the depleted forces owing to vacations, everyone has his hands full. Outside of this, there is little out of the way to report and the summer business so far may be said to have been slightly above the average.

Various Notes.

Robert Newcomb, who had been in the city for some time with his baskets and other lines, said that he had a most successful visit. He left last week for San Francisco. He will also visit Kansas City during the S. A. F. convention.

Arthur Gleave, of Gleave's Flower Shop, Santa Barbara, drove down in his Stutz last week. He has had a particularly good season and his vegetables growing under glass have also been a success, despite the earlier frost troubles. Mr. Gleave has just bought another piece of property on the west side of Santa Barbara and may move his greenhouses there.

C. E. and Mrs. Norton, of Phoenix, Ariz., and F. R. and Mrs. Hills started last week on a northern automobile tour. While they had no set program, they intended going north at least as far as Eureka, Cal., and possibly farther. Mr. Norton evidently retains his skill as a driver, having made the trip from Phoenix in less than two days. He intends going on to Kansas City for the convention.

B. Bakker, representing A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, was in this city last week. This is Mr. Bakker's first trip to California, but he seems to have been successful and has made a good impression on the trade here. He left for Texas last week.

F. C. Jaeger, Jr., of San Francisco, was a visitor here last week.

Friends of Walter Garbett, representative of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, will be sorry to learn of his serious illness. He underwent an operation for gallstones at Rochester, Minn. His friend, George J. Hall, of this city, arranged matters so that Mrs. Garbett could leave for her husband's bedside. Mr. Hall and other fellow Elks have seen to it that everything possible was done to relieve the trying situation for Mrs. Garbett.

J. D'Ortignac, of Fresno, is on a visit to the city and is combining business with pleasure. He has a large quantity of local funeral work, which is being made up at the range of George J. Hall & Co. Mr. D'Ortignac says that it feels good to be back in Los Angeles after the heat of the San Joaquin valley.

A visit to the Artesia nurseries found everything in fine shape, Messrs. Gorini and Perotti having their hands full. The plumosus seen here is coming on well after the check given it by the frost earlier in the season, and there will be a fine lot of sprays for the fall trade. The dahlias here have suffered from thrips and red spider, but there are fine blooms coming now.

T. D. Robertson, of Fullerton, Cal., reports a big business at the retail store in funeral work, while nursery and landscape work keep up well.

N. P. Lindberg, proprietor of the Rugby Greenhouse, Rugby, N. D., was also in the city.

Frank Lichtenberg intends to carry out the mission idea still further in his store by changing over some parts of it and introducing some genuine old mission relics, such as benches, a bell and others. The excellent reproduction of mission San Juan Capistrano has caused so much favorable comment that Mr. Lichtenberg is determined to finish it strictly in this way. Business is excellent here.

H. Kruckeberg, who some two or three years ago went into the landscape and florists' business at Santa Monica boulevard, Hollywood, says that he has now some good work and is beginning to reap the benefits of his several years' missionary work.

Fred Westrem, of Westrem Garland Florists, is spending part of his vacation in Washington, where he is visiting his sister, and intends returning by easy stages down the coast and in some places far enough inland for some trout fishing on his way.

F. M. Borden, the well known nurseryman of Riverside, has been in the city buying stock. He says that business has been picking up right along at Riverside and vicinity, and he looks for an exceptionally good season.

Bert Harris, of Oakland, was here last week on a visit and was piloted around by his old friend and co-worker, George J. Hall.

At the store of the E. C. Amling Co. some of the finest asters seen so far this season are being shipped.

The California Floral Co. reports business as much better than usual for July. The more or less quiet season is being taken advantage of to rearrange and redecorate the store.

At the Armacost range the roses are evidently above the average for the summer season and are arriving in good shape at the store. A wire from Mr. Armacost said that he was returning from the Texas convention by way of the Grand Canyon.

The new plantings of heather at the nursery of Roy F. Wilcox & Co. are looking fine and the older plants that suffered from frost are now growing away in good shape again. In the lath houses the palm stock is magnificent, the growth everywhere being perfect. Several more acres of leased land have been added to the nursery and are being rapidly filled with boxwoods and other stock.

At the Superior Dahlia Gardens, Figueroa street, there is a fine show of blooms now in all the popular show, decorative and pompon varieties. The latter are particularly attractive and are money-makers. Sealberg as grown here is a wonder, with immense flowers on stiff, erect stems, and it is a beauty in every way.

The store decorations at Darling's Shop are always attractive and were never more so than now. Manager John Gordon says that business has been exceptionally good and the June just passed was the best in the history of the firm. Mr. Darling has just purchased a new aeroplane, so his interest in high flying is evidently unabated. John Gordon still says, "I'll keep one foot on the ground." H. R. R.

The Market.

There were plenty of dahlias in the market last week. Rubrum lilies, both cut and potted, were bringing good prices. Carnations were still plentiful and some of them were of good quality, but the crop is not expected to remain large much longer. Good roses were scarce and indications pointed to their being even more scarce, as the growers were drying their stock. There were plenty of good gladioli, some of them being especially luxuriant and fine in color. Summer stock was plentiful and good. Sweet peas, while fairly plentiful, were nearing the end of their season. Gardenias were scarce, but there were enough lilies of the valley and orchids to go round.

Various Notes.

Alfred Serveau, of the well known Fillmore street store, has just returned from his honeymoon, which was spent in southern California and in the Grand Canyon. Mr. Serveau was married recently to Mrs. Mildred Gerdes, of this city.

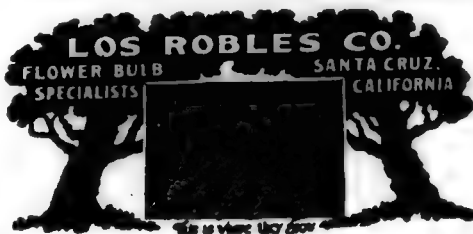

Albert O. Stein has not dismantled the decorations and festive trimmings of his basement, which was especially arranged for the entertainment of the Shriners. Some of the leading men of the florists' trade in this city have been gathering every Friday night in Stein's basement. According to J. A. Axell, Charles Brown, of Brown & Kennedy, Victor Ferrari and others, there are few more enjoyable spots in town than Stein's basement.

C. Kooyman states that business is picking up satisfactorily for this season.

of the year, both the Growers Coöperative Market and the San Francisco Flower Market being almost cleaned up every day.

E. W. McLellan is about to have the Bush street place of business renovated and redecorated. P. D. Mortensen, of the E. W. McLellan Co., states that the firm is now drying its stock of roses, etc. Some stock will arrive in the market early in September and the bulk of it in the middle of November. Some of the houses have been dried early, in order to bring them in early in the fall season.

"There's a great shortage of good roses—so they say," chuckled J. A. Axell. The cause for Mr. Axell's amusement lay in the fact that he was entirely surrounded by banks of Russell, Columbia, Ophelia and Ward roses, piled on tables and benches in his store.

Brown & Kennedy report having been busy in all lines recently. Their telegraph business, according to Charles Brown, has been exceptionally good.

The proceeds of the recent florists' picnic have been set aside as the basis for an entertainment fund, which will be increased from time to time, according to Charles Brown, secretary of the picnic organization.

Fred Howard, of Los Angeles, has been visiting this city on a combined business and pleasure trip.

Ben Bakker, representing A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, is calling on the trade here and reports that business is highly satisfactory with his firm.

Plans have been completed for the second annual California industries exposition, to be held in this city October 7 to 28. Angelo J. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., will again act as president. Last year's exposition contained over 500 manufacturers' exhibits and had an attendance of nearly half a million. There will be more exhibitors this year and an attendance of one million is the mark set. Much of the success was due last year to the efforts of Supervisor Rossi.

Frank Thatcher, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., who has been trout fishing near Eureka, is finishing his vacation in the Yosemite valley. John Young, buyer for Pelicano, Rossi & Co., is spending his vacation in Trinity county, fishing and looking over some mining prospects. Frank D. Pelicano will not take his vacation until after the dahlia show, to be held in September.

Podesta & Baldocchi report having a large number of orders for flowers and floral baskets every time a trans-Pacific liner sails. The staff of this firm is looking for a game with a good bowling team after September 1.

George Wagner, of Joseph's, is preparing to drive to San Diego with his family on an annual vacation. En route they will spend a week with Mr. Wagner's brother at Long Beach, Cal.

The Charles C. Navlet Co. opened the dahlia season with a remarkable window display of its new seedlings, some of the varieties measuring fourteen inches across. Manager Picetti stated: "So great was the public interest in good dahlias that some people came from a long distance to see the exhibit, which created a great stir among dahlia lovers."

F. C. Jaeger, Jr., has returned from his vacation, which was spent on the Russian river and at Los Angeles. "In the southern part of the state," he said, "they had plenty of fine field valley, but the heat has played havoc with most of the stock." In Los Angeles Mr. Jaeger called on the trade and was hospitably received.

Julius Eppstein, the St. Francis hotel florist, has returned from a trip to Santa Cruz. Mrs. Merle Hiam, store manager, said that business has been good recently. "I suppose it is partly because we are in the hotel and people notice the flowers, that they buy," said she. "My experience has been that when business is poor, the bigger display you make, the more flowers you sell. A big mass of dry goods or millinery on display cheapens the merchandise, but this is not true of flowers."

T. Honda, of Enomoto & Co., states that the asters will be in good shape for shipping by the last week in July. They are two weeks late this year, partly owing to the spring having been more severe than usual.

The Growers' Floral Co. now has large stocks of dried gypsophila and helichrysum.

The United Flower & Supply Co. is busy filling its orders for dried straw-flowers.

Domoto Bros. are cutting good crops of rubrum lilies. This firm specializes in lily crops. M. M.

The Market.

Business activities last week were fair for the time of year. Occasionally a heavy run of funeral work comes along and stock is cleared fairly well. Gladioli are arriving, but are none too plentiful; they are of good quality.

Ferns are becoming plentiful and are of good quality. Outdoor flowers are scarce and are rather poor on account of the hot weather we have had the last month. Carnations are still in the benches with young carnation stock. This firm has a fine lot of young plants outside, which will come in handy in the next week or two. They are exchanging many benches of roses at Hillsboro to young stock. A large field of asters and gladioli is coming along well.

Wallace Garside, manager of the Clarke Bros. store, is on his vacation this month. Mr. Garside enjoys a good stream and, no doubt, he will have his fish story to tell on his return.

S. Pomeroy returned from his vacation the other day and since became the happy father of a 9-pound boy.

A. Longmire, with the Wilson-Crout-Gehr Co. for the last three years, is preparing to leave for California the latter part of the month.

From all reports, the Holden Floral Co. intends to open a flower store, near Broadway and Morrison street, within a few days.

L. Straus, engaged in business for the last year in one of the public markets, failed in business a few days ago and filed a petition in bankruptcy.

N. V. H.

TORONTO, ONT.

Business last week was rather slack, though there was a steady demand for design work and there have been a few weddings. There is a good supply of garden flowers and these are selling well. Though the sales are small, in the aggregate they make a considerable total.

J. H. Dunlop has gone to Port Arthur.

The Ontario Gladiolus Society will hold its annual show at Alma College, St. Thomas, August 23 and 24.

R. Wilson has been added to the staff of Charles Cooper, King street. Mr. Cooper has redecorated his store.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Association of Ontario will hold its annual picnic at the estate of Lady Eaton, at Eversley, August 16. Cars will leave on the Metropolitan at 10 a. m. P. L. Whytock, superintendent of the estate, has made arrangements for the picnic. This will give the visitors an opportunity to view the landscape gardening that has been carried on at this beautiful place.

Mr. and Mrs. James, of the People's Florist, are going to Atlantic City.

We are glad to know that the case against H. G. Dillemath, arising out of a motor accident, has been dismissed.

Frank Saunders has disposed of his west-end store to J. MacAdam.

J. A. and Mrs. Neal are holidaying at Stony lake.

Mrs. Moore has returned from a trip through Ohio.

Fred Miller is spending considerable time at the new range at Concord. Work is progressing satisfactorily and it is hoped to have the whole ten houses planted before long. Planting has started in the sixth house. The entire range is being devoted to roses.

Fred Good has sold his place to the Toronto Transportation Commission and will seek a new site.

Carl Grobba's new greenhouse, erected on top of the storage building, has been planted with mums.

Many Toronto florists are planning to go to the Montreal convention, August 8 to 11, by boat. It will give them an opportunity to see the scenic beauty of the Thousand islands and to "shoot" the Lachine rapids.

PERSISTENCY

"Six times a spider has spun its web outside my study window and six times I have destroyed it. Tomorrow morning I'm sure it will be there again. To prevent a spider from spinning its web time after time in the same place one has to kill the spider. If we, who are interested in selling goods, had the persistency of spiders we'd amount to something, wouldn't we?"

GARDENERS' COURSE

NEW COURSE AT AMHERST.

The Training of Gardeners.

The Massachusetts Agricultural College has announced a coöperative arrangement with the National Association of Gardeners, whereby a special course of training for gardeners is to be established. Tentative plans for this course are set forth below, and it is expected that the first pupils under this arrangement will be admitted to Massachusetts Agricultural College with the opening of the fall term September 27, 1922.

Purpose of the Course.

The traditional training of gardeners in Europe has been conducted through a well established apprentice system. This training requires several years of practical work in various branches of the art. The American system, by contrast, has developed extended courses in school and college giving scientific and theoretical training, with a minimum of practical experience. In the present plan the attempt is made to combine these two systems, with the hope of securing the benefits of both. The Massachusetts Agricultural College will conduct the theoretical instruction, while the National Association of Gardeners will take the responsibility of directing a prescribed apprenticeship. These two lines of work will be carefully coördinated and pupils will be held to a strict accountability in both.

This course of training is planned with the expectation of fitting men for practical gardening, either as commercial gardeners, florists or nurserymen conducting productive business enterprises of their own, or as gardeners on estates, foremen and superintendents in parks or cemeteries, or as gardeners, florists or nurserymen in the employ of commercial establishments.

Plan of Instruction.

The general plan of instruction is based upon the 2-year course already in successful operation at Massachusetts Agricultural College. Students fitted to take the course will be admitted each year in September, and will remain in residence at the college for six months. During this time they will pursue general studies in fruit growing, flower growing, vegetable growing, forestry, general horticulture and such elementary subjects as may be necessary. These classes will close the last week in March and students will be sent to various commercial establishments and private estates for a summer of practical work. Every effort will be made to see that pupils are advantageously placed, so as to secure the best possible experience; and this summer's apprenticeship will be supervised by a committee representing jointly the Massachusetts Agricultural College and the National Association of Gardeners.

At the end of the summer, students will return to the college for an additional period of nine months' study. They will thus complete this part of the course in the following June and, if successful, will receive a certificate from the college. From this point they will enter upon an apprenticeship of two years, to be arranged and supervised by the National Association of Gardeners. At the end of this time they will be examined by a special board and, if successful, will receive the diploma of the National Association of Gardeners.

Admission; Expenses; Information.

Students must be 17 years of age or over at the time of admission and must have completed an elementary school course or its equivalent, and must be able to use the English language with reasonable facility. Under the plan proposed, special consideration will be given to pupils coming upon the recommendation of the National Association of Gardeners.

Tuition at the Massachusetts Agricultural College is free to citizens of the state. Pupils from outside the state are charged $60 a term. This will make the tuition charge for the first year $120 and for the second, $180. There are small laboratory fees charged in certain courses and other fees for incidentals, but these will not average above $10 a term. Board and room at Amherst cost from $8 to $12 a week.

This work will all be under the co-operative management of the Massachusetts Agricultural College and the National Association of Gardeners. This association is represented for the present by the following members of its executive committee: Robert Cameron, Ipswich, Mass.; William N. Craig, Brookline, Mass., and M. C. Ebel, New York. The immediate direction of instruction will be in the hands of Professor Frank A. Waugh, Amherst, Mass., to whom may be addressed all correspondence regarding these matters.

POTASH AS FERTILIZER.

Would it be all right to use a raw potash, fresh from a soap factory, as fertilizer for mums and carnations in sandy loam mixed with sod, muck and manure?

R. W. U.—Mich.

If the potash is pure potash, it cannot do any harm. The probabilities are that it is pure, but I have no way of knowing if this is true. If any oily material is contained in it, I should not use it. But why use potash from a soap factory? In the first place, not many soils require potash, and, in the second place, why not buy crude potash that is known to be reliable? If the potash from the soap factory can be procured cheaply, I suggest that it be tested with plants, on a small scale, or that an analysis be required upon purchase.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

An item that electrified the craft of the Electric city, Schenectady, N. Y., was the news that John F. Horman, one of the foremost merchants there, had purchased the old Felthousen estate and, following the incorporation of the business, would erect an up-to-date range of glass, chiefly for retail purposes. George W. Matthews, well known in the trade, is a director and manager of the corporation.

"It could have been worse," observed Arthur J. Grupe, of Schenectady, N. Y., referring to an automobile accident that came within an ace of being fatal, when Mrs. Grupe, Sr., was struck by one machine and her son, going to her assistance, had his machine in turn smashed by a passing truck. Fortunately, the truck was owned by a generous and good customer, so that, aside from bruises and inconvenience, all ended well and much publicity was given our worthy confrere.

"Gladly we did it," commented Henry Eberhardt, of the Rosendale Flower Shop, Schenectady, N. Y., referring to the execution of an order for a bridal bouquet that meant setting the alarm clock for an early rising. "Any order received through the Pink Part of The Review has precedence. We attribute our increasing clientele to this service."

The Sunnyside Greenhouses, Schenectady, N. Y., lead in the Mohawk valley with early chrysanthemums. Oconto, Sunray and Richmond, three flowering shoots to a plant, are fairly jumping these warm nights, welcome after the long cool, wet period.

"Judging from the numerous compliments we receive," observed J. G. Barrett, Schenectady, N. Y., "the griefs of our patrons are assuaged at sight of the floral tokens of sympathy we have furnished at the obsequies of leading Trojans for nearly half a century."

"Westward, ho!" exclaimed John Sambrook, of Sambrook Bros., Troy, N. Y., referring to the approaching convention of the S. A. F., which a representative delegation from the Trojan city is expected to attend. Samuel Hanson, of North Troy, and A. D. Carpenter, of Cohoes, are included in the party.

"Not a bad idea," observed W. C. Gloeckner, Albany, N. Y., referring to a suggestion that a delegate be sent to the S. A. F. convention from each florists' club whose number of members in the society does not reach the necessary quota for official recognition, the delegate to go at the expense of the club, after being selected by popular vote.

"Since our stock is all planted and doing well, we see nothing to prevent the trip to Kansas City, about which there has been so much speculation and now opportunity for realization," ob-

The Market.

Last week the wholesale market was extremely quiet. Except for funerals, birthdays, flowers for the sick, etc., business has been exceedingly inactive.

There was a pretty good supply of cut stock last week. Extra fancy quality in roses is out of the question, when it comes in quantity. A feature has been the decrease in the supply of carnations; the few coming in are small in bloom.

Gladioli are now arriving in better shape, since we have had a few rains. In these, America and any white varieties have the call; mixed colors are down in price. Valley and orchids are in light supply and have little demand at present. Lilies were considerably in demand last week. The demand for outdoor flowers, such as cornflowers, Shasta

The Tale a Pine Tree Told Me

Before me is a camp photo that my friend "Tut" has just sent me from his auto camp in the Adirondacks.

In the foreground, the rushing, foam-flecked Ausable River. At the left, the glistening trunks of a clump of white paper birches.

Here and there at wide intervals are pine trees, lone survivors of the woodman's axe.

How sturdy and dominant is their leadership among their fellows! Although they mingle, they impress you as being unmistakably superior to their comrades.

And so are some men of the Florist business. Leaders they are because they are born leaders; not because either money or wire pulling has put them in the position of a leader.

Some of us, knowing we are not born leaders, are nevertheless ever striving to do whatever we can do, the very best it can be done.

Which statement comes pretty close to giving my viewpoint on running a florist shop or filling F. T. D. orders.

There was a good demand all last week for smilax, asparagus and fancy ferns.

Florists' Club Meets.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held an interesting meeting July 13, at the home of Charles Denker, St. Charles, Mo. It was by far the most largely attended meeting of the year. Seventy-six were present when President Rowe called the meeting to order. All the officers were present.

The trustees reported that the August meeting of the club would be held at Kirkwood, Mo., at the greenhouse establishment of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., at which the election of officers would be held.

The following applications for membership were filed: R. M. Bredmeyer, Charles Marback and H. Huebenthal.

A committee on the eighteen applications for membership filed at the June meeting reported favorably. A motion prevailed that the secretary cast one ballot for the members present; the following were elected to membership: H. S. Lauscher, W. J. Young, Mrs. E. K. Turk, Fred M. Alves, C. J. Kilmer, Fred Decker, W. A. Ferree, George H. Pieser, August Kunz, Louis Grimm, R. Muehlberg, A. G. Jensen, Oscar Tekinge, J. O. Masak, Mrs. Gussie Malloy, John Kern, John W. Steidle and Louis A. Hoerr.

The following were placed in nomination for officers: President, Frank A. Windler; vice-president, Oscar Ruff; secretary, J. J. Beneke; treasurer, William C. Smith; 3-year term trustee, George H. Pring. On motion the nominations were closed for this meeting; further nominations may be made at the next meeting.

The drawing of two attendance prizes was placed in the hands of Fred C. Bruenig, Andre Bourdet and A. W. Gumz. The winners were Joseph Frank and Hugo Werner. Since both were absent, they could not claim the prizes and lost the opportunity of not having to pay a year's dues.

Treasurer Smith's report showed a healthy balance on the right side of the ledger.

The printing of a new membership roster came up for discussion. This resulted in a motion to place the matter in the hands of the trustees and the secretary and to report at the next regular meeting for action thereon.

The chair called upon Edwin Denker for a talk on his trip to New York, where he attended Max Schling's school; Mr. Denker's remarks were indeed interesting.

George H. Pring gave an account of his trip to Cleveland, where he worked with the board of education on school gardens.

Prof. H. C. Irish spoke on the Missouri state fair, which opens at Sedalia, Mo., August 21. He urged the local growers and retailers to make a good showing of the St. Louis exhibits for that week.

George H. Pieser and R. Muehlberg, two of our new members, were called upon for a few remarks. A rising vote of thanks was given Mr. Denker for the afternoon's entertainment; after this the business meeting adjourned and Mr. Denker showed the members his well kept place. All partook of a fine luncheon, with refreshments and cigars. Three rousing cheers were given the host, as fifteen automobiles, loaded with florists, started for home.

Various Notes.

At the July meeting of the County Growers' Association, held July 5, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Thomas Kirkwood; vice-president, George Hartmann; secretary, Joseph Deutschmann, reelected; treasurer, August Hartmann, reelected; trustee, George Mackly. The meeting was well attended. President Ude presided. Following the election interesting subjects for discussion came up, such as the S. A. F. convention, St. Louis district meeting, growers' publicity, and the florists' picnic.

A visit to the carnation and rose-growing establishment of Werner Bros., at Clayton, Mo., found all hands busy in building two new houses, 25x150. Material from A. Dietsch Co., Chicago, was being used. When the new houses are completed, the firm will have an additional 8,500 feet of glass, or 75,000 feet in all. The new houses will be planted in roses. George Schmidt has charge of the rose range and Charles Roper is in charge of the carnation range. Both Alfred and Hugo Werner say that the last season was one of their best.

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Berning have returned from their southern trip to Texas and Oklahoma. Mr. Berning says that the trip was a pleasant one.

Joseph Hauser says he will not grow violets the coming season and that the entire place will be planted in mums. After the mum season, sweet peas will take their place. His new red dahlia, St. Louis, is looking fine in the field.

cut flower market was announced, with invitations to the trade, for July 19. George Pieser put in a busy week for the opening.

The W. A. Rowe Co., at Kirkwood, has all its carnations planted, about 200,000. There are 80,000 mum plants. The manager here is looking forward to a fine season.

Manager H. Duernberg, of the firm of Grimm & Gorly, with Mrs. Duernberg, returned from an eastern trip July 15. Otto Klingler, the buyer for this firm, with Mrs. Klingler, started on a two weeks' vacation trip July 17; this will be spent at northern lake resorts.

The membership of the St. Louis Florists' Club has now reached 258; of these, 114 are members of the S. A. F.; thirty-nine are life members. This leaves a field of 144 to work on by the state vice-president of the S. A. F.

July 12 a party made up of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Rowe; Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Gumz, Mr. and Mrs. L. Baumann and Mr. and Mrs. Kopp spent a few days at the Robinson Club Grounds, near Eureka, Mo. They report a daily big catch. The male members of the party attended the Florists' Club's meeting July 13 and rejoined the party the same evening.

Everything is in readiness for the big florists' event of the year—the picnic, at Normandy grove, July 27. The trustees have under consideration a parade through the downtown business district and offering two cash prizes for the best decorated automobile; for full

The Market.

Business might be termed seasonably slow. This is the time of year when little is expected, outside of funeral and hospital orders. There has been nothing unusual in either of these lines this month. The first local asters were cut July 15, offering some variety to the market. Fine gladioli are coming in.
Garden flowers and hardy stock are not overabundant, but there is enough for ordinary demands. The florists are taking advantage of the dull period to freshen up their places for the convention and to put goods in shape for the fall season.

The Market.

There is an ample supply of all kinds of flowers, especially gladioli. These useful flowers as yet do not attract all buyers. Roses are being cleaned up daily, and for summer flowers they are good. Carnations are also still to be had, especially Laddie, which are arriving in quantity lots and of good quality. American Beauties are also meeting with a good demand. These four fine flowers stand in the lead, with the outdoor hardy varieties filling in. Easter lilies and valley are arriving in lighter consignments. A daily clean-up on these two flowers is made. One of the novelties is the blue lace flower, which made its appearance from outdoors last week.

Various Notes.

The only "real" golfer among the florists in this territory is John McClements, of the McClements Co., who enjoys an occasional afternoon at this sport. The other dean in this line is John Murchie, of Sharon, Pa., who gives much of his time to the golf links.

In speaking of golf links, the numerous links that have been built this year in the vicinity of Pittsburgh have created an extra heavy demand for lawn seed. Hiram Frishkorn, of Beckert's Seed Store, was successful in securing several large contracts for this and other material.

S. P. Brown, of Brown & Son, Vandergrift, Pa., is still passing around the smokes. He returned from his honeymoon ten days ago. While away he visited the eastern cities and spent some time at the various seashore resorts.

SUMMER SEASON, Bellevue Ave.
NEWPORT, R. I.

He enjoyed a wonderful motor trip during this time.

Harris Bros., located on Market street, have extended their cut flower department through to Liberty avenue. The Bernard Gloekler Co., of this city, is furnishing them with beautiful mahogany refrigerators and store equipment of the latest patterns. John Harris is personally superintending this work.

John Wyland, of Allison Park, is one of the few florists in this section who has beautified his premises around his greenhouses and reservoir, which adjoin the Butler pike. While he has not displayed the "Say It with Flowers" sign, he is saying it with flowers naturally.

The range of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. is located on the Bakers-town road, which connects with two of the state highways. Here, too, there is a display of plants, and the slogan is also vividly expressed. Motorists, who pass there in great numbers, stop their machines to look over this wonderful greenhouse establishment, the glass of which covers nearly ten acres and the farm nearly 250 acres.

The McCallum Co., the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. and a number of citizens of the north boroughs contributed to the north side playgrounds the supply of flowers last week, permitting a liberal amount of flowers to be furnished to nineteen stations, thus making several thousands of young hearts glad and creating in them the love for the beautiful.

The Blind Floral Co., which is located on the Perry highway just about six miles as the crow flies from Pittsburgh, has its range attractively laid out along the highway. Its place is also worthy of comment.

Fred Burki, president of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., has let a contract with the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co. for a small greenhouse to be used for his personal experimental purposes.

John and Mrs. Keil, together with their son and daughter, of East Liverpool, O., motored up Tuesday, July 11, and spent the day among the growers.

The Market.

Business here remains good for both retailers and growers. Gladioli are just coming into bloom and the local crop will be on the market in a few days. Flowers are scarce, but with the advent of gladioli and other summer-flowering stock, flowers should soon be plentiful.

Various Notes.

A new florist's shop has been opened at 156 Front street. The place is to be known as the Flower Box. William Toye is the proprietor.

of outdoor flowers and with the perennial and bulb business. Allen W. Adshead, of this firm, is at Camp Devens doing two weeks' duty with the state militia.

July 12 and 13 the heat was terrific, the thermometer registering 92 and 94 degrees respectively. However, a thunder storm of unusual severity, accompanied by a hail storm, put an end to the heat.

Miss Neva Adshead had just returned from the nurses' convention held at Seattle. E. A.

MEMPHIS, TENN.

Business was slow last week, confining what activity there was to funeral and wedding work. No landscape work of any kind is going on at this time. Many beds of fine cannas are seen here this season, as the weather has been exactly what this plant needs. Gladioli are still coming in; some of these are of extra good quality, but the greater portion of them are short-stemmed stock. Dahlias in the field are not doing so well. They seem to have had a bad setback during the dry spell. Flowering plants that were allowed to bloom have all grown to wood and these will not have any blooms later on.

Clarence Saunders, of Piggly Wiggly fame, is building a magnificent home on a tract of 145 acres, making a swimming pool and private golf links. This place will call for a good deal of landscape work.

The Berclair Greenhouses are making preparations to add two houses to the present range within the next two months. This firm has built a new residence on the grounds for the use of the employees.

The stores here are in the habit of making window displays of whatever flowers they have on hand every morning.

A few bulb salesmen were in town last week with lily, Paper White and Sunburst and Ward. Sweet peas are plentiful, but the majority of them are not of A-1 quality this year. Easter lilies are now arriving in quantity and the quality is the best seen here in some time. Prices are low, as a rule, this being the only means of moving stock at present. The little amount of good stock moves readily, but with poor stock it is hard to do anything. Asters have put in an appearance, but they are few and far between. Japanese lilies are arriving in fairly good quantity. Calendulas, zinnias, bachelor's buttons, achilleas, delphiniums, gaillardias, etc., are still arriving. An exceptionally large supply of good medium snapdragons is arriving, but is moving slowly.

CINCINNATI PICNIC.

The first annual outing of the florists of Cincinnati and vicinity was given at the Laughery Club July 12. The outing was sponsored by the Cincinnati district of the National Flower Growers' Association and was a great success. It was the first time in the history of the local trade that more than 600 persons turned out to celebrate.

The crowd formed in parade style in the downtown district and then motored to the club, thirty-four miles distant. There were 116 machines in the parade, all decorated with flags and natural flowers; each machine carried two "Say It with Flowers" pennants.

Upon arrival at the club, dinner was served and then the many contests were started, chief among which was the baseball game between the storemen and growers. This was won by the former by a score of 11 to 5. On the storemen's team were I. Zimmer, B. Meyers, E. Huesman, L. Witterstaetter, E. Roth, George H. Kessen, E. Linskey, S. Jones and L. Kessen. On the growers' nine were Joseph Witterstaetter, Charles Witterstaetter, C. Windram, made use of, and if in addition the plowing under of green crops is practiced, the question of the nitrogen supply is partly solved. These fertilizing materials are in the main nitrogenous fertilizers. However, as a rule, the manures used by the average florist contain available nitrogen in relatively small amounts, and, although most of the nitrogen becomes available rather quickly under the favorable conditions of our greenhouses, it is likely true that applications of nitrogenous fertilizers containing the nitrogen in available form or in a form which becomes easily available are found beneficial in most cases. This seems to be all the more true when we consider the fact that nitrogen as it is needed by plants is easily lost from the soil.

It is therefore desirable to supplement the natural manures with other fertilizing materials containing available nitrogen. This form of nitrogen may be added either in the form of dried blood or in the form as it exists in some of the fertilizer chemicals.

What Natural Manures Lack.

The natural manures are not only deficient in available nitrogen, but possibly to a greater degree, in phosphorus. Our soils also are deficient in this element and, although the use of the natural manures makes up in part this deficiency, the addition of other phosphorus-containing materials is essential. Our experiments prove, I think, conclusively that applications of acid phosphate, even in a highly manured soil, result in greater production and in better growth of the plants. At the Illinois station, for a period of three years, we have been able to increase production in carnations more than five per cent and in roses more than eight per cent by using acid phosphate. We have increased production of Premier roses during the past year almost fourteen per cent by using relatively large quantities of acid phosphate. Steamed bone may be used instead of acid phosphate; however, our experiments indicate that the increase in production is not so large. During the last year we have had an increase of about ten per cent with Premier from the use of steamed bone. Precipitated bone gave us results comparable with acid phosphate. In these experiments ample quantities of stable manures were used, supplemented with dried blood. Our results have been corroborated recently by the Rhode Island station, where it was found that the use of phosphorus-containing fertilizers increased production of carnations. On the basis of extensive experiments, that station recommends that acid phosphate at the rate of one ton per acre, or about five pounds per 100 square feet, be applied to soils. We have found that a larger quantity should be used for our soils in order to get maximum returns. The acid phosphate or bone may be applied to the soil and manure compost in its making or it may be mixed with the soil just before being planted. If it is desired to use a complete commercial fertilizer, one having an analysis of about 4-12-3 would give good results in our type of soil. The application of potash is not necessary in most soils, for this compound is usually present in ample quantities; however, if it is desired to use a complete fertilizer, the potash contained in it will do no harm.

Applying the Fertilizer.

Personally, I feel that the ideal system of applying fertilizers to greenhouse soils is one which recognizes the fact that nitrogen is easily lost from the soil, while phosphoric acid remains fixed; also that soluble nitrogen is pronounced in its effects on growth, large quantities resulting in soft, weak growth, while phosphoric acid has little apparent effect on growth and relatively large quantities do not affect plants injuriously. Considering these facts, the soil should receive, during its preparation, relatively large quantities of phosphoric acid, a quantity sufficient for the season's growth, and enough soluble nitrogen, supplied by the natural manures and a form of prepared fertilizer such as dried blood, to initiate good growth. Then, from time to time, more nitrogen should be supplied as the plants, as indicated by their growth, require. This system is advocated not only because it is based on fundamental facts, but also because the grower can better study and observe the response of the plants to fertilizers and, besides, he can learn the needs of his soil in the way of necessary fertilizers.

I have pointed out that soils may be improved both physically and chemically by means of the manures and fertilizer chemicals. A part of this improvement, or possibly all of it, may be done or is usually done in the field. That is, the soil as it exists in the field may be grown with green manure crops, treated with stable manures and the fertilizer chemicals prior to bringing the soil into the houses. The question arises if this same treatment cannot be carried out while the soil is in the benches; in other words, cannot the same soil be used year after year in our houses and with the help of proper treatment produce good crops? This method would be economical in labor and likely also in fertilizing materials, if good crops could be grown. We are attempting to answer this question by means of experiment at the Illinois station. The method is, briefly, to treat the soil in the benches each year so that it is kept in good physical condition and that there is ample food material in the soil. Our data are not yet extensive, but at the present time they indicate that in the case of carnations production, compared with the new soil, is decreased by less than one flower per plant. Comparing, however, the yearly production on the same soil for four successive years, it is found that there has been a slight increase in production.

About Using Soil Continuously.

This question of using the same soil continuously in the benches for a number of years has been attacked in the experimental way by the Rhode Island station. The experiment was carried through a period of five years. The aim of the experiment was "to learn the effect upon the growth of carnation plants of using year after year the identical soil, plus stable manure, as compared with soil renewed each year, plus stable manure."

It was found that if the same soil is used each year for five years and stable manure is added each year, production is reduced by an average of about five per cent below that from fresh soil plus manure each year. If we attempt, then, to make a conclusion from the data we have thus far, it is that the practice of using our soil continuously year after year in the benches has a tendency to reduce the yield slightly. Whether this slight reduction is justified by the gain in the labor required to change the soil each year, the grower must determine for himself. It may still be true that after we have learned how to treat our soil in the benches from year to year, the continuous use of soil for a number of years will be the more profitable in the end.

SAVING FREESIA BULBS.

In taking out freesia bulbs forced last winter—they were late and flowered for Easter and Mothers' day—how small bulbs will it pay to save? My bulbs seem to fall in three sizes: Those one-half to five-eighths of an inch in diameter, about like those I planted last year; some long ones less than a quarter of an inch in diameter, and many not much larger than peas. Will the second and third sizes give good flowers next year?
H. D. P.—N. Y.

You might profitably save all the freesia bulbs, large and small. Under present conditions, it really pays to grow one's own bulbs. Provided you do not cut your plants off near the ground when they are in flower and provided the bulbs are allowed to ripen naturally, they will be equal to and probably better than those we are now getting from California, where frosts have badly crippled the crops and made bulbs small and poor. The small bulbs, like peas, should be sown in 4-inch flats on a shelf in any ordinary greenhouse. They will produce excellent flowering bulbs the following season. The writer personally is partial to long, thin bulbs and considers them superior to the wide, heavy ones. Those you mention as being long and one-fourth of an inch in diameter should flower nicely if planted a little more thickly than the heaviest size. If you leave a reasonable amount of foliage on your freesias when cutting the flowers, they will produce excellent flowering bulbs. If merely the stalks are used, without foliage, no injury whatever will be done the bulbs. But when the leaves are cut away, even if good-sized bulbs are produced, they will not bloom satisfactorily. CHEMICALS KILL WEEDS.

I am troubled a great deal with weeds in the paths about my coldframe. Will you tell me of a good liquid weed killer?

B. G.—O.

The most efficient means of eradicating the weeds is the chemical spray. This method has been successfully employed at the Missouri Botanical Garden. The chemical used is iron sulphate and it is applied by means of a spray, in order that too much of the solution will not be put on one place. If a hand sprayer is used, it should be fitted with three feet of compression hose and a 3-foot extension for swinging the nozzle. The solution is made by dissolving two pounds of iron sulphate in one gallon of water, and, to be effective, the spray should be used five or six times during the season, in order that each new set of leaves that appear on the weeds will be destroyed. Care must be taken not to get the solution upon the stone walks or upon the clothing, on account of discoloration.

Copper sulphate is also used in the same way as is iron sulphate, but, as this solution is about ten times as destructive as the iron sulphate, the solution must be made weaker—about eight or ten pounds of copper sulphate to fifty gallons of water.

For walks, roads, tennis courts, and all places where complete and lasting extermination of all plant life is desired, other chemicals are used. The most important of these is arsenate of soda. This is a most active poison and care must be exercised in its use. Two pounds to ten gallons of water is the formula employed. The solution may be applied with a watering can, if care is used not to get too close to vegetation which it is not desired to destroy.

Carbolic acid is a powerful and quick-acting weed killer, but its effects are not so enduring as those of the arsenical solution. The formula is one pint to four gallons of water. A hot salt brine may also be used, if the solution is made strong enough to show crystals on its surface. Caustic soda, either sodium hydrate or sodium hydroxide, can be used for the destruction of woody plants, like poison ivy. This should be applied in a saturated solution, during dry weather. After the destruction of the weeds the soil should be thoroughly watered, if it is desired to have other vegetation grow there.

PYRETHRUM FROM SEED.

Will Pyrethrum roseum seed bloom next summer if planted now?

J. R. F.—Ind.

While it would have been better to have sown the pyrethrum seed two months ago, you can still get plants of flowering size for next season by sowing the seeds at once. These plants will give you a few flowers next season, but they will, of course, make big clumps a year later. Prick out the seedlings in good soil and keep them well cultivated, in order to encourage maximum growth. Pyrethrums are most useful hardy perennials for cutting and, in sections where they flower for Memorial day, they are found invaluable for bouquet work. Singles are chiefly grown, but you can also secure a fair proportion of doubles by buying a double strain. The best double varieties can be propagated by division, which is done in August, so that the clumps become well established before the winter sets in.

C. W.

BEETLES ON PHYSALIS.

I have sent under separate cover some leaves of physalis, upon which there is a destructive insect. Will you advise as to what this insect is and how I can destroy it?

G. W. B.—Wis.

The insects are the young of one of the flea beetles. They may be controlled by spraying with arsenate of lead in the proportion of one pound to fifty gallons of water.

PROPAGATING AMARYLLIS.

Will you give me brief cultural directions for the growing of amaryllis bulbs? Can the hybrids be made to reproduce from seed or in some way brought to develop bulblets?

E. V. S.—Ia.

The amaryllis reproduces from seed readily. Sow the seeds in pans or flats of light, sandy soil as soon as they are ripe. Prick them off into other flats when they are large enough to be handled. Later pot them off singly and grow them continuously without any resting until they flower. Select your finest varieties for seed. They are easily self-pollinated or hybridized, and it does not take the seeds long to ripen. Flowering bulbs, if growing as they should, reproduce quite freely and the side bulbs can be removed, potted and grown as well. Take the side bulbs off in the winter, when bulbs are practically dormant.

The amaryllis succeeds well in a compost of fibrous loam, well decayed, lumpy cow manure, broken charcoal and sand. It likes good drainage and a porous soil. As a rule, 6-inch and 7-inch pots are large enough for it to flower in, although it will flower in 4-inch and 5-inch pots. Repotting is best done just before starting up the plants.

The amaryllis may be grown in an ordinary greenhouse temperature, but it does better in a night temperature of about 55 degrees. Manure water, applied when the spikes show, will improve it, and also helps materially if given at intervals later in the season. In the summer the amaryllis will do particularly well if plunged to the brim in an old hotbed and given full exposure to the weather. The bulbs on the plants thus treated increase tremendously in size, as compared with those kept in a greenhouse, where they often dry up badly. A gradually decreasing water supply should be given the plants after the end of October; but it is not necessary, as many imagine, to lay the plants on their sides and keep them dormant for months.

READY NOW

We Can Ship on Receipt of Order

The Review is able to announce that it NOW is in position to make immediate shipment of

BAILEY'S STANDARD

Cyclopedia of Horticulture

at a new low price. The last printing was sold out at $48.00 the set of 6 volumes—a very reasonable price considering war-time costs of printing. Now a new printing has been made and the publishers authorize The Review to give its readers the benefit of the saving made in present competitive conditions in the book-making trades in the East. This means a new price of $40.00 per set for the CYCLOPEDIA—a saving of $8.00 per set.

Send Your Orders Now—Delivery by First Express, Prepaid

REMEMBER—BAILEY'S STANDARD CYCLOPEDIA OF HORTICULTURE is in 6 large volumes, over 3,000 pages. It is authority in all matters of plant names and spellings. Besides the purely botanical matter one would expect to find in such a work, there are many hundreds of cultural articles, chapters on insects, diseases, remedies, etc.—a veritable horticultural library, all carefully and completely indexed.

LINDLEY FLORIST BOX CO., Marion, Indiana

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Weather conditions last week were ideal for the outdoor flowers, and a considerable quantity of stock reached us each day. Although it is the middle of the summer season, most florists are enjoying good business. There are good quantities of carnations reaching the market, most of them finding sale. The white varieties are considerably outnumbered by the pinks. Few reds are seen now.

Roses are in full supply and last week the demand was good; however, many have been sold at a sacrifice. Gladioli are increasing in quantity and are of good quality. Valley is not particularly good. There is a steady demand for orchids, although the demand is small. Sweet peas are in fair supply, most of them being of medium stem. Lilies are in fair supply and sell pretty well.

Various Notes.

The new greenhouse of Hugo Teute, of Brighton, N. Y., is nearing completion. This structure will provide considerably more room, as well as giving Mr. Teute an excellent conservatory and show house near the road.

Alberts the Florist has been specializing in baskets of assorted outdoor flowers, which have been priced reasonably. A great many have been disposed of during the last week or two.

George T. Boucher showed some beautiful porch and garden furniture in his East avenue window last week. This furniture includes urns, boxes and bird fountains, as well as the usual chairs and benches.

E. R. Fry, of West Main street, reports a good summer business and appears to be well pleased with results so far.

Mr. Schults, of Hilton, N. Y., recently returned from the Max Schling school, in New York. Mr. Schults is a student in Cornell University. H. J. H.

What will the temperature be by midnight?

Are you trusting to "luck"?

You can't depend on ice nor on hand-controlled refrigerating machines to keep a steady temperature. They vary from 10 to 40 degrees overnight—resulting in wilted, unsalable flowers by morning.

Only the Lipman Automatic guarantees dependable, dry cold the year around. It never varies 2° from the temperature desired. Starts itself when the temperature rises—stops itself at correct temperature. Just set it—oil it occasionally—and leave it alone.

If you're used to the old-style hand-controlled refrigerating machines, the Lipman will amaze you. Write for free information—make us prove that a Lipman will pay for itself in your shop—and earn 50% profit for you, as well.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, Alexander Forbes, Newark, N. J.;
secretary, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

PAPER WHITES are afloat, due at New York next week.

RECENT rains have been of much benefit to the onion set crops in the vicinity of Chicago.

THE Buckeye Seed Co., Cleveland, O., has been incorporated. The firm is capitalized at $10,000 and the incorporators are Ogden Gaul and Fred Owen.

THE Weghorst & Martin Seed Co., Columbus, O., has been incorporated, with a capitalization of $3,000. The incorporators are J. H. Weghorst and Bessie E. Martin.

W. ATLEE BURPEE, JR., sailed July 11 on the New Amsterdam for an extensive European trip. Alfred Putz, of Burpee's advertising department, sailed July 12 on the St. Paul for two months of travel through Germany and Holland.

FIRE in the store of Hill's Seed Store, 356 Main street, Malden, Mass., caused some damage July 10. That done to the building, which was not owned by Mr. Hill, was $1,200. That done to the stock has not been estimated; it was insured for $8,000.

ACCORDING to advice received from Cooper, Taber & Co., London, England, Harry Simpson will represent the firm in this country this season, arriving in New York about August 5. His address while in this country will be in care of R. J. Godwin's Sons, Inc., 15 Whitehall street, New York.

WHEN C. D. Coventry, head of the wholesale department of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, was out driving July 16 with his family, his 4-year-old son rolled out of the car and Mr. Coventry's wife, in an effort to catch the child, fell out of the car also, sustaining injuries. She is now in the hospital. The boy is unhurt. The machine was traveling at about eighteen miles per hour.

THE vegetable crop of the United States in 1921 had an estimated value of $1,104,000,000 and was fifteen and seven-tenths per cent of the total value of all crops, according to figures issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. Potatoes played the largest part in the total showing, with $385,000,000 worth of Irish potatoes produced and $87,000,000 worth of sweet potatoes, together forty-three per cent of the whole vegetable output. The tomato crop amounted to $60,000,000; the cantaloupe to $17,000,000, and the cucumber, watermelon and cabbage each to about $15,000,000. Farm gardens had an estimated value of $405,000,000.

A. M. ELDRIDGE resigned July 3 as vice-president and director of the Henry Field Seed Co., Shenandoah, Ia., and July 10 was elected secretary and treasurer of the Bruns Seed Co., Washington, Ia. In explanation of the change Mr. Eldridge said: "I have been with the Henry Field Seed Co. for twelve years and have seen it grow from a business of $132,000 a year to one of one and a half million dollars per annum. I regret to leave Henry Field and Shenandoah. The Henry Field Seed Co. is as sound as a nut and Henry Field a prince, but I have a desire to start again with a smaller business and

HEAD OF JAPANESE FIRM.

The death of Seitaro Arai, reported in this week's obituary column, leaves his son, Inoski Arai, head of the famous exporting house which his father founded, at Yokohama, Japan. Large exports of Lilium giganteum and other bulbs are annually made by this house to the United States. The younger Arai has been manager of the business for the last ten years and has been signally successful in building it to its present large size. The illustration on this page shows Mr. Arai when he and his father were visited by A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago, in 1919.

FLAT RATE ON FLOWER SEEDS?

The Senate finance committee has been asked by Senator Townsend, of Michigan, to increase from 4 cents to 10 cents per pound the rate on flower seeds. The 4-cent rate was provided by the House, but was stricken out by the Senate finance committee prior to reporting the McCumber-Fordney tariff bill to the Senate, leaving the rate on flower seeds the catch-all rate of twenty per cent ad valorem. Seedsmen all over the country have been protesting against an ad valorem duty, on the ground that it would be extremely hard to administer. They have asked for the imposition of a flat rate of 10 cents per pound, claiming that the twenty per cent rate will amount to an average of 11 cents per pound on the basis of importations in previous years.

In presenting the case to the Senate finance committee, Senator Townsend declared that the cheaper seeds are not imported into the United States. The 10 cents per pound duty would apply only on expensive varieties and rare seeds. The committee does not look with favor upon so high a rate as 10 cents per pound, pointing out that if seeds sold at 4 cents per pound the rate would be prohibitive, and if sold at $4 per pound, 10 cents would not amount to

HEAD OF JAPANESE FIRM.

The death of Seitaro Arai, reported in this week's obituary column, leaves his son, Inoski Arai, head of the famous exporting house which his father founded, at Yokohama, Japan. Large exports of Liliun giganteum and other bulbs are annually made by this house to the United States. The younger Arai has been manager of the business for the last ten years and has been signally successful in building it to its present large size. The illustration on this page shows Mr. Arai when he and his father were visited by A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago, in 1919.

FLAT RATE ON FLOWER SEEDS?

The Senate finance committee has been asked by Senator Townsend, of Michigan, to increase from 4 cents to 10 cents per pound the rate on flower seeds. The 4-cent rate was provided by the House, but was stricken out by the Senate finance committee prior to reporting the McCumber-Fordney tariff bill to the Senate, leaving the rate on flower seeds the catch-all rate of twenty per cent ad valorem. Seedsmen all over the country have been protesting against an ad valorem duty, on the ground that it would be extremely hard to administer. They have asked for the imposition of a flat rate of 10 cents per pound, claiming that the twenty per cent rate will amount to an average of 11 cents per pound on the basis of importations in previous years.

In presenting the case to the Senate finance committee, Senator Townsend declared that the cheaper seeds are not imported into the United States. The 10 cents per pound duty would apply only on expensive varieties and rare seeds. The committee does not look with favor upon so high a rate as 10 cents per pound, pointing out that if seeds sold at 4 cents per pound the rate would be prohibitive, and if sold at $4 per pound, 10 cents would not amount to

FRENCH BULBS AFLOAT.

The steamer Providence has sailed from Marseilles with the first shipment of the 1922 crop of Paper Whites and other French bulbs. The Providence will be followed by the Canada, carrying the main shipment, and the remainder of the crop will be brought over on the Britannia. The first boat is due at New York about the end of July.

After holding back to the last moment, most of the American dealers cabled orders for more bulbs than they are likely to get. Recent advices are that not more than ten per cent of the crop will grade 13-centimeter and up. A good many of the importers have signified a willingness to take 12-centimeter bulbs, but one advice from Ollioules says that only one buyer for the American market has accepted the 11-centimeter size.

The price paid for the bulbs is the highest on record. The florists in America will have to pay at least double the high price of last year. There is considerable divergence of opinion regarding the number of bulbs the trade will accept when they find out just what they are going to cost. Estimates of acceptances run all the way from forty per cent to sixty per cent on the orders placed at open prices. But it appears that the importers who have cabled orders on such a basis have found it impossible to secure that many bulbs. Consequently, it looks as though the trade will absorb all the stock that comes over, regardless of the price.

SEEDSMEN'S DIFFICULTIES.

In Securing Clean Seeds.

In considering the difficulties of seedsmen in search of clean seeds, of course, one naturally thinks of the analyst, who so frequently finds in our seeds weeds which we did not know were there. Some of us are inclined to class the analyst with the pessimist who blew out the light which the optimist saw in the darkness, but which really was not there. We fondly hope that a certain lot of seed is as near perfection as care and machinery can make it—and then, along comes the killjoy analyst with his laboratory test showing one Canada thistle in a million seeds, more or less, and all our hopes are blasted.

But, seriously speaking, the most difficult problem in the application of seed analysis to the practical work of the seedsman is the measure of exactness and purity which is possible, considering the careless or even slovenly habits of Mother Nature in putting weeds where they are not wanted. I don't care to voice the supposed objections of seedsmen to a strict enforcement of seed laws, for indeed, I think that the average enforcement of seed laws has been far too lax. When I think of the abuses which still exist in states which have seed laws, I want more enforcement rather than less.

Demand Leads to Betterment.

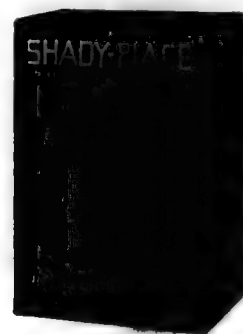

Methods and practices of recleaners of seeds have been greatly improved under the stimulus of a more general demand for better seeds. It is now possible to remove by careful cleaning processes most of the weed seeds which are harvested with field seeds. Certain particularly troublesome weed seeds, such as buckhorn, Canada thistle and dodder, which are of about the same size and density as the seeds which contain them, require special processes, machinery and skill for their elimination. In many cases, the best efforts of the experienced recleaner still leave a few of the objectionable seeds. It is the presence of these few seeds which causes the frequent differences of opinion between those who desire absolutely pure seeds for the farmer and the seedsman who undertakes the actual task of furnishing pure seed. We all agree that the introduction into the soil of perennial weeds, such as Canada thistle, even in small proportion, through seeding with grass seeds is most unfortunate. But the seedsman's problem is to secure sufficient seed absolutely free from weeds to supply the requirements of his customers. Sometimes parcels of seeds which are supposed to be entirely free from certain noxious weeds prove to contain an occasional seed of the prohibited weed. Shipments of high-grade seed have been refused and returned to the recleaner with considerable expense and loss, because of the supposed presence in the bulk of an occasional noxious weed seed, none of which could be detected upon repeated laboratory tests, even though the quantity of seed examined was over fifty times the quantity ordinarily used for purity analysis. Circumstances such as this increase the risk and total cost of doing business, and the seedsman justly thinks there should be some margin of tolerance which will protect honest intent and yet not encourage evasion of law.

I believe the enforcement of seed laws should properly regard the character, the intention and the average performance of the recleaner and distributor of seeds. The man who habitually takes advantage of a margin of tolerance to label seeds with higher percentages of germination or purity than actual tests show should be exposed, while the well intentioned seed dealer should not be punished for those occasional instances of variation in tests which all analysts know to be unavoidable.

Practical Difficulties.

Among the serious practical difficulties encountered by the recleaners of seeds may be mentioned: The comparatively small percentage of seed which is harvested free from weeds; the want of care upon the part of farmers and country shippers to keep various lots and qualities separate; the desire on the part of the farmer to harvest all the seed possible from his field, regardless of whether some parts of the field may have been infested with noxious weeds; the fact that one process of cleaning or one machine is not sufficient to remove all kinds of weeds, for many processes and many different types of machines are needed in a modern seed-cleaning plant; the variation in relative size and density of field seeds and the weeds which they contain, so that a process which will perfectly clean one parcel of clover from a certain weed seed fails to produce satisfactory results in cleaning another parcel of seed of the same variety containing the same weeds, and, perhaps most important of all, lack of proper application of good judgment and diligent effort to the work; in other words, too much dependence upon machine methods, which should often be varied greatly to secure the best results.

Much could be said under each of the above headings, but one cannot include a manual of seed cleaning within the limits of a paper of this kind. Furthermore, after years of experience and study, I find so much yet to be learned that I am hesitant to try to instruct others. However, it may be said that perfection is not at present attainable and both seedsmen and analysts will have to be content with honest endeavor and gradual improvement. These can be attained and, notwithstanding many bad spots in the trade, I think we have much cause for hopefulness as to the future.

If some pressure could be brought to bear upon the producer of seeds so that the recleaner could purchase more liberal quantities of reasonably clean seed, this would help to solve some of our problems. Farmers should be taught that it is not good public policy or good for their own pocketbooks to harvest weedy portions of their fields and mix the seed with good, clean seed from other portions of their land. Country assemblers and shippers of carlots of seed should be taught to exercise more care to keep separate different qualities of seed, so that when the seed reaches the recleaner, weedy seed need not be mixed with good seed.

Eternal Vigilance Required.

It is, of course, practically impossible to apply careful methods of seed analysis to each separate bag of seed received by recleaners. The cost would be prohibitive and the results would be disappointing, because one-half bushel of seed containing certain noxious weeds, which might easily escape reasonably careful examination with a seed tryer, would spoil the purity of a comparatively large parcel of seed with which it might be mixed. It is true that certain sections are practically free from certain noxious weeds and the well informed seedsman knows where these sections are and can usually succeed in buying moderate quantities of seed which will suit his customers. But the competition for such seed is always keen and, generally speaking, there is not enough of it to go around, and, of course, there is always the possibility that some country shipper in these favored sections will purchase seed at a lower price, which has been produced in some other section, to ship with his local seed.

The making of satisfactory grades by selection requires eternal vigilance and the perfected cleaning operation requires extraordinary care and good judgment. My belief is that such work is not well enough paid under present commercial conditions. It is the belief of leading seedsmen who handle field seeds that if profits from market changes were eliminated, no large field seed house could make its expenses from merchandising or turn-over profits. This condition tends to accentuate speculation in seeds at the expense of thorough methods of recleaning and merchandising, and it seems to me that this condition is largely due to the fact that the farmer is not well enough advised by county agents and agronomists generally as to the value of the services of the thoroughly well equipped recleaner of seeds.

The farmer is frequently encouraged to buy direct from producing districts where cleaning facilities either do not exist or are quite inadequate and imperfect, and we frequently find men who pose as agricultural leaders encouraging the sale of seed from farmer to farmer, or from county to county, regardless of the fact that this same seed could be made much more useful and safe if it were shipped to a well equipped seed-cleaning plant for proper handling. Of course, I know that some country lots of seed are as pure as could be wished for, but on the average the output of a modern seed-cleaning establishment is far superior in quality to the seed which is sold without passing through such a plant. I believe that analysts, agronomists and agricultural leaders in general could render no greater service to agriculture than to lend their influence toward such methods of marketing and distribution in the seed trade as insure a careful inspection and cleaning of all seed by people who have proper equipment and who are experienced in such work.

The efforts for direct marketing and the elimination of middlemen will result in a net loss to agriculture, if they do not recognize the place and service of the recleaner of seeds who knows his business and is willing to conduct it along proper lines.

I am hopeful of the good to come from joint meetings of seedsmen and analysts. To understand each other's problems and to be willing to help solve them will undoubtedly help to realize the promise of the slogan of the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association, "Better Seeds—Better Crops." The wonderful improvement in the average quality of the seeds now handled by the trade speaks well for the team work of the analysts and the seedsmen's associations. Gradually misunderstandings and shortcomings will be eliminated and American agriculture will be permanently benefited by the work which now seems so difficult and imperfect.

Sakata & Co., Yokohama, Japan, with an American branch at 20 East Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill.—A special wholesale list of seeds of trees, shrubs and perennials; eight large, compactly printed pages. Among the specialties are cyclamens, primulas, begonias, cinerarias and violas. This is the first American catalogue issued by the company, after an experience of twenty-two years in the seed business in Europe.

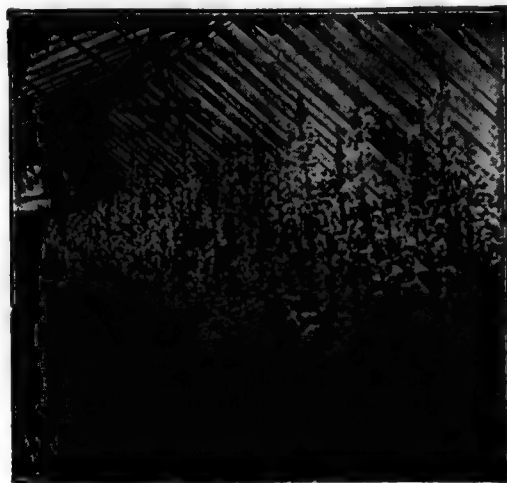

ASTERS DAMPING OFF.

Will you kindly inform me what causes my aster leaves to turn yellow? I had them in a spent hotbed, rich in rotted manure. Could excessive watering have caused it? Those in the field act the same as those described in The Review, June 15; they wilt down and turn black at the stem near the ground.

How early should asters be sown to have them ready for spring sales?
A. H. L.—Ill.

Excessive rains or heavy watering would have a tendency to cause trouble among asters in a rich soil. As a rule, there is little trouble with outdoor-sown asters, but a good deal with such as are started in greenhouses or cold-frames. Leaving seedlings too long in the flats before transplanting, letting them get drawn and then burying the stems to steady them, are prime causes of stem rot and damping off. Planted out in land which is low and on

SNAPDRAGON

Snapdragons have moved into first place with all wide-awake florists and are earning growers more money than any flower in cultivation. This is especially true among growers with a retail outlet. Splendid blooms may be had any month in the year, with a bumper crop over the three great flower days, Easter, Mothers' Day, and Memorial, extending throughout June graduations.

Snapdragons are easy to grow and good seed may be had at such small cost that there is no excuse for having inferior stock. Producing snapdragon seed is our one business and the ever increasing orders show how well we attend to it. Years of experience and our reputation are back of every packet of seed. See complete list below. First comes which water will stand for a considerable period after drenching rains, asters are sure to suffer heavy losses. In a dry summer, low locations prove ideal; when there is abundant moisture, disaster results. The best success is to be had on well drained land with a gentle slope. Of course, it is an advantage to give asters a change of location each season if possible. Liming the soil in the fall once in two or three years will help to correct soil acidity, damping off and stem rot.

Asters for an early crop can be sown in late January or early February; these are to be planted outdoors early in May. Where sales are not made until near Memorial day, it would be advisable to delay sowing until the end of February. They can be sown outdoors for a late crop until the middle of June. Queen of the Market, also called Queen of the Earlies, is best for an early crop, while American Branching, Crego and Vick's Branching are good for late crops. Seedlings should be given a rather light, but moderately rich soil. C. W.

RUST ON ASTER FOLIAGE.

We should like to know what to do for leaf-rust on our asters in the field. Will you advise us? A. F. C.—Ind.

For leaf-rust on asters and for all fungoid affections of fruits, flowers and vegetables, it is necessary to use a fungicide, and Bordeaux mixture remains the best and most widely used of these remedies. You can prepare Bordeaux yourself or buy it in a dry state. It will be best to spray in the late afternoon or evening and, while one application may give relief, a second or third spraying may be necessary if the trouble is serious. C. W.

RAIN WHEN YOU WANT IT

After it's up, a child can turn it, or we can furnish a self-turning line.

Two men can take down and move a 200 foot Portable Sectional line in 30 minutes.

It's Not Too Late But There's No Time to Lose

That sturdy old English fighter, Lord Cromwell, said "it was all right to trust in the Lord, but it was always best, just the same, to see that your powder was dry."

By the same line of reasoning, it's all right to trust there will be rain in time to save your crop, but it's a mighty sensible thing to make sure of it, by having the Skinner System, so you can turn a valve and have rain when you want it; where you want it; and all you want of it.

That's what the Skinner System Portable line will do for you right now. You don't have to wait till your crop is off to put it in. You don't even have to have posts, as you can temporarily set it on crates. A hundred foot line waters 5,000 square feet, or a strip 50 feet wide and 100 feet long.

The two hundred footer waters 10,000 square feet, and only four moves of it waters an entire acre.

Many's the grower who last season, when dry weather hit them, telegraphed us to send a Portable line quick as possible.

We always shipped it by express that very day, and 30 minutes after it came, and was unpacked, it was up in their fields, saving their crop.

It's not too late for you to send for one; but there's no time to lose. You wire, we'll ship.

AFTER

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by the Pfund Nursery Co., now at South boulevard and Oak Park avenue, Oak Park, Ill., that its Elmhurst and Chicago offices have been consolidated into general offices located at the above-mentioned address. This change was made necessary by the expansion of the business of the firm.

At the third meeting of the California Nurserymen's Bud Selection Association, held at Sacramento, the following officers and directors were elected to serve during the coming year: President, W. T. Kirkman, Jr.; vice-president, J. E. Bergholt; secretary-treasurer, Max J. Crow; field manager, Charles B. Weeks; directors, J. S. Armstrong, Ontario; J. E. Bergholt, Newcastle; Max J. Crow, Gilroy; L. H. Elmer, San Jose; H. A. Hyde, Watsonville; W. T. Kirkman, Jr., Fresno; Alman Wheeler, San Jose.

To further the work of the art extension committee of the University of Illinois, which is to make art a more potent elevating force in the lives of the people of the state of Illinois, a photographic competition for the school children throughout the state of Illinois has been inaugurated with pictures of rural school grounds before and after decorating and any native beauty in Illinois as subjects. O. C. Simonds, landscape gardener of Chicago, and J. C. Blair, head of the department of horticulture, University of Illinois, have consented to act as judges in the state competitions and to prepare the designs for planting of school grounds.

TEN BEST PEONIES.

Will you mention ten of the best peonies for commercial cut flower purposes, both as to keeping in storage and shipping qualities? V. E. B.—Tenn.

Following is a list of ten first-rate commercial varieties of peonies: Duchesse de Nemours, early white; Couronne d'Or, late white; Octavie Demay, early light pink; Venus, early light pink; Pierre Duchartre, late light pink; M. Jules Elie, early dark pink; Livingstone, late dark pink; Claire Dubois, midseason pink; Augustin d'Hour, dark red, and Felix Crousse, midseason red. W. A. Peterson.

PEONY ROOT DIVISIONS.

Are the divisions from a peony root which is from 8 to 12 years old good to plant? Are these divisions as good as a division from a 3-year-old root? If divisions are taken from an old peony root, will the plant discontinue to bloom? E. S. S.—Ind.

Divisions from any peony roots that are more than 3 years old will be coarser and heavier, with much more labor to cut out the rotted portions which invariably are found in the old stools, where the water soaks into the holes made by the rotting away of the stems of the previous year's growth. If the major portion of the old tuber was cut away and not to exceed two eyes were left on any division, cutting off the remaining eyes, such a plant will in the course of two years build a new system of roots and make a fairly good plant.

It is not profitable, if the plants are grown for propagating purposes, to let them stand for more than three years. So, anyone offering older plants must have been growing them for blooms. A division cut from a young, thrifty plant is worth more than two of those cut from a plant more than 3 years old. William A. Peterson.

WHAT'S AROUND THE CORNER?

What Awaits Trade There.

I am no prophet, son of a prophet, seer or crystal gazer, but I do believe that the nursery industry is approaching a "corner" and that one guess is as good as another as to what awaits us around that corner. Generally speaking, the last few years have been good for the nurseryman; we have enjoyed a good business, a live market at profitable prices. For the season of 1921 and 1922 the price tendency was downward as compared with the previous year, except on some few items that were in short supply, and my prediction is that the price tendency for the fall of 1922 and the spring of 1923 will continue downward on nursery products taken as a whole. There are some exceptions, because the supply of some few items will continue short throughout this coming season. These price declines, coming by degrees, are right and proper, and strictly in keeping with the readjustment from the war-time peak. There is no objection whatever to this program; it is the natural thing; we expect it and are prepared for it.

Overproduction.

As I see it, the nursery industry today is on a production basis. The industry is now in position to expand its productions greatly, and overproduction I would put first on the list of "What's Around the Corner." Most earnestly do I sound a note of warning. Do not go wild on your plantings. Stop and think it out. Stop and think and, in thinking it out, go over your old pay rolls, your old trial balances, your old freight and express bills, your old overhead account and compare these items with their costs today. By old accounts I mean those of the years of 1911 and 1914, the pre-war period. If you will but take the time to make this comparison, you will find that it is utterly out of the question for you to live under the prices which you secured for your products during that time. As sure as the sun shines, overproduction will bring our industry right back to 6-cent apples, 9-cent Kieffers, 14-cent cherries, 6-cent peaches and 12-cent roses, in spite of your present operating expense, which is fifty to 150 per cent greater than it was during the pre-war period.

Get me clearly on this point—over-production means the old-time prices in spite of a tremendously increased operating expense. When there is a production of two trees or plants where only one is required to meet the demands of the trade, both trees and both plants will be sold, if possible, at a nickel or 6 cents or any price at all. Remember, your cost of doing business today is not on a nickel or 6-cent basis.

New Growers.

In planning your plantings there is another feature, aside from your own individual supply and your own individual demand, to be taken into consideration. This is the fact that dozens—perhaps hundreds would be nearer correct—of new and heretofore unknown growers are going into or have already entered the producers' lists; also, that many heretofore small growers are now greatly expanding their business. We must remember that the combined productions of these new and expanding growers is no inconsiderable item and that this production helps tremendously in bringing about a period of overproduction, which, I believe, is around the corner I am talking about. next spring. Unless the recognized nurserymen of this country proceed along conservative lines, ultra-conservative if you please, we shall see price declines within two years, not by degrees, but in a deluge, and the nursery industry will then sure enough be back to "normalcy" with a vengeance.

At the Kansas City meeting of the Western Association of Nurserymen, last January, the program committee insisted that I inflict the members with a few remarks on "The Immediate Future of the Nursery Business." Said remarks were duly inflicted and had to do with conditions, as I saw them, for the spring and fall of 1922. Among other disjointed inflictions I then stated that, in my opinion, there was a market in sight for all good nursery stock in sight for the spring and fall of 1922. You will agree with me that my statement was correct as applied to the past spring season, and I am still of the opinion that the nurseryman of this country will find a good market for his products for the fall of 1922 and the spring of 1923, but right now, while conditions are good, right now, when it takes real nerve to plan any curtailment in our production, is the time for us to look ahead a little and plan with care and thought and conservatism for the next four or five years. Right now, the conditions that will confront us in the fall of 1923, 1924, 1925 and 1926 have me guessing. True, I grant you that business conditions are improving; that there is a tremendous amount of new building in process and contemplated and that the captains of industry are all hopeful and optimistic, but in spite of these most favorable prospects, just how much, in the next four years, will a big overproduction have to do with utterly demoralizing the nursery industry, bringing about another series of low-priced, hard-up, red-ink-bank-balances, non-profitable seasons?

The Unknown Factor.

Just how much of an increased production can be taken care of profitably by increased educational publicity is an unknown factor. Certainly any and every move that will tend toward educating the people to plant trees and shrubs, that will help to stimulate the market for our products, should receive right now a little closer attention than ever before. This matter of overproduction is a feature of the nursery business that can never be controlled, but it is up to every one of us to stop and think, and to apply sound, conservative planting plans now. By so doing, we can help mightily to keep the nursery industry on a basis that pays us a reasonable return for our labors.

Uniform Inspection Laws?

There may be other things around the corner, but I shall touch on only one more, and that is a proposed standard form of uniform nursery inspection laws brought out by the cotton states' entomologists last January. They invited representatives of the Southern Nurserymen's Association to meet with them in conference in Atlanta and discuss with them the report of their committee who had this matter in charge. At this January conference five nurserymen were present. Their committee presented for our consideration a proposed "Ideal Standard of Rules and Regulations," toward which all states could move as opportunity offered, an idea that has been present in the minds of the nurserymen for many years. The nurserymen were delighted over the invitation to be present and cooperate with the entomologists in working out a standard form of uniform nursery inspection laws, to be operated in all states alike.

The "ideal standard" presented embraces twenty-nine sections and time forbids stating them all, but some of the important features, briefly stated, are as follows: First, a serially numbered certificate tag to be issued each nurseryman by his state entomologist, said nurseryman to account for each of these numbered tags by duplicate invoice, without price, to be mailed his state entomologist, said duplicate invoice to show the number of the tag used on that particular shipment and to be mailed to the entomologist promptly after shipment is made. Second, a nurseryman doing business beyond the borders of his own state must secure from each and every state in which he operates a serially numbered permit tag, which must be attached to each shipment destined to the state issuing same, and a duplicate invoice, without price, showing number of the permit tag used must be mailed promptly to the entomologist issuing the permit tag. Think for a moment just what this will mean to the large agency nurserymen and mail order firms in this country, many of whom are doing business in practically every state in the union. Third, all shipments of nursery stock shall not only be inspected at the nursery before shipping, but they must also be again inspected by a competent inspector after shipment and before planting.

The Nurserymen's Viewpoint.

The nurserymen present tried to convey their feeling over this provision, that it was utterly impractical and impossible of carrying out, pointing out the fact that in the cotton states alone there are probably 600,000 to 1,000,000 orders filled annually and the utter impossibility of inspecting "after shipment and before planting" even one-tenth of these orders. The nurserymen asked that the entomologists earnestly attempt to work out some plan whereby one inspection tag will carry a shipment anywhere in the United States. This suggestion was taken under advisement and a second conference was called by the entomologists to meet in Atlanta in May. At this second conference twenty-one nurserymen were present.

The entomologists reported that they had not been able to evolve a plan as suggested at the first conference and again submitted the "ideal standard" without change or modification and it was discussed fully and frankly, section by section. We could not get together. Some concessions were made by the entomologists, the most important one being the elimination of a section which provided that "all shipments of nursery stock coming into a state should be routed by receiving stations for inspection and forwarding to destination."

The serially numbered permit tag is now in use by four of the citrus-growing states, and you who ship into Florida, Mississippi, Louisiana and South Carolina are familiar with the duplicate invoice required under these permit tags. Conditions in the citrus states are difficult and entirely different than in other sections of this country, and the nurserymen feel that the use of this serially numbered tag should be confined to the citrus states. The entomologists want this plan adopted by all the states and a serially numbered certificate tag as well.

Therefore, I suggest that you large operators who are doing business in thirty or forty states should look to the future carefully and do everything that you possibly can to avoid overproduction, in order that you may keep your prices at a reasonable point, so that you can build a wing or add an extra story to your office or house, and have funds to pay the additional force necessary to comply with these "ideal rules and regulations" when universally adopted. Cheer up.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

LOCATING A BOILER.

I can place a boiler either in the southwest corner of my greenhouse or in the northwest. To my mind the northwest location is the better, because our blizzards and cold winds strike at that point, and these would blow the heat over the house. Is my conclusion right? C. A. S.—Va.

The writer agrees with you as to the location you consider best, but not for the reason that you mention. In locating a greenhouse boiler no attention is paid to the direction of the cold winds, so far as securing a circulation of the heat in the house is concerned. Really, except when a flue or stove is used, the boilers are intentionally cut off from the greenhouse proper as much as possible, and little direct heat is obtained from them.

One reason for locating the boiler at the northwest corner of the house is that the chimney and whatever may be provided as a boiler or work room will not shade the greenhouse nearly so much as if it were built at the southwest corner of the house.

If the boiler, chimney and service rooms are built at the northwest corner of the house, they will act as a sort of windbreak and make considerable difference in the amount of coal required during the winter.

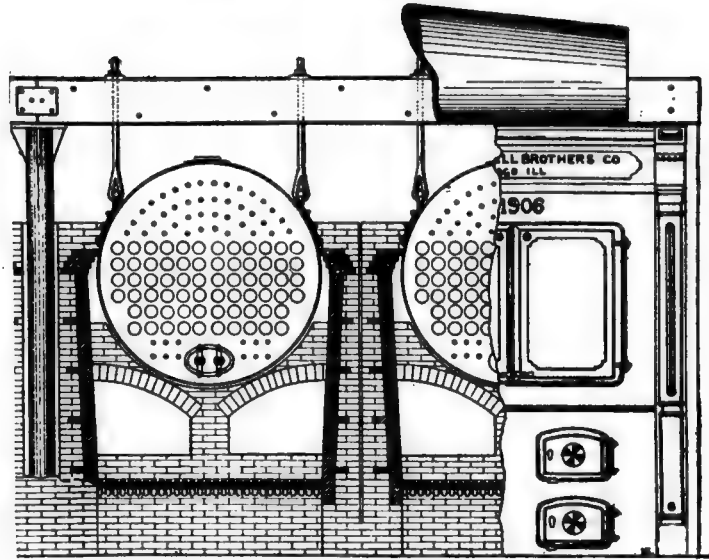

HEAT FOR TWO HOUSES.

I have two houses. One is 14x40; it is four and one-half feet high to the gutter, with twenty-four inches of glass in the east wall, and is fourteen feet high to the ridge. The other house is of the same dimensions and the houses are connected. They run north and south, the head house being to the north. There is glass only on the east side of the houses. Will you advise as to the proper hot water arrangement to heat to 45 to 55 degrees when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero? L. J. S.—Pa.

To heat the two houses, a boiler rated at about 800 square feet of hot water radiation should be used. This will have a grate about twenty-four inches in diameter, and it will require a 9-inch smoke pipe. Although a smaller chimney would answer, it would be advisable to use one that is twelve inches in diameter. If built of brick it may be 8x12 inches inside, but it will be more satisfactory if it is 12x12 inches. A height of thirty feet, or a little more if surrounded by high buildings, will be satisfactory.

To heat the houses, use three 2-inch overhead flow pipes, locating one on each side wall plate and the other two feet below the ridge. With each flow pipe, supply a coil of two 1½-inch return pipes, with one extra return in the coil on the east side of the house, having glass in the side wall.

Run the flow pipes downhill, and connect the highest point in each flow pipe with the expansion tank, which should be at least two feet higher.

BOILER'S CAPACITY.

I have a Kroeschell boiler. It has a fire box thirty inches wide and forty-eight inches long. It has fourteen 3-inch flues and is tapped for two 4-inch flows and returns. It has a 14-inch smoke pipe. What is the capacity of this boiler and how large an area of glass will it heat when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero? I have one house, 20x50, but intend to build another one, 25x75 feet.

G. W. L.—Pa.

A Kroeschell boiler of the size described will easily supply from fifty to 100 per cent more radiation than the two houses will require, according to the kind of coal used and the skill of the fireman.

To heat the new house, it would be advisable to use three 2½-inch flow pipes, placing one on each side-wall plate and the other two feet below the ridge. For the returns use either eleven 2-inch or thirteen 1½-inch pipes, with four of the former and five of the latter on the walls or under the side benches, and the other three under the middle benches.

If the flow pipes run downhill and the expansion tank is connected with the highest point in the main 4-inch supply pipe leading to this house, no air valves will be required.

SYSTEM FOR SMALL HOUSE.

I am building a small greenhouse, 10x25. It will have three feet of concrete wall, with two feet of glass above the eaves. Is there a small heating system on the market suitable for such a house; one that will give a winter temperature suitable for pot plants and flowers for cutting? I know one man who used an ordinary hard coal heater for such a house, but I do not know just what results he secured. Is the Arcola all right? L. C. R.—O.

To heat the above-described house to 60 degrees in zero weather, about 160 square feet of radiation will be required, but it would be advisable to use a hot water boiler rated at about 250 square feet of radiation. Nearly all of the manufacturers of hot water boilers have them of about this size. The Arcola, manufactured by the American Radiator Co., is an excellent boiler for small houses.

To heat the house, it would be advisable to run one 2½-inch flow pipe under the ridge to the farther end of the house and connect it with two coils, each containing four 1½-inch returns running from either side of the door in the end of the house and along the side walls back to the boiler end of the house. Use a 2-inch pipe to connect each of the coils with the main 2½-inch returns.

While a coal stove may be used for heating a small greenhouse, it is not so satisfactory as a hot water system. The gas from the stove may kill the plants.

HEATING ADJOINING HOUSES.

Each of my two greenhouses is 15x60 feet. The houses are built side by side and adjoining, as shown in the sketch I have sent you. The side walls are four feet high, of solid concrete; the ridge is about nine feet from the ground. The boiler room is at the north side, and the greenhouses run north and south. The temperature desired is 50 to 60 degrees, when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero. What size of hot water boiler will be required to heat the houses? Will you advise as to the number of returns to use, the arrangement of the piping, etc.? Is it advisable to have the boiler in a pit lower than the return pipes or is it well to have the return pipes enter the boiler on a level? H. J. S.—Ill.

To heat the two houses to 60 degrees, a boiler rated at about 1,200 square feet of radiation will be required. While it will vary somewhat in boilers of different styles, this will generally mean that the grate will be about twenty-six inches in diameter.

For radiation it would be advisable to use two 2½-inch flow pipes for each house, placing one on each side wall plate and giving it a fall of about one inch in fifteen feet away from the boiler. Each house will require seven 2-inch returns, of which four should be in the coil along the exposed wall and three on the opposite side of the house. If return pipes are desired under the middle benches, use three 2-inch flows and seven returns in each house, placing the third flow under the ridge and using three returns on the outside walls and two in each of the other coils. Connect the expansion tank with the highest point in the main flow pipe.

The boiler should be as much below the returns as possible. While fairly good results may be expected when the lowest part of the returns is brought back to the boiler a foot or two above the grate, it will be much better if the returns are above the top of the boiler and, if they can be several feet higher, the circulation will be all the better.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

Business was exceedingly quiet last week. Had it not been for a number of funerals, the trade here would have had a good rest. Stock of all kinds is plentiful.

The Flick Floral Co. reports business as just fair. This firm is starting a branch store in the West Washington street market; it will be known as the Posie Flower Shop. Vacations are in order in this place at the present time. Miss Alice Flick is spending a couple of weeks at Cincinnati and Dayton, O. Miss Nell Dexter expects to leave in a few days for a couple of weeks.

Samuel Hudson, formerly with W. J. & M. S. Vesey as an orchid grower and now on a private estate at Columbus, O., was a visitor here last week. All his old friends were glad to see him.

J. N. Stokke, of the Riverside Greenhouses, Muncie, Ind., and C. M. Fletcher, Wakarusa, Ind., were visitors to the different florists' establishments here last week.

Miss Clara Bell, formerly with the Flick Floral Co., will soon return to Fort Wayne to enter florists' circles again.

Fire destroyed a barn in the rear of a greenhouse of W. J. & M. S. Vesey, at 2602 Thompson avenue, last week. The barn was a 1-story structure. The damage is estimated at $1,000. The fire was believed to be of incendiary origin.

F. C. Gloeckner, of the Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, visited the city last week. S. N.

NEWARK, N. J.

Newark florists just "keep going." There is more or less funeral work, an occasional wedding and a little transient trade. All look for good business when the new season opens.

The Rosery Floral Co. reports business as exceedingly good for the summer season. R. B. M.

Sunbury, Pa.—July 4 there was a big parade here and the float of B. Hatten Bastian, decorated with cut flowers, ferns and plants, made a big impression.

When Mr. Kohout's grandchildren's grandchildren are toddling about, this house will still be "going strong."

Joseph Kohout Orders Still Another House

Talk is cheap.

But seeing is believing.

Joseph Kohout of Libertyville, Ill., thought he was buying the right house at the right price when we sold him a Number Two Construction 40x500.

Now he knows it.

Just so surely did he know it, that when the house was about completed, he called our Chicago Office up on the phone and said: "Come right out here at once. Bring along your contract blanks. I want another of those houses 40x500."

Now those of you who know Mr. Kohout, know that he is no dreamer.

You know that he never does anything on the impulse of the moment.

He knows exactly where he is going to land, before he starts—not afterwards.

On the other hand, he is quick to see the worth in anything that has worth.

A letter from Mr. Kohout.

The building which you lately finished for me is entirely satisfactory. The house is planted and I am already convinced of the advantages that such a house as you build offers.

I watched the building very closely and I was pleased with the way your workmen tried so hard to do everything in a way that shows that you desire above all to render perfect service. Right construction and not only speed was the thing they tried to attain. Your superintendent, Mr. Blain, came out several times and watched the work very closely. He seemed to be very anxious to please.

I was so pleased with your work that I have ordered another house like the one you just finished. You can count on me as a Lord & Burnham Booster.

Joseph Kohout

He neither underestimates, nor overestimates it.

He has kind of an almost uncanny way of sizing a thing up, at its exact size.

Because of these traits in the man, don't know when we have had a repeat order that has pleased us quite as much. When a man like he phones in an order for a house 40x500 before the paint is dry on his other, there is a reason.

And you know exactly what that reason is.

It is satisfaction. Complete satisfaction.

This new house is an exact duplicate of his other, only that the sides will be a foot higher.

We recently mailed every florist and grower in the United States and Canada a special circular fully describing the Number Two Construction.

If yours, by any chance, didn't reach you, let us know at once and we will promptly send another.
